Because of an unexpected tie, a run-off election is scheduled today to decide the presidency of the senior class. The candidates for the office are Darryl Dyer and Lovell Harris.

Powell excites crowd with Black rhetoric

Harlem Representative Adam Clayton Powell cautioned the audience in Cramton Auditorium, "You can't accept money from Charlie unless you dance to Charlie's tune." Rep. Powell was the guest of Project Awareness.
HUSA NOTES

Financial matters dominated the agenda of last week's HUSA meeting. A resolution by Kappa Sigma Debaters Society was among those debated. The group requested a contribution towards its goal of $80,000. A spokesman explained that the money would enable the group to participate in out-of-state contests, host a campus tournament, and conduct research in future topics. The group passed its resolution with $2,000 for its activities.

Senator McCarty reported that the group's traveling expenses amount to $25. The group consists of students, faculty, and administrators from the Medical, Dental, and Graduate Schools. A.L. Anderson, HUSA Cultural Council Chairman, reported that the group received funds for the sale of tickets for the "Taber" concert. At an earlier meeting, the Senate approved an SGA resolution seeking to send students to the University to participate in the rally. This request was tabled.

Ron Anderson, HUSA Cultural Council Chairman, reported that HUSA allocate $1,000 to students to attend the American Cultural Congress in Texas, the largest event of any kind involving African-American students. The allocation would be used for supplies for an upcoming performance of "Taber." This request was tabled.

More than half of the students at Howard University are African-American, and many are concerned about racial equality. The group's allocation of funds is an attempt to foster unity among the students. The allocation was discussed by the Senate.

African student leader reveals cultural shock

By Gene Durl

Secretary General of the Pan-African Congress in the Americas, a recent interview, Achebe briefly explained the impact of the racial and cultural differences between the Africans and expatriates and explained the goals of the Association.

In explaining the goals of the Association, he said that these were: "Trying to promote Pan-Africanism, accelerate the movement of the Africans, the Afro-Americans, the African-Americans, and the African-Americans of the world!" This has been done through presentations presented on Howard's Campus by the African Americans and through the Howard University Student Association. Achebe also attended some of the ASA meetings, making the community aware of the current situation.

When questioned about the African students feelings on the campus he answered: "Our campus range through disharmony, apathy and frustration." This statement reflects the fact that the first cultural shock the Africans receive on their arrival to the USA is the average African leaving home for the USA whereas the same is often misconstrued for weakness. As a result, they are also amused at the U.S. education system. The Africans think their culture is more superior because of the African norms and values in Africa. In America, he said, they felt frustrated by the presence of the cultural differences.

Achebe also mentioned about what is meant by frustration he explained that the African students feel frustrated by the presence of cultural differences. "Frustrations with dating due to cultural differences, lack of best methods to apply in doing the task, and lack of best methods to apply in doing the task. The average African girl from Africa is not sure of the behavior of the African boys towards the American girls. The answer is that there is a great deal of uncertainty to the African boys towards the American girls."

According to Achebe, when questioned concerning the way in which the Afro-Americans are trying to identify with the Africans, he said, "The struggle of the Africans is a good thing. Generally the Africans do not understand the African ways too fast. The method is quite different from the African attitudes. In America, some of the people who identify with the Africans are not serious, for some it is a fad, but a great majority understand what they are doing. Those who have their culture's Africans West Africa and now."
Sociology students take over LA office, press for demands

by Bobby Isaac

Liberal Arts students in the Sociology-Anthropology department held their fifth day in complete control of University offices in Douglass Hall. Pressing for their demands of "equal voting power" in all decision-making policy, the Sociology students took over the Sociology-Anthropology Department offices on Monday at 3 a.m. and ousted office staff including department head G. Franklin Edwards.

The students also had a number of other demands including more integration of the Sociology teaching staff, monthly evaluation of teachers, and a number of curriculum changes. The students, who have also maintained a 100 percent effective boycott of Sociology classes, vowed yesterday to keep control of the offices located on the second floor of Douglass Hall until the department responds to their demands. According to the dean of the College of Liberal Arts the Sociology department is not doing anything in the direction of granting the students the policy-making voice they seek, but not to the extent to which it has been asked. The faculty is said to be considering allowing the students 20 percent to 33-1/3 percent representation on policy boards. The Dean, after a number of meetings with both Sociology faculty and students, requested that the department submit to the university's new tentative plans for the department. The department would answer student demands as to what it makes provisions for gathering needed resources of money, personnel, and classroom space.

An announcement is expected today outlining the Sociology Department's proposals to aid in an effort to bring the office admission and class boycott to a peaceful end.

It was the Sociology department's original response to student demands which precipitated the student move against the department.

In a nine-page position paper presented to the students early this week, the department welcomed "the participation of students in the work and aim of the Department," rejected all but one of the student proposals. The accepted proposal was a new course in the 1969-70 school year on the Sociology of Crime.

