Chess Team Declares Intellectual War on Howard

BY KERRY COX
Centerpiece Writer

From Tiger Woods in golf to Venus and Serena Williams in tennis, Blacks have proven their ability to succeed in sports and academics. A2 Campus, however, is about to see whether they can also win in chess. The student team, known as the Howard University Chess Team, hopes to make their mark on the chess world.

"I don't even know their names, I don't see them," said John Paul, a film student who has seen some of the team's students in action. "But they're doing something different.

Precision Entertainment, a communications company founded by binary twins Emanuel Jordan and Gerik Whittington, attributes its success to its core values: passion, respect and teamwork. "We're not just a word in the entertainment industry, we are a lifestyle," said Lyles, the head of the radio division.

"In their first appearance in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, beyond our campus community, we come to you and experience our students' creative approaches to storytelling," said Williams. "It will allow students to share their visions with the world.

Film Students Raise Money for the ‘Black Vision’

The spotlight is on the student films of having your work shown in front of an audience. The Radio Television and Film Institute (AFI) Silver Screen Showcase will be held annually in Philadelphia, the market representatives of independent film and无力 the Steve Rast of Howard University who is the head of the radio division, as one of the most successful entertainment empires ever, is also a place for Black students to shine.

"I feel honored more about providing knowledge for the Howard University student's work, but the work could inspire them," said Boyer. "The audience away from campus is always blown away by the work of Howard students. Interaction is the strongest part of it.

HUSA Strikes Deal With Administrators

HUSA, from Campus A 1:

HUSA hosted a meeting last week with the administrative staff to discuss issues facing HUSA and suggested solutions. The students from HUSA met with the administration to address various concerns, and a plan was developed to address these issues.

ISSUES FACING HUSA AND SUGGESTED SOLUTIONS

CUSTOMER SERVICE

Problem: Students are not satisfied with the service provided by the administrative staff.

Solution: The administrative staff should be trained on customer service skills and be held accountable for their performance.

CAMPUS SECURITY

Problem: Students are concerned about the safety on campus.

Solution: The administration should increase security measures and provide better training for the security officers.

SHUTTLE SERVICE

Problem: The shuttle service is not reliable and does not operate on time.

Solution: The administration should improve the shuttle service and ensure that it operates on schedule.

As part of their orientation, students are introduced to the history of Howard University and are taught about the role of the university in the community. The students learn about the importance of contributing to the community and the role of civic engagement.

ACM Contest Held Tomorrow

IBA, from Campus B:

IBA is hosting an ACM contest tomorrow, where students from the School of Computer Science and the School of Engineering will compete. The contest is designed to test students' knowledge of computer science.

Moment in HU History: Chairman Seeks Supports for Athletic Dept.

BY KONEA JERDON
Hilltop Staff Writer

In a Hilltop article dated November 3, 1961, Chairman of the Department of Physical Education for Men named Barnes said, "The standing of Howard University as the recognized section of sports in America is very low." In the year 2004, students feel there is not much truth in Barnes' words. They feel that while Howard athletic teams have tasted victory in the past, namely as a whole, the athletic department appears to be in a slump.

"I think sports are not a priority at Howard," said Leigh Thornton. "Howard is very low." Barnes attributed the "lousy" performance of athletic teams to the dormant spirit that surrounds Howard's campus. Apart from Homecoming and possibly some truth to Barnes' words. They feel that the students foster an amelioration of interest in athletics. "We don't invest enough money into our program," graduate student Erin Mindolkol said. "The facilities, the personnel, the athletes all suffer because there aren't enough funds to back them.

Barnes, who was a leading figure in North Carolina College's growing athletics program, attributed the standing by de-emphasizing athletics, the attitude of the students toward athletics and the heightening of interest in athletics. "It's a catch 22," said sophomore film studies major Leigh Thornton. "If students don't feel the money into their athletes like other schools do."

Barnes attributed the "lousy" performance of athletes to the dormant school spirit that surrounds Howard's campus. Apart from Homecoming and possibly Middleight Madness the number of students who attend Howard games is slim to none.

Students Contemplate Withdrawing From Class on Final Day

BY NICHA MCCOWDAL

To withdraw or not to withdraw, that is the question many students must ask each semester. Today is the final day to withdraw from a course, leaving many students worrying about whether or not to remain in a problematic class or to withdraw and eliminate the possibility of a poor grade posted on their academic transcripts.

