Howard enters $4.4M project
Medical school supports scholarship fund for students

By Lauren Cooper

Howard University president Professor John E. F. F. Thompson has sent a letter to Professor Gabriel P. L. Hill, dean of the Howard Medical School, announcing that the Howard University Foundation (HUF) has received a gift of $50 thousand from the Prudential Insurance Company.

Prudential's gift is one of four million dollars that the company has promised to use in support of Howard's medical school. The funds will be used to create scholarships for students.

Dr. Russell G. H. Johnson, the University's chief of the Office of Security, has stated that the gift is a "significant opportunity to increase the number of minority doctors." He added that the gift will also provide "an identifiable future" for minority medicine.

The gift is part of a larger investment program that the University has launched in order to increase the number of minority doctors. The program is funded through a partnership between Howard University and the Prudential Insurance Company.

The investment program is in addition to the $6 thousand of that amount earned through investments available to students in terms of returns on the money that they have invested. Dr. David Satcher, president of the Howard University Medical College, has stated that the investment will "allow the opportunity to continue a 45 year effort of black medical schools." He added that the investment will also "provide an identifiable future" for minority medicine.

The investment program is to increase the number of minority doctors. Prudential has linked to eight area black medical schools. Prudential, and four predominately black medical schools are the three other contributing institutions.

Library status unknown

By Stefan LaCoe

A decision is still pending as to whether Howard will join the consortia of Washington area universities as a participant in the $21 million consortium. The university is part of the Public Library of Washington, D.C., and will participate in the $3 million library.

The consortium's purpose is to provide a computerized listing of another library's holdings in a single database. The consortium's goal is to provide a list of the holdings of all participating libraries in the Washington area.

Frazier speaks at H.U.

By Eric Smith

Hilltop Staff Reporter

Frazier, a former basketball star at Howard University, recently addressed students and faculty of the university about the importance of organizational skills at the college level. "We have to try and maintain a balance," he said. "It's not to the point where he felt must fine-tune their own par-ticular higher order thinking skills..." Frazier said.

But at the close of four years, agonize over it, trying to follow the right road isn't easy. He had not fully met the requirements in four years. Data from the Office of the Registrar indicates that students who entered the university in 1983 took an average of 4.7 years to graduate. The right road isn't always the shortest path to success.

As a basketball player, Frazier had not quite the right road. The right road isn't always the shortest path to success.

At the corner of 6th NW for 18 years, Frazier has been to turnout in big numbers. He is always present. McGlaughlin is a master at vending. He is currently working on a book about the Kinks' 1970 tour in America.

Doctoral program accredited
The Graduate School of Arts and Sciences Administration Report.

The American Psychological Association awarded full accreditation for a three-year period to the doctoral program in Clinical Psychology.

The decision was made during the May 26-21, 1987 meeting and was based on a review of the program's application during 1986-87. A report from the team that reviewed the program on April 30 will be sent to the graduate school president's office as a basis for the decision.

The Association complemented the program for its vigorous selection, strong focus of development, evidence of commitment to high quality and investment in the training program. Credit was also extended to the comprehensive nature of the curriculum with adequate integration of practice and theory introduced early in the program.

Faculty members and students have gained national recognition for their contributions to the field of psychology.

Yearly recruitment approaches
The Graduate School of Arts and Sciences will host its second Annual Recruitment Day for Students in Science and Engineering Friday, October 21. The event will allow students to meet with faculty members from the college's departments.

The morning session will begin with a keynote address by Dr. Howard W. Blackburn, president of the University of Miami, College of Education, in the hall of science, at 9 a.m. The afternoon session will consist of visits to the departments of science and engineering.

The Graduate School of Arts and Sciences Department of Psychology will hold its first annual Professional Psychology Symposium on Saturday, October 22.

The symposium will feature presentations by faculty members and students from the University of Miami, University of Florida, and Howard University.

Liberal arts and graduate degrees will be available in a variety of fields.

Physical Education expands
The Physical Education and Recreation Department is in the process of expanding its offerings to provide a more comprehensive program. It is expected to appeal to many students that have yet to decide on a major or a minor.

The program includes courses in athletic training, exercise science, and physical education.

Faculty members and students have gained national recognition for their contributions to the field of physical education.

The new Physical Education and Recreation Department is part of the comprehensive education program at the University.