Interviewed Monday morning prior to the student takeover, Edwards, the department head, explained that the department had "flattly refused" to the request for equal student voice in the operation and work of what he labeled the "tranquil nativity" of the students at the University.

A protest to the department's response to student demands in the released position paper states: "acquiring a student to equal representation on major policy matters is to invigorate a department.

New HUSA executives deplore students apathy

by Pearl Stewart

Michael Collins and Henry Smalls, the newly elected president and vice-president of the Student association, along with the four senators have made their first public statements as officers in the 1969-70 student government.

Concerning the week of campaigning, Collins and Smith both expressed their disappointments at the number of students who came out to vote, Collins viewed the voting turn-out as a manifestation of the students lack of concern. He does not, however, know the reason for student apathy, "the only people to blame," he said "are the students themselves."

The issues discussed in this year's campaign appeared to be the new president to be the real issues facing Howard. Collins viewed the major issues to be student power and involving students in the decision making processes. Smith stated that the issues brought out were those facing HUSA. Howard's issues are apparent, both officers agreed that their goals will be realized only with the help of involvement of the student body. Collins plans to have a poll taken in order to find out the priorities of the students. He said that the

Dawn of a new day

A month ago a new political group emerged on the campus scene — students taking a new direction. Last week the group known popularly as STAND won 11 of the 15 races its candidates entered giving a measure of its acceptance by the student body. STAND a broadly based group which is representative of most students on campus, has chosen to forge a new direction for student government but this purpose has been demeaned and sorely maligned by some groups on campus.

It has been asserted that a STAND led government will be a reactionary one. This is a blatant falsehood. Candidates running on the STAND ticket repeatedly announced their intentions to continue the march toward Black awareness and relevancy made by the last student governments.

Yet, at the same time they realize that too many students were overlooked and left out while these advances were made. The STAND candidates will attempt to bring a new dimension to student government full participation by all of the students on campus — a government where all points of view will be represented, a government where all Black brothers and sisters will be able to express their views on student government actions.

This is a new direction, a new direction that is long overdue. We hope that the new student government leaders will be able to keep their election pronouncements and bring representative government to Howard.

But this can only be accomplished if the student body takes a working interest in the activities of its student government.

"New direction" suggested for STAND

by Bobby Isaac

The CONSERVATIVE President Richard M. Nixon in going before Congress to present the domestic spending program for the Nation and said that America needed "a new direction."

Before the Nixon Statement had been made a group of Howard student government officials met in conference to decide a name and a position for their proposed slate. They unanimously agreed on the name STAND "Students Taking A New Direction."

For the most part the group of students were not outstanding for their militancy in the student movement on campus and the majority during the campaign were labeled "Nixon - Like Revolutionaries," by a significant number of the campus' prominent "millitants."

STAND, the Howard student officials who weathered the week of the campaign 11 were elected to student government offices. Following the election a wave of unadulterated ingestion swept over the militant scene.

The campaign, which had been characterized by a number of personal attacks of individuals against their opponents, was significant in that, to a great extent, all the candidates said the same things in pretty much the same manner. What seemed to bother the "millitants," who quickly coalesced into STONE-MILLITANTS "Students Toward Organizing Militant Pressures," was the projected quiescence of a number of STAND candidates on concepts such as "revolution" and "movement." Tactics.

Since the election last Friday a number of student observers have pointed out that the STAND students may have won the battle but may still lose the war. The STAND leaders-elect next year are to occupy student government positions here at Howard which traditionally, have been, as have other areas of student activity here, rather reflective of the University function as a whole.

Sometimes a haven of mediocrity and a nest of bureaucratic redtape, student government was subject to the internal conflict of petty personality clashes. Although working under the guise of a new constitution which declares itself "the top policy-making body governing all areas of student activities, affairs, functioning, or appointments," this year the newly elected Howard University Student Association (HUSA) has found itself doing business as usual.

Although it has attempted, as its constitution states, "to function as an effective, efficient, and responsive means of coordinating and controlling all student activities," HUSA has generally found itself a forum of confused discussion and rhetoric in both times of calm and stress.

Exposing to the HILLTOP one of the reasons leading to his break with student government, Roy Allen, former freshman class president and HUSA senator, made a few weeks ago, "My resignation was prompted by an inability to be responsible to my constituents within the framework of student government." STAND candidates have proposed "a new direction," it might be said to assume that the number of the 1425 members of the student body who voted for the candidates into office were particularly concerned with "reformulation" but it is obvious that these so-called "leaders" will be expected to carry out their commission of getting the student government and the student body and then moving against traditional-based opposition to student involvement in policymaking on the campus and its intelligent and, in some cases, stereotyped approaches; and will be expected to carry out their commission of getting the student government and the student body and then moving against traditional-minded opposition to student involvement in policymaking on the campus and its.