While students are advised to exhaust all possible options before withdrawing from a course, such as discussing their progress and communicating with their professor, students often view withdrawals as an alternative to receiving an undesirable final grade.

"I'll take a 'W' any day over a 'F' in a course, even though I worry about how it affects my final grade," said senior mechanical engineering major Karam Wright.

Many other students seem to share this view of withdrawals leading to academic backlashes.

"To me, the only legitimate time to withdraw from a course without affecting you is during the add/drop period," said freshman pre-pharmacy major Anna Ramsey. She reasoned that if a course is dropped during this time, it does not appear on your transcript.

"It is counted in your attempted hours, but not in your GPA hours," said Director of Enrollment Management Carol McKinnon.

"You can withdraw from a course and it will not affect you graduating with honors," said Vincent S. Williams, program coordinator for the School of Communications/Emerson Honors Program. "However, if you get an 'F' and rejoin the course you cannot graduate with university honors, even if you have a 3.9 GPA. That's just the university policy."

Students also are worried about how withdrawals affect their honors status, believing that too many course withdrawals will prohibit graduating with honors.

"I would hate to have worked so hard as an honors student and have a 'W' on my transcript stop me from graduating my senior honors," says junior political science major Hirat Vaidya.

However, that is only a myth. The College of Arts and Sciences Academic Advisor Center officials say that withdrawals have nothing to do with graduating with honors. Additionally, once a course is repeated, the "W" is removed from a student's transcript.

On the other hand, W's can pose other, non-GPA related problems for students. For most scholarship students and even for financial aid students, there is a maximum number of 'W's allowed, according to a student affairs on-campus advisor who said withdrawals over five or six years could reduce eligibility for financial aid.

"There is a wide range of factors that can cause a person to withdraw from a course," said Michael Feiler, an associate professor in the Political Science Department and a former graduate school admissions counselor. "I think a student is well served to withdraw from a course rather than take an 'F.' There is no question that is acceptable for an 'F.'

In order to officially withdraw from a course one must first complete an "official withdrawal form" from their advisor in their particular school. The form must be filled out and signed by the professor and returned to the department for Enrollment Management, located on the first floor of the Administration Building or on your Advising Center.

Case of Student Health Center Fire Still Remains Mystery

ascimento said sophomore Zoësika Charles about being referred to the hospital. Last Wednesday, Charles, who is double majoring in history and political science, spent hours in the hospital's emergency room waiting to be seen about her throat ache. "There should be a clinic on campus," Charles said.

The fact of the matter is that students can not perform if they are not healthy.

Ebony Ramsey, a sophomore political science major, said she had been sick for four days but did not seek medical help because she did not want to go to the emergency room.

"I don't have time to mess around with the hospital," Ramsey said. "I don't have time hours. Even though a person may not have an emergency, being sick is still a big deal to that person."

The three apparently started on the second floor in the medical records room sometime early afternoon on Sunday, Oct. 24. According to Garrett, over 8,000 records of students who graduated over five or six years ago were destroyed in the fire. Garrett said the most recent medical records of students currently attending Howard and those who graduated last year were located in another area of the building during the fire and were all recovered.

The District of Columbia Fire Department said the cause of the fire remains unclear.

"We do not yet have a definite cause," said Kathy Pfeiffer, spokesperson for D.C. Fire and Emergency Medical Services. "The fire remains under investigation."

While the department has not released the report, Garrett speculated that a defective exhaust fan might have been the source of the fire.

Advice Column

Before submitting your query, please note that this advice column is not related to school or career issues. It was created simply because I felt threatened by it and decided to take a stand against it.

I am a psychology major and I am struggling with my decision to become a psychologist. I have been advised by many people to become a psychologist, but I am not sure it is the right choice for me. I have been feeling very sad and unfulfilled lately, and I am not sure if this is just a phase or if I really need to make a change in my life. What should I do?

Students and Parents Alike Praise Pritchett's Strong Efforts

praise, she is grateful for all of the positive feedback she gets and uses it as motivation to do her best.

"Once, I was talking to a family and it happened to be on my birthday," Pritchett recalled. "I gave them as much information as I could, and they ended up stopping by the office and brought me a birthday card. It was one of my most memorable experiences to see their daughter bring me gifts. I felt truly thankful when people thought of me like that."

Pritchett is the proud parent of four and likes spending time with her two sons and two daughters at the library. In her spare time, she also enjoys painting and drawing, a hobby she has pursued since her childhood. After she graduates with her business degree, she hopes to open an art museum to display some of her work.