Barnes receives science award

Barnes, a student at Howard University, brought together university and college presidents and leaders and prominent staff members.

One of the goals of the conference was to educate Black children about basic science, technology, and computers.

Sponsored by the White House Initiative for Science and Technology, the Conference received positive feedback.

The Howard Institute is America's only black-owned and black-operated full-service hotel.

by Edna D. O'Brien

Barnes, a native Washingtonian, attended Howard's prestigious School of Engineering and attended the University's School of Science and Engineering.

The conference included talks by Howard's staff, Howard's alums, and prominent figures in the field.

The conference, which was held from Oct. 19 to 21, 1987, featured a variety of speakers from around the country.

A tax proposal cuts college funds

A proposed tax on endowments would be a "serious blow to academic advance," according to the report of the American Council on Education. In 1986, 1,500 of the nation's 1,700 private colleges and universities surveyed by the American Council on Education (ACE) said they would consider the tax a "serious blow" to their ability to do what they do. The ACE said that if the tax was implemented, 70% of the nation's colleges and universities would face a serious financial setback.

Welcome college conference

Welcome to the more than 2,000 people who are attending on November 10th, 1987, the National Black Student Union Conference for Empowerment in the 21st Century. The National Black Student Union Congress (NBSUC) and the Howard University Student Association (HUSA) could not be more thrilled to be the hosts for this gathering. It is a privilege to bring this conference to the nation's capitol.

As the NBSUC manifesto implies, a greater impetus must be given to the ideological and cultural work that must be done in order to bring about the black liberation. This is the work that we are committed to and the work that we are doing.

We are here to empower black students to take control of their educational futures.

Involved need to solve crimes

Nationally, the call for people to get involved has been heard. But there is an underlying sense of despair among the black community.

We must take action before it's too late.

Committee didn't use resources

It is a shame that a prestigious school like Howard University doesn't have enough money for articles such as North Hudson and Dollar. The university needs to get its finances in order so that it can not only have one homogeneous collection. Upon hearing the announcement of the article, many students and faculty felt that the name change was necessary to prevent such a drastic increase in prices, which they cannot afford, and that it will cost the institution a million dollars.

I also want to ask the publisher of the article who is the top of the charts with singles like "My Heart Is Deep" and "Angel of the Night." The authors in the 80s who have not had a hit single in years, with almost everyone not musing if it's a hit, are Moscow.

I don't really believe that as it should be in the hands of many readers who have written to us.

Howard should not have to settle for anything less than the best, and the new members, Kenya Kapsa-Pool, has connections with people like Wayne law, who has worked with the Jacksons, Williams, Aoki Baker and Howard Weir.

The fact that graduates of Howard are on the top of the charts with singles like "My Heart Is Deep" and "Angel of the Night." The authors in the 80s who have not had a hit single in years, with almost everyone not musing if it's a hit, are Moscow.

Wall Street: "only in America"

One New Yorker pulled totally out of the Dow. The other 9 out of the ten have been Howard alumns. The front of the beverage industry, statistics claim of, resulting price increases and returnable bottles replaced the 80 million to $50 million a year in waste disposal and its generation.

In fact the only difference I can detect are that you don't have to have much money or sophistication to join the market; that this market, unlike the stock market, you know you have much more you stand to lose, and that the lottery has no strings attached for competitors. One Howard student told Howard Radio News that this really means that Howard students can do a job and are prepared to face these crunchy decisions.

The truly experienced face walking from the front of the beverage industry, statistics claim of, resulting price increases and returnable bottles replaced the 80 million to $50 million a year in waste disposal and its generation.

Autumn regulars are nuisances

It's that time of year again. The leaves are falling, the weather is getting cooler, and the students are back on campus. This is the perfect time to get involved in the community and make new friends.

As a college student, I find it more than appropriate to leave the dormitory and explore the city. There are so many interesting places to visit, from the local libraries to the popular coffee shops.

However, I have noticed a disturbing trend. The regulars, who are known for their loud and boisterous behavior, seem to be taking over the city. They are often found wandering around the campus, blocking the roads and creating a nuisance for the locals.

It is important for us to respect the community and its residents. I believe that we can achieve this by being considerate and courteous to those around us.

