University Withdraws Campus Street Privatization Proposal

By YaTashia Coates

Howard's controversial bid to privatize several streets on its campus came to an abrupt—possibly temporary—halt on Monday when Mayor Marion Barry withdrew Howard's proposal.

Vice President for Administration Harry Robinson, whose office oversees the proposal, requested the removal Monday, saying, "I don't want to go back to the City Council with someone opposing this." Robinson said.

Howard has met with residents and student leaders over the issue. In July, Advisory Neighborhood Commission 16 voted unanimously to oppose Howard's effort to privatize the streets. Two weeks ago, the student Central Assembly also voted to oppose the measure. Community members said they were opposed to Howard's plan to privatize several streets on campus.

"I don't want to go back to the City Council with someone opposing this," Robinson said.

Mary Rhodes Hoover teaches the only African-American Language and Literacy course offered at the University or any other historically Black college or university. With only five students seated in her School of Education classroom, Hoover hopes to teach not only current college students, but also future educators.

"If you go long enough from the scene, there will be Black people," said Hoover, chatting in a circle of graduate students. "We want to study how we can become the kind of teachers that can make a difference."

A former dean in the School of Education, Hoover received her master's degree in English language education from Stanford University, where Black English was studied extensively. Due to her experience in language and literacy programs within the University and as a language consultant in Oakland when the school board proposed Ebonics programs, Hoover has been called on to design such initiatives.

Inspired by her former Howard professor, Sterling Brown, Hoover now returns to Howard to determine information she forth in Black Education. "I want the children to get is Public Ebonics."

In a room lined with shelves of texts and journals on Black education and literacy, Hoover discusses the differences between standard English and Black English. Having classified Ebonics into public and private sectors of the English language, Hoover said it possesses a race and a type of African Americans.

Public Ebonics is approved in all domains," Hoover said. "Ebonics is only as good as the person who uses it. Do we want students to study it?"

The cultural aspect is what Hoover said Ebonics becomes an accepted form of communication. "I couldn't get mother to talk about Black English," she said. "But learning how to use it is an exposure, she said."

I've always thought students should be taught Standard English," Hoover said. "We can keep aspects of the phrasing. What we want the students to teach is Public Ebonics."

A (P) survey conducted by Hoover showed that out of 40 Black parent interviews, the majority approved of Ebonics in informal situations but not in public settings. However, Hoover pointed out that parents as well as children understand the problems concerning literacy among Blacks.

"That is a significant literacy issue among African Americans," Hoover said. "That's what I understood the language students with high-"
HU Students ‘Get On The Bus’

White students Pressey went to the library of black students to retrieve her storage, which was damaged or lost. She was very disappointed when she did not receive any help in getting her belongings back. "I was missing class, waiting on the phone calls only to have the boxes already at my dorm," she said.

Some students are worried about the University’s security policy, especially after the recent incidents of damaged or lost storage. "Literally everyday, I hear about this problem," said Tshilumha Ngandu, a sophomore chemical engineering major.

"We encourage students not to pack their belongings too tightly and to make sure they are properly handled," said Brian Williams, a junior business management major. "We give scholarships based on need and merit. Scholarships are never awarded based on skin color," he said.

Although there are no plans to try to increase the number of White students on campus, University officials say that they try to provide the best possible service. "We want the students to consider the University a normal part of their lives," said Artid. "So all students, let’s use the students’ bus and ride it regularly."

Speak Out! Speak Out! Speak Out!

Met with threats, intimidation and violent attacks, nine African-American teenagers known as "The Little Rock Nine," were escorted by troops into Central High School in Little Rock, Ark.

The 1957 event proved to be the foundation for integration in educational institutions. Sept. 25 marked the 40th anniversary of this historic event. The Hilltop asked students how desegregation has affected the nation.

"Segregation was an institution that was set up to degrade the African-American community. But we set as our goal to break down the barriers with which we were faced. Through unity, integrity and education, we have persevered through life."

— Andre Samuels, junior legal communications major.

"The Little Rock Nine" has positively affected us because it has given us the ability to learn quickly and be successful in every field. It has made us able to compete with out our white counterparts. The nine students being let into the school kind of set the ball rolling."

— Kerysh Walker, junior business management major.

"For African Americans, segregation has made us look at ourselves, and as people, realize time we have to help a section of our community succeed in this country. People look at it (segregation) just as a bad thing for competing God's children, but for every bad there's a good."

— Kimberly Adderty, sophomore Radio-TV-Film major.

"It motivates African-Americans students and allows us to appreciate education. Because of the fact that our fathers were held back from achieving their goals."

— Anika Richards, freshman biology major.

Bison Lose To FAMU

BISON FROM 41 YEARS AGO

"The worst day we've played all season," said Howard head coach Mike Johnson.

