CHARLES P. WARE PAPERS

Collection 109-1 to 109-2

Prepared & Revised by:
Karen L. Jefferson
June 1980

Scope Note

The Charles P. Ware Papers were presented to the Howard University Collection in December 1961 by Dr. Caroline F. Ware. Dr. Ware, a granddaughter of Charles P. Ware, was a professor at Howard University. The papers span the period 1862-1907, totaling one linear foot.

Charles Ware was one of a group of young men and women from the Boston area who acted as civil administrators on the Sea Islands, the first Confederate territory to be brought under northern control. They saw their mission as testing their belief, (not shared by many, including the military authorities), that former slaves could work as free men, responding to the same incentives and assuming the same responsibilities. Ware was assigned the task of supervising a group of plantations.

The papers are comprised of correspondence, plantation records and documents connected with Charles Ware's stay in Port Royal, South Carolina during the Civil War. There is a significant amount of correspondence between Charles Ware and his sisters, Emma and Harriet Ware, and Edward S. Philbrick, a prominent figure in the Port Royal Experiment. Excerpts from their letters were included in Letters from Port Royal, edited by Elizabeth Ware Pearson. There is also correspondence between Elizabeth Pearson and Charles Ware. The map referred to in that correspondence and used in the above mentioned publication is included in the papers.

Additions to the Collection

Additions include the 1867 edition of Slave Songs of the United States compiled by Charles P. Ware, et. al.; and various other published and unpublished slave songs collected by Ware.