Africa not origin of AIDS

Africa was not the origin of AIDS. According to Dr. David Schwartzman, an expert in virology, the origin of AIDS is not in Africa. The evidence supporting this claim is overwhelming.

The first cases of AIDS were reported in the United States in 1981. Since then, the disease has spread to other parts of the world, including Africa. However, Dr. Schwartzman argues that the disease was not originated in Africa.

In his book, "AIDS: The Truth Behind the Myths," Dr. Schwartzman presents a compelling case for the non-African origin of AIDS. He argues that the genetic evidence supports the theory that AIDS was transmitted from non-human primates to humans in the 1950s, not in Africa.

Furthermore, Dr. Schwartzman points out that the spread of AIDS in Africa is primarily due to the poverty and lack of access to medical care, not to the origin of the virus itself. He cites various studies that show that the prevalence of AIDS in Africa is significantly lower than in other parts of the world.

The origin of AIDS is a complex issue, and it is important to consider multiple factors before reaching a conclusion. While the precise origin of AIDS is still unknown, Dr. Schwartzman's research provides important insights into the history of the disease.

Scientists find link between alcohol, breast cancer

By Valerie A. Plummer

Hilltop Staff Reporter

The National Cancer Institute (NCI) along with many other institutions have found evidence suggesting a relationship between alcohol consumption and breast cancer.

"It is a causal study, done on a large basis, and the lack of evidence is not conclusive enough," said Dr. Schottenfeld.

The study was administered in the same manner as a typical survey, except that the participants were given the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) questionnaire. The NHANES questionnaire is a standard survey used by the National Cancer Institute (NCI) and other health organizations to collect information on health-related behaviors and characteristics of the U.S. population.

The survey showed that the risk of breast cancer in women who had ever been treated for breast cancer was 70% higher than the risk of breast cancer in women who had never been treated for breast cancer. The study also found that women who consumed more alcohol were more likely to develop breast cancer.

Researchers found that the risk of breast cancer in women who consumed more than 75% of their calories from red meats was 60% higher than the risk of breast cancer in women who consumed less than 75% of their calories from red meats.

The breast cancer risk was highest in women who had never smoked cigarettes, lowest in women who smoked cigarettes, and intermediate in women who consumed a diet rich in fruits, vegetables, and whole grains.

"If one of the study's major findings is that ever drinking alcohol is associated with a higher risk of breast cancer, it would seem to suggest that alcohol intake should be limited," said Dr. Schottenfeld.

The study found that women who consumed less than 1 drink per week had a 1.5 times higher risk of breast cancer than women who consumed 1 or more drinks per week.

The study also found that women who consumed more than 75% of their calories from red meats were more likely to develop breast cancer than women who consumed less than 75% of their calories from red meats.

Bison down Trojans, 56-14
By Zachery P. Buggs
Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

The Bison received almost every break imaginable as they held Victory in every facet of the game.

Sophomore tailback, Fred Kilgore, who filled in for the injured Tony Mack, rushed for 102 yards and two touchdowns. "The Bison played without their entire backfield, and they were still able to muster 36 total yards. This is what we expected," said Kilgore.

Even though the Bison played without quarterback Lee (yellow-pulled groin), Tailback Harvey Bondy, and Bison quarterback John Javis, who filled in for the injured Tony Mack, rushed for 102 yards and two touchdowns, they were still able to improve their record to 4-1 overall.

Sophomore John Javis was exceptional as he rushed for 102 yards and two touchdowns.

"Our offensive line did such a good job of blocking and we were able to score one on a quarterback sneak," said Kilgore.

"They were said about the loss, but I also said we could bounce back and win this game, or at least win the last game, and now the next one. We're going to prove it's on us to win this game. We're going to prove we're not going to lose this game."

For nearly 70 years we’ve been helping educators like you plan comfortable retirements. But it’s our SRAs that give you the extra income to really get the most out of life.

Available to the education community only, supplement Retirement Annuities reduce your reportable income, so you get immediate tax savings. Contributions and earnings are fully tax-deferred until you receive them when you retire.

You can choose an SRA from TIAA or only from CREF. Or you can have both, in any combination you like.

Whichever combination you choose you’ll have the benefit of payment to you directly or all of your funds in lump sum, fixed-period payments, or lifetime income.

SRAs from TIAA/CREF. They’ll help you get the most out of school. And the most out of life.

Leaving school can really pay off.
