JUDGE JULIUS WATIES WARING PAPERS
Collection 110-1 to 110-79

Prepared & Revised by:
Greta S. Wilson
June 1980

MANUSCRIPT DIVISION

Scope Note

Judge Julius Waties Waring, Federal District Judge of South Carolina from 1942-1952 was responsible for writing some of the original decisions giving historic civil rights victories to Negroes. The more important decisions were the rights for Negroes to vote in democratic primaries, and desegregation of schools in Clarendon County, South Carolina, the latter eventually lead to the Supreme Court Decision in May 1954, banning school segregation.

Judge Waring, along with his second wife, outspoken integrationist, Elizabeth Avery Waring, devoted their lives to fighting for equal rights for all people regardless of race, creed or color. For their strong convictions, the Warings were ostracized by most family and friends. However, this did not stop their struggles to obtain equal rights for all men. The papers of Judge Waring span the period 1841 to 1964. They are contained in 62 boxes measuring approximately 33 linear feet including eighteen individually wrapped items (mostly photographs). The biographical material contained in the collection includes the Judge's reminiscences, a verbatim transcript resulting from tape recorded interview by the Oral History Research Office of Columbia University, New York in 1957.

Also included in the collection are correspondence of both the Judge and Mrs. Waring, manuscripts, photographs, legal case files, organizational material and 72 scrapbooks of clippings relating to his career as Federal District Judge and to the civil rights activities of the time. Additional material received at the time of the major acquisition was transferred to the School of Law, Howard University. A list of those materials transferred is appended.