The Bison lost to FAMU, 17-7, on Saturday at Cellucci Stadium in Tallahassee.

The Bison scored their only points of the game on a 36-yard field goal by Adam Brace on the first play of the second quarter. The Raymond accounted for FAMU's touchdowns in the fourth quarter, when they scored 10 points.

The Bison had a chance to tie the game in the final seconds of the game, but they were unable to convert a fourth-down pass attempt. The Bison have now lost six consecutive games, and 17 of their last 18.

"We knew we had to play well on defense and we did," said Howard head coach Mike Johnson.

"They looked really good. They have a good defense and they played well."

Roundtable Discussion With Provost Garibaldi

PROVOST: How will the IBD program and the community improvement program be funded?

PROVOST: We will get some money from the state, but we also have to look to the community, which has been very committed to helping out with the funding. They have given us a lot of support in terms of getting grants and donations. The community has been very active and has contributed a lot to the funding of the program.

PROVOST: In addition to the state funding, we are also looking for support from the federal government and private organizations. We have also established a fundraising committee to help raise the necessary funds.

PROVOST: We are also working with local businesses and community organizations to provide support for the program. The community has been very supportive, and we are confident that we will be able to secure the necessary funds to make the program a success.

WASHINGTONIANS PARTICIPATE IN FOURTH ANNUAL WALK, BIKE-ATHON TO RAISE MONEY FOR SICKLE CELL

By Patsy Heaton

Washingtonians woke up Monday at 7:30 a.m. barefoot, joggers and bikers gathered at four locations in the District of Columbia, to start the District's 4th Annual Walk, Bike-Athon to raise money for the Sickle Cell Association.

Sickle cell disease is a genetic disorder that results in the formation of abnormal red blood cells, which then clog blood vessels. The disease affects about 1 in 363 African Americans and about 1 in 12,000 people overall.

Sickle cell disease can cause a range of health problems, including pain crises, infections, and organ damage. In severe cases, it can be life-threatening.

When people participate in this event, they are helping to fund research and support the community.

Paw Shop Shoppers Often Lead Police to Stolen Goods

By Cy正on Jackson III

A man of paw shops, shoes, with lion's mane that glitters through the sun, we can see him now, the paw shop keeper. He's the one who brings us our clothes, our toys, our shoes. He's the one who makes sure we have what we need.

This was the story told by Cy 正on Jackson III, the paw shop keeper. He said, "Paw shops are a way of life, and we must not lose them."

The police have only claimed in their property items from his paw shop. The state has not taken any action.

The paw shop keeper was speaking on the issue of "Paw Shop Shoppers Often Lead Police to Stolen Goods," a topic of great interest to all who love dogs.

C-SPAN Buys Jazz 90

By D. Texas Jackson III

After dropping off the radio station was sold to CNN for $113 million, devoted listeners, radio proprietors, and sponsors, came together at the University of the District of Columbia and told stories of how WDCU-FM, Jazz, and 90 was formed.

This has been an issue, and we all know it. When we think about a radio station, we think of the music and the stories. It's more than just sound.

Bob Smith, who works at CNN, said, "It's more than just sound. It's a way of life."

Local Students Attend Eddie Bauer Trial

Parkdale High School students expressed concern for fellow student Joyce Parker-Plummer on Friday, October 3, 1997. The school was in session and classes were being held. Joyce Parker-Plummer was approached by the security guard in the school hallway. She was approached by a 17-year-old student and told to take off her shirt. Joyce Parker-Plummer was the victim of a hate crime.

"We are discriminated against all the time, but we never say nothing -- that needs to change," said Mike Nwasawga, Parkdale High School senior. "We should have a right to be treated equally and not be discriminated against." Joyce Parker-Plummer was approached by the security guard in the school hallway. She was approached by a 17-year-old student and told to take off her shirt. Joyce Parker-Plummer was the victim of a hate crime.

The Swiss Supreme Court ruled on March 5 that the money should be returned, but this has not yet been accomplished in practice.

According to reports, the Swiss government gave Moïse an order of the president concerning the world, to copies to pay for legal assistance in its case.

Conservatives Have Their Way With Garvey

The D.C. Board of Education is on the hot seat. How ironic. With little power, if any, the board is proposed to regulate the operation of the Marcus Garvey Public Charter School in light of the recent conflict of its administrators.

With its history of scandals, nepotism and, on occasion, extreme views, the school board has been a target for criticism. However, with the recent controversy surrounding the school, it may be time to ask whether this board can adequately oversee the school.

The board's decision to shut down the school, which is operated under the auspices of the Marcus Garvey Public Charter, is met with concern from the school's supporters. The school is cited for alleged moral and educational deficiencies, but the board's decision is seen as an attempt to silence its critics.