"When I was younger, I would give my artwork to my dad and he would take them to work," said Pritchett. He had this long wall in his office filled with all of my projects. I figured I've painted enough pieces to fill up a whole museum, so why not open one of my own?"

Although Pritchett has the tasks of managing a family, working full time, going to classes, completing homework assignments and pursuing her hobbies, she said it is important to find balance in life. She wants to serve as a role model to her children and hopes that she can inspire others to live out their dreams.

"I want to prove that although there may be obstacles in life, you can overcome them," Pritchett said. "People ask me all the time, 'how do you do it?' I just have to stay focused and stay strong."

Presidential Hopefuls For 2008

Even though President Bush isn't even a month into his new term, speculation is rampant on which Democrat or Republican should succeed him as commander in chief. Listed below are some names being tossed around by pundits.

DEMOCRAT
Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton (D-N.Y.)

Senator Clinton is clearly the early favorite for the nomination in 2008, but the next few years will be crucial. She is the most visible Democrat, but she faces several obstacles. She has a long history of working for her husband, former President Clinton, and her approval rating is not where she would like it to be. She has to prove herself to the Senate, and she will be under pressure to prove herself to the party in 2008.

Former Vice Presidential Candidate John Edwards

On the political field, I think John Edwards has a chance at challenging Hillary Clinton for the party's nomination in 2008, but he will be hard. Edwards has been a leader in the Senate for years, but he needs to prove himself to the party in 2008. He has to prove himself to the party in 2008.

Sen. Evan Bayh (D-Ind.)

Sen. Evan Bayh is a candidate to watch in 2008. He has been a force for improving education in his state, cutting taxes, rebuilding the economy and developing policies to help the working class. He also has national appeal.

New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson

Gov. Bill Richardson was elected governor of New Mexico in 2002 and arguably has the most distinguished resume of any other candidate who may seek the presidency in 2008. As governor, Richardson has been praised for his efforts to improve education in his state, cutting taxes, rebuilding the economy and developing policies to help the working class. He also has national appeal.

REPUBLICAN
Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.)

Sen. McCain is currently the favorite among the Republican candidates, and he is widely seen as the frontrunner for the nomination. He has strong support from independents and moderates in the party.

Former New Mexico Gov. Gary Johnson

Johnson is a candidate to watch in 2008. He has been a force for improving education in his state, cutting taxes, rebuilding the economy and developing policies to help the working class. He also has national appeal.

Florida Gov. Jeb Bush

Florida governor Jeb Bush has repeatedly denied having any interest in running in 2008, but speculation continues to follow him. He was elected governor in 1998 and is currently serving in his third term. Before his election, there was a record of cutting taxes and of protecting the environment. He has also introduced health insurance coverage for children in his state. The governor has national appeal and is a force for change in the Democratic Party.

California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger

California governor Arnold Schwarzenegger is a wildcard for the Republican Party's nomination in 2008, but his status as a foreign-born citizen will prevent him from making a run. Schwarzenegger is a force for change in the Republican Party, and he has a national appeal.

Democratic Wild Cards

Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.)

I have to give the wildcard to this year's nominee John Kerry. Unlike his running mate, Kerry plans to return to the Senate. He repeatedly plans to start a political action committee and wants to use his connections from this year's run to remain visible for 2008. However, I doubt very seriously that he will run for another term. He has a long history of working for his predecessor, former President Clinton, and he is not one of the most popular candidates in recent memory. He also has a long history of working for his predecessor, former President Clinton, and he is not one of the most popular candidates in recent memory. He is also known to be a political operator who has used his connections for fundraising purposes. He has been an excellent fundraiser, and he has a national appeal.

Republican Wild Cards

California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger

Californian Arnold Schwarzenegger is a wildcard for the Republican Party's nomination in 2008, but his status as a foreign-born citizen will prevent him from making a run. Currently, an amendment is being considered to allow immigrants to be citizen of the United States. If Schwarzenegger were to run, he would be favored to win.

I think the 2008 campaign will be tough for both candidates. Both candidates have national appeal, and both have a strong base of support. However, I doubt very seriously that they will be able to make a run for the presidency.
Bush Campaign Accused of Suppressing Black Vote

BY CHARLENE DRAVON

An election supervisor in Tallahassee, Florida, has accused the Bush campaign of taking steps to suppress the black vote during last week's election. The supervisor, Ion Sancho, has been in charge of elections for 16 years. He has given public notice to the media that the Bush campaign head, Karl Rove, targeted black voters in the area with a secret documents and e-mails from the Bush campaign head. Various news outlets report. Says not one challenge had been given to someone whose face was different or had burns.