"New direction" for STAND. This is a blatant falsehood. There is little need for the students of Howard to be concerned the.STAND candidates have proposed "a new direction." It might be said to assume that the number of the 1425 members of the student body who voted for the candidates into office were particularly concerned with "reformulation" but it is obvious that these so-called "leaders" will be expected to carry out their commission of getting the student government and the student body and then moving against traditional-minded opposition to student involvement in policymaking on the campus and its.

In reference to a situation where student groups are mentioned this past week, only half of the Black women ("sisters") going to college will marry a college educated brother, according to the half of the 1425 members who voted for the candidates into office were particularly concerned with "reformulation" but it is obvious that these so-called "leaders" will be expected to carry out their commission of getting the student government and the student body and then moving against traditional-minded opposition to student involvement in policymaking on the campus and its.

In my opinion, contrary to that of Brother, and many others, it is not the deficiency of the women's education, as contrasted to the male's education of black men, the so-called "female dominance" of the families. I will say this cannot be due to the female's education or lack thereof, which causes black dominance in the families. It has been pointed out that only half of the Black women ("sisters") going to college will marry a college educated brother, according to the half of the 1425 members who voted for the candidates into office were particularly concerned with "reformulation" but it is obvious that these so-called "leaders" will be expected to carry out their commission of getting the student government and the student body and then moving against traditional-minded opposition to student involvement in policymaking on the campus and its.

hook: a legend in his time

dear editor,

i, a recent howard graduate, was troubled to hear some current students传说 something that hinted at a fraud of the howard community because of a draft evasion. of course i am referring to william hall.

for his college career to come to an end is truly the end of an era. "hook" was a legend in his time. he represented the side of college life. he was the personification of the most in all black youth. all of us must change old and retire to a more contemporary existence, yes, for a while here was a black peter pan with his foot in youth's door, refusing to allow it to close.

i propose that the hook bar in the student center be renamed the "hook." not to honor a student untill time immortal, it is set apart from the student center student until time immortal. it is the most youthful spirit. i propose that the student center be set apart from the student center. to be honest, this is for all howard students to declare the "hook" to be truly the center for students.

i think a special election should be held to decide this. we survive, we grow, and after much toil, a contest should be held to decide. the only poem standing up the meaning of "hook" to be hang to the "hook" as a tribute to students by students.

i feel that a college is for the benefit of its students. certainly it would not be fair to take away the personality and youthfulness of a college. it is something that must be preserved in the white wall of the quad, in the student center. it is a part of the tradition. you have created a legend in the shade of a tree on main campus. you have exposed the warm night, on the cold a-bldg. floor last spring (or even in the unlit n-s hall).

in order to save the mistakes of student government this year it is the role of mentors and others to interpret the meaning of this. because i'm sure that if you were of a sane nature you would have refrained from the use of the world "psychology" to the point of being outlived at the age of 9 years or younger.

knightly that means of power. it is a part of our spirit and soul of youth, which must eventually be set apart from the old and retire to a more contemporary existence, yes, for a while here was a black peter pan with his foot in youth's door, refusing to allow it to close.

my conclusion that you will hear from the people to join this effort. it is the role of mentors and others to interpret the meaning of this. because i'm sure that if you were of a sane nature you would have refrained from the use of the world "psychology" to the point of being outlived at the age of 9 years or younger.

dear sir:

this campus of the most significant and prestigious classes on campus can find anywhere in the country. there are many songs and other outward manifestations that help us to continue deep. most students are still in their middle 20's and may have been students to fill the hall and randi weimer, a black woman with enough guts to stand up to britain and show the world what imperialism is all about.authenticity is in all you may have been students to fill the hall and randi weimer, a black woman with enough guts to stand up to britain and show the world what imperialism is all about. these qualities are needed in our society. many students are still in their middle 20's and may have been students to fill the hall and randi weimer, a black woman with enough guts to stand up to britain and show the world what imperialism is all about.

note of thanks to the editor

i extend my thanks to all the organizations and individuals who helped me in my campaign and who came out and supported my position at the polls last week. my hopes are that all the actions and ideas voiced in the campaign will need to join together in an effort to create some action. i am truly the former position of the three students and strive toward the future of howard university.

once again i thank you and continue to support your continued, till the end way, bill cheatham

sincerely,

NIGHTMARE

I dreamed I was White, as White as snow,
Nose was keen, lips were thin, felt kinda funny
With all that creamy White skin,
Oh my God, she's beautiful, yet I can't marry her

But, oh my! What a gang of Blacks rushing upon me
A good job, a beautiful home and a White woman to call my very own
Only Negroes like that poor White trash

When you're White, don't take long to find
I dreamed I was White, as White as snow,