Our View:
The school board's decision is a thinly veiled attempt to appease rightist sentiments controlling D.C.

Democracy Of The Dollar

A recent decision by the D.C. Board of Education is a clear violation of the principles of democracy. The board's action is a thinly veiled attempt to appease rightist sentiments controlling D.C.

Marcus Garvey's board of trustees stood firm in its mission, school board officials have decided to follow the current controversy surrounding Garvey's principal, Mary A. Argo, and her staff. The board's decision to shut down the school is met with concern from the school's supporters.

In less than 30 minutes, Judge Cheryl Blackburn denied Marion Luther King, Jr.'s postponed assas­sination trial for James Earl Ray, a verdict that resolved the long-running campaign of King's assassination. The court ruled that there were no grounds for granting a new trial.

Ray's attorney Michael Rebell had argued that new evidence had emerged since the original trial in 1969, including the discovery of a tape recording that purported to show King's voice on a voicemail. However, the judge rejected these claims, stating that the new evidence was not sufficiently compelling to warrant a new trial.

The ruling was seen as a victory for the families of both King and Ray, who had been at odds over the case for decades. King's family had long sought to clear his name, while Ray's family had pushed for the execution of the convicted murderer.

The case of James Earl Ray, who died in 1998, has been a symbol of racial injustice and the struggle for justice. The ruling in the case of his death is seen as a step forward in the ongoing pursuit of truth and reconciliation.

A Veteran Celebrates Career with Historical Exhibit At Blackburn

By Brandi Foster

Hilltop Staff Writer

Frank Frazier is known as "The Black Michelangelo," a moniker that has stuck with him through the years as he continues to create new and exciting art. His journey began in the late 1960s when he was exposed to the Black Arts Movement and its emphasis on social justice and artistic expression. Frazier's work is characterized by its focus on African-American culture and history, and he has become known for his ability to capture the essence of the Black experience in his art.

In his latest exhibit, "36 Year Retrospective," Frazier showcases a range of his work from the 1960s to the present day. The exhibit is open to the public from now through October 7 at the Blackburn Center for the Arts and Humanities. The exhibit is free and open to the public, and visitors are encouraged to come and see the work of this talented artist.

Frazier's work is known for its ability to tell stories and convey messages about the African-American experience. His pieces often feature vibrant colors and dynamic compositions, creating a visual representation of the rich history and culture of the African-American community. The exhibit is not only a celebration of Frazier's career, but also a testament to the power of art to inspire and educate.

The Hilltop Student Staff is excited to host this exhibit and encourage all members of the community to come and see the work of this talented artist.

New Film Focuses On Black Issues

Family Dishes Love, Joy In ‘Soul Food’

By T. D. Hall

911: The Bison Football Team Needs Help

By KIMBERLY WHEATON

Sports Editor

There was no question the Bison had a golden ticket to the National Black College Football Bowl with the season's first victory over South Carolina State. It was a great game. But there was a lot of work to do before the next game... and the team that has in its place is in critical condition. Will someone please call the paramedics before this game is over?

We are four weeks into football season and the teams are stacked up and ready to roll. Howard University was on the run and we all expected to win the game with the unbeaten Rams of Florida A&M University.

This is not about Howard's upset season, it's about Howard's season, it's about Howard's season, it's about Florida A&M's football team and the team that is in its place is in critical condition. There is something wrong with the team that is in its place. It's in critical condition. Will someone please call the paramedics before this game is over?

There are many problems with the team that is in its place. They are losing people to injury. They are losing people to injury. They are losing people to injury. There are many people who were supposed to be on the team that is in its place but were not. There is something wrong with the team that is in its place. It's in critical condition. Will someone please call the paramedics before this game is over?

The game room is open to both Howard and FAMU. Howard has the tuba player doesn't come out to play. FAMU has been able to close the gap to 10-0. Howard will need to get the point at the end of the game. The Bison will need to find a way to put the ball in the end zone.

The team that is in its place is in critical condition. Will someone please call the paramedics before this game is over?
Booters Matchup Against Textiles Ends In Scoreless Double-overtime

By DEREK S. EDWARDS
Assistant Writer

Coping off a stifling victory against George Washington University, the Howard Bowers played a formidable intramural opponent against Philadelphia Textiles.

"We had our opportunities, they just made ours out of them," said assistant coach Curtis Landy. "We managed to score on the penalty kicks.

Buffalo had 33. Howard continued 10.

Leading 21-17. One advantage the Howard Bowers played 38.00Jm had that they did not play many penalties called as legs did with 33. Howard's coach was unable to get the home team to take a win.

"Replied back, but as you know, it's our game," Landy said. "Kofi Boxhill played an excellent game as goalkeeper.