Bush acknowledged the charges and said he was "seriously troubled" by the allegations. The American Civil Liberties Union was also calling for an investigation.

The Supreme Court is set to hear in February 2005.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Legal analysts are split over what the outcome will be. Some believe that the court will rule in favor of the Bush campaign and deny the charges. Others believe that the court will rule in favor of the charges and order a new election. Still others believe that the court will rule in favor of neither side and order a new election with a different election supervisor.

The court case will likely determine the outcome of the election and will have a major impact on future elections and the political landscape.

Clinical Clinic Gets OK to Give Face Transplant

BY AMANDA NEMBARD

The Cleveland Clinic recently received the approval of the federal government to perform a face transplant. The procedure would be done at the Cleveland Clinic's Akron General campus. The patient, a 25-year-old woman, lost her face in a car accident. The team led by Dr. Maria Siemionow to CNN. Siemionow is the hospital's director of plastic surgery.

The Cleveland Clinic is the first in the United States to perform a face transplant. The procedure was approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

Surgeons are unsure when they will be able to begin offering the transplants to patients. Dr. John Barker to NBC News. Barker is the director of plastic surgery research at the Cleveland Clinic. "The procedure is still in its early stages and we don't know how long it will take to refine the technique," Barker said.

The Supreme Court is set to hear in February 2005. The court case will likely determine the outcome of the election and will have a major impact on future elections and the political landscape.

Bethune-Cookman College is definitely the team to beat in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (MEAC), and its line is a tough out to stop. Coach Daryl Harris has recently appeared and is head football coach Rayford with 18 interceptions all year.

The goal now is to stay healthy. A healthy eating habits and physical activity are essentially the right way to go for a successful season. The Wildcats' secondary, which is also ranked division. "It's about pride and character now. If we can win these two games and finish up 7-4, then it has been a successful season. The goal now is to win.

The Bison, however, will have to overcome the challenge. Bethune-Cookman College does have three tough losses, "the least of which will bring all your friends."

Howard Student Athletes Play The Numbers Game

BY COURTNEY EILAND
The Hilltop Staff Writer

When selecting a jersey number, athletes now have based it upon personal significance or possibly a number that they admired as a child. According to the National Football League,rior to 1934, numbers 1-99 were used. Then, the league adopted a deal where the starting quarterback wore the number 1. However, during the 1934 season, the Dallas Cowboys player, Alvin Harper, who also wore #80 when with the Dallas Cowboys.

It is Friday evening and you are waiting for the Pitch Club. Ar you prepared to walk up the steps at the Blackman Center to hear the band play and catch up with friends? The sounds are coming from the “Rec Room” in the basement of Blackman.

Every Friday night, the Howard’s Recreation Room is buzzing with activity. Music, games, bowling, and karaoke can all be heard coming from the basement.

At Howard, students can play pool, football, basketball, tennis, squash, bowling, table tennis and chess, while others go to the center simply to hang out and relax. From the moment one walks in and hears the low rattle of a fast-paced beat, music playing in the background, students are engaged in kickball and rock, roll and live in evident.

According to Norah Wash, a fourth year student who does her work study in the “Rec Room,” Friday evenings are usually the busiest. “This is when people really have their time to relax, enjoy an evening out, and have fun.”

Athletes Get Crunch’

BY COURTNEY EILAND

From Tiger Woods’ celebrated fist-pumps, to Shaquille O’Neal’s gorilla walk after a monstrous dunk, or from Deion Sanders’ rademark high-step march into the end zone, to Randy Moss’ sensational “Teflon” grabber of them all is Philadelphia Eagles wide receiver, Terrell Owens. One of NFL’s most一方面 inspiring shows came on December 15, 2003, when he was a member of the San Francisco 49ers. In a Monday Night Football game against the Seattle Seahawks, Owens scored a touchdown, he pulled a Sharpie from his sock, autographed the football, and the protagonist of the NFL took center stage.

Perhaps the mostSencere attitude is the true spirit of the NFL, the true meaning of playing the number 23. bowl in front of their teammates, andpizza and chips.

For some, Terrell Owens went too far for two weeks when he imitated Ray Lewis’ pregame dance during a touchdown celebration, however, Owens’ antics were the cause of turning heads. After back to Owens this week when he imitated his “wiggle-flip” celebration as the Buccaneers ramped to victory over the Eagles. Even with the excessive-celebration penalties, player still get crunch in the endzone.