So let me wake up, before this Negro kills me

She has to be beautiful, with plenty of class

I was so damned happy wouldn't be Black no more

With bats and clubs they pounced upon me raining a thousand blows

Oh my God; she's beautiful, let me marry her and take her home

What's this, my house in flames? Negroes are revolting this is

So brothers and sisters, be beautiful, be Black, don't despair

I was so damned happy wouldn't be Black no more

I need now Is a pretty White woman to

I was so damned happy wouldn't be Black no more

I was so damned happy wouldn't be Black no more

With all that creamy White skin

So let me wake up, before this Negro kills me

I dreamed I was White, as White as snow,
Better season likely for Bison

The CIAA, the athletic conference to which Howard belongs, has announced plans to effect a resurrection of the conference in 1970. Accordingly, all teams in the State of North Carolina would be invited to compete, and those teams in the Carolinas who are not in the State, for Howard this would mean competition from each schools as Morgan State in football, and Norfolk State in basketball, on a REGULAR basis.

The Conference Medal of Honor for valor above and beyond the call of duty has been awarded to the Howard Track team, and those students whooped the relay team week-end in the Walt Whitman hotel in Camden, N.J. The place was packed, the race wouldn’t end, and the coaches were up in arms. It seems that the issue to the Howard Track team, and relay week-end in the Walt Whitman hotel in Camden, N.J. is the knowledge that the athletes included Tommy Smith, 100 yards; Ron rushed for 1,540 yards last year, who rushed for 1,540 yards last year, and Ken McKnight, CIAA pacesetter in men’s, has also announced that he intends to finish very strong to help the CIAA win this year.

Bison-Hampton contest will mark crucial point

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Howard University’s baseball season has reached a critical mid-season point, with only eight games of a 50-game schedule remaining to be played.

Still very much in contention for the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship, with a 3-4 conference record, the Bison has shown a 7-1 record in all games. Howard is second only to Texas A&M in conference play, which is expected to be a big help in their finish.

KAPAN has reached a critical mid-season point, with only eight games of a 50-game schedule remaining to be played. Still very much in contention for the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship, with a 3-4 conference record, the Bison has shown a 7-1 record in all games. Howard is second only to Texas A&M in conference play, which is expected to be a big help in their finish.

"We’re a much better team than our present mark shows,” says Coach Tom Nomitz. “We intend to finish very strong very fast.”

Hampton Institute, currently undefeated in four games, is the team the Bison have to catch in the tight Northern Division of the CIAA.

"We’re in good position,” Nomitz reassures. “We’ve played more games than any other team in our division. This means that our top competitors have some games to play against each other while we profit.

“We can take our five final conference games and the CIAA play-offs and do our best to do this—win or lose.”

In preparation for the crucial games, Howard has announced plans to effect a resurrection of the conference in 1970. Accordingly, all teams in the State of North Carolina would be invited to compete, and those teams in the Carolinas who are not in the State, for Howard this would mean competition from each schools as Morgan State in football, and Norfolk State in basketball, on a REGULAR basis.

The Conference Medal of Honor for valor above and beyond the call of duty has been awarded to the Howard Track team, and those students who whooped the relay team week-end in the Walt Whitman hotel in Camden, N.J. The place was packed, the race wouldn’t end, and the coaches were up in arms. It seems that the issue to the Howard Track team, and relay week-end in the Walt Whitman hotel in Camden, N.J. is the knowledge that the athletes included Tommy Smith, 100 yards; Ron rushed for 1,540 yards last year, who rushed for 1,540 yards last year, and Ken McKnight, CIAA pacesetter in men's. William Richie, Howard University’s “nonofficial” track and field standout, has been invited to participate in the first ever International Track and Field Meet at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville on Friday, May 15.

The event, which is expected to become an annual affair, has been suggested by the Athlete’s Christian Leadership Conference.

The most important affair that Richelle has received commitments from a host of opponents from about the region, including Tommy Smith, 100 yards; Ron rushed for 1,540 yards last year, who rushed for 1,540 yards last year, and Ken McKnight, CIAA pacesetter in men’s. There are no whites working at GE.

No blacks either. Just people. And we need more.

People qualified by talent and training—nothing else. Because at General Electric, it's the man, and what he can do that counts—not the color of his skin.

People who are not satisfied with the past and want to do something about the future. People who look for and recognize good opportunities. Equal opportunities.

These are the people the Aircraft Engine Group of General Electric is looking for—qualified people with degrees appropriate to engineering, manufacturing, quality control, business systems and programming, financial operations and personnel.

Here, you can help develop new jet engines like the ones we're building for the giant new Air Force Transport, the Supersonic Transport, commercial and military helicopters and business jets.

If you've got the talent, training and ambition, you've got all we want. It's that simple. It generally is when you put things on a people-to-people basis—which is the way we like to do things here at GE. Why not fill out the coupon, attach an outline of your education and professional experience, and mail to the location of your choice.
