DANIEL HALE WILLIAMS COLLECTION

Collection 116-1 to 116-26

Prepared by Denise Harbin
June 1980

Revised by Greta S. Wilson
February 1981

Scope Note

The Daniel Hale Williams Collection was presented to the Howard University Library in 1954-55 by Helen Buckler, journalist, publicist and author of the biography of Daniel Hale Williams, a Black physician who performed the first successful open heart surgery in 1893. Mrs. Buckler, who has done extensive public relations and historical research, received the Honor Award for the first edition of her book, Doctor Dan: Pioneer in American Surgery (Boston: Little, Brown and Company, 1954) which was later revised as Daniel Hale Williams: Negro Surgeon (New York: Pitman Publishing Corporation, 1968).

This collection consists largely of working papers, research notes and drafts of the manuscript of Mrs. Buckler's book, Among these papers are correspondence to and from persons who were contacted for information as early as 1944 and as late as 1970 regarding Daniel Hale Williams.

There are copies of testimonies of individuals involved in the early administration of Freedmen's Hospital, original and photostat copies of correspondence of Dr. Williams, his wife Alice Darling Johnson Williams, Booker T. Washington, Emmett J. Scott and others. Also included are clippings and articles by and about Dr. Williams, and numerous genealogical research material regarding Daniel Hale Williams' family.

Correspondents, who assisted Mrs. Buckler in the preparation of her