Bison Bowling in A League Of Its Own

BY ZAYKIN WILLIAMS

Many Howard students are avid bowlers, some have a bowling team, they are also members of the many athletic clubs, gymnastics, and tennis that the school has. The team consists of 10 bowlers, the team consists of 10 bowlers, 5 men and 5 women, who participate in the MEAC bowling championships.

During the bowling season, the Bison Bowling team is led by Coach Keith Hall. Hall is a Howard University alumna, who also is a Member of the Lady Bison Bowling team. She has been a professional bowler for over 10 years, and has experienced first-hand, the demands that come with every bowling season. Starting out as a member of the Lady Bison team, then going on to win numerous tournaments, Hall is not only an excellent bowler, but an excellent teacher.

This year’s shining star on the team is Kimberly Williams. Coach Jones refers to her as her best player on the team. In 2004-2005 season, Kimberly Williams was the #1 ranked bowler in the MEAC. Kim Williams has 30 years of experience in the sport, and has won numerous tournaments during her career. Her dedication to the sport, and her ability to perform under pressure, has earned her a spot on the Bison team.

Kimberly Williams’ love for the game of bowling began when she was a little girl. She enjoyed watching her father bowl and wanted to be just like him. Her love for the sport continued to grow, and she eventually decided to join the Bison team as a junior.

In 2002, he was the first Bison running back to reach 1,000 rushing yards in a single season, and with less than 200 yards to go, he still had that in mind when he started. Last week, he was the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (MEAC) Offensive Player of the Week in his third consecutive years.

During his career at Howard, 2002, a mysterious hurricane season wreaks #1 at the field, representing the glorious colors of red, white and blue work of art. He has been featured in the next in 4,000. He is someone that all of Howard should admire. The team is working on getting our name changed from "Rec Room" as the other sporting team, there is a definite need for it. The Bison Bowling Team is part of our football team because he has the total package of a running back: speed, power, and intensity. He also has great practice habits and leads by example ... as a coach who has been with Colbert leaves much of himself on the field. He lets his stats speak for themselves because he is a firm believer in the "don't talk about it, do about it" adage. He says that he doesn't like to think he is cocky or conceited because he is in fact very humble. "I let him do as he sees fit, but he needs to be careful that he is not coming off as too cocky," Colbert said.

Brian Johnson, Bison football recruit and Colbert's best friend, describes him as being all about business on the field, but off the field he is a regular guy. Johnson said, "He's real cool and down to earth. He's very modest off the field and never brags about himself."

As a captain, Colbert's number one goal this season was to teach younger players about commitment and perseverance because sometimes they can become lost. "You've got to have heart," Colbert explained.

"This heavy mentality that he is trying to instill in the younger players this year, he feels that the Bison have grown closer as a team. He feels that last year the team was very separated, working off an unstructured outline on offense and defense. However, this year, all that has changed with the new goal of the team being winning the MEAC championship.

Colbert graduated from Howard University's undergraduate program in the School of Social Work that offered a degree in criminal justice, and is now working on his Master's degree in social work. He's son Howard will be continuing to assist as a coach and he hopes to be remembered by students as "an athlete that was not just to be seen."

He wants all of Howard to remember to come out and support the football team because there is too much to play for winning the game. "Even when it is not and the Homecoming game," Colbert said, "come show us some love."
Students Upcoming New Releases

Combating Stress

With forthcoming releases by Lil' Jon, Stopp, and Destiny, "Club music" enthusiasts are taking heart. The bounty of portion of what to expect this season.

One of the most quoted albums of the season is Nas' "R eal Talk," which is powered by the lead single, "H.O.V.A." Nas is in collaboration with his father, "Bridging the gap," where he says Nas has a new dimension to the revered rapper's fan base. "I'm looking forward to," said James Carpenter, a sophomore film and political major Mariama Kiawu.

"I'm not a fan of Eminem," admits sophomore film major Julian Kin1ble, a sophomore film major said. "I'm sick of him capitalizing off of something that's not his."

"Fabolous deviate from his "huggy" style and film features portions of Jay-Z's "Irops," which features Denyce S. Calloway, associate professor in the Department of Communication Studies.

The final curtain call but prayed to God that it wasn't, Paramount Pictures and its' fruits as seen by the renowned rapper's final solo album, "Destiny's Child, music enthusiasts are in for an education just to graduate." We've seen what he is capable of doing in the last two years," said senior radio, television, and film major Denyce S. Calloway, associate professor in the Department of Communication Studies.

For the past two years, everyone from Robb Deep to Guru have been "getting crunk" thanks to Lil' Jon's energetic beat. The season, fans are excited about is the one to come from the Smack's, the Smack's, with their album, "H.O.V.A." One artist looking to return to hip-hop heavyweight status is Ja Rule, who has experienced a decline in popularity after his notorious battle with rapper 50 Cent. With his upcoming album, "R.U.L.E.," which features the highly successful single, "Wonderful," featuring ASAP Rocky and R. Kelly, and the street anthem "New York," featuring Fat Joe and Jadakiss, the kid's band is an everyday part of life but can be stressful to students whose families' high living expenses for some students, and some take the risk of being fired for an education just to graduate and enter into the corporate world where they are pressured only more hard work. During the course of striving to achieve academic goals, and extracurricular activities, it is learned that every college student is faced with the habitual condition of stress at least once during their college experience. "Every aspect of school is stressful," said junior, broad¬ly focused, Calloway. "People usually get physical symptoms and don't realize that the cause of stress may be opposed to pathogens," said Junior K. Graduate Trustee Miesha Darrough Is Thorough

Sometimes, we at The Hilltop make decisions we later kick ourselves for. Last year's Hilltop Editorial Board chose not to endorse Miesha S. Darrough for the Graduate Trustee position because her platform didn't quite convince us that she was the best candidate. We felt so strongly and passionately at the moment that we won't let the opportunity slip by this year. We do not only know her, we also respect her and Darrough has proven how thorough and dedicated she is to the graduate students.

Between juggling her own classes in Howard's Law School and trying to maintain an active profile, Darrough has been bouncing between the graduate schools, listening to the students. She has even skipped her own classes just to make appearances and hold forums to inform the graduate community about the Trustee Forums and the respective publishing representatives. Her visibility is the most important step in building alumni support, access and following up. She has been working with the Alumni Affairs Executive Committee to rally alumni support. Regional alumni receptions have been done with Dr. Virginia Johnson to increase membership and bring alumni back for homecoming. Darrough understands the power of the dollar and she has been working with HUSA to raise money.

Darrough has taken the concept of accountability to a new level. But only if the reporting on student programs and proposals is also thorough. Darrough showed her reliability through, listening to students about their concerns and responding to their questions. She recognizes that listening isn't enough and wants to deliver in a timely manner. She has been trying to spread her personal enthusiasm to the student body and encourage involvement. Darrough wants to make the social scene more vibrant for the graduate students. Many students express feeling lonely or isolated from Howard University and she is planning to have mixers and events including everyone. Just because it's graduate school doesn't mean the social scene should cease to be.

I Wish I Could Renovate My School

GwenDOLyn Harper

My dreams about Howard exceed the aspects of Howard I like. First of all, I must say the professors and students are not my area of interest. If I were the president of Howard, I would have left the "great institution" long time ago. However, the university has always been a home for me and for many other students. The classrooms are always open and you always get mixed messages from so-called "high officials" when you try to conduct business relating to your financial aid and other issues. The students should have enough parking for their vehicles, especially for the commuter students. The computer labs are open and you are always allowed to view emails from your computer desktop.

By the way, the building is so closed in a small room, they should have a bigger room. Also, the "new" punch-out service is not really working. There needs to be more efficient massaging in that area. I am writing to you about my experiences and suggesting that this war was not necessary. Where's the love? Love is a condition of being with someone you care about.

The bathrooms on campus need major renovation as well as the computer labs, library, etc. Oh! Also there are no enough working computers and printers on this campus to accommodate the student population. Yes, I am suggesting that the citizens of this country don't have to work 12-hour shifts, just that's all the time. The library needs renovation and the media room is like a closet. You can

Saddam has been captured.

Great. We, the Americans, people, have "liberated" the country of a cruel tyrant. Now, I wish to know the answer to this question: Mr. President, where are those deadly and awesome "weapons of mass destruction" that you love to talk about in the public eye? While writing a stir-fry sauce? You promised me a weapon, but there was more than one.

And where are the poor soldiers over in Iraq ever going to get relieved of their extended duties and be able to play kids ball with their kid or take to the beach with their family and friends? When are they ever going to get out of the trenches? Mr. President! You have undermined our country.

As a political activist, I voted the way I voted.

As an American, I now don't understand. Why
