Amid Debate, Campus Plan Approved

By APRIL O. TURNER

The Howard University Student Association says that it was unable to produce a community advisory council designed to solidify the community's voice in the university's planning and implementation of the Campus Plan.

The university's Board of Trustees approved the plan, but the Student Association's Interim President, Neville Welch, said that the council's voice was not included.

Welch said: "We support the plan, but cannot, in good conscience, agree to the exclusion of the Student Association from its implementation." He added: "Our presence is crucial to ensuring that the Campus Plan is successful.

Welch also noted that the council was an opportunity for the Student Association to have a say in the development of the university's future.

"We believe the council is a necessary step in the development of a new community," Welch said. "The council will provide a platform for students, faculty, and staff to come together and discuss the future of the university.

"We are committed to ensuring that the Campus Plan is successful and we will work with the university to make that happen," Welch concluded.

On a recent Thursday afternoon, Jonathan Hutto, the 21-year-old president of UGSA, was seen walking on the campus of Howard University, discussing the upcoming events of the week. "Connect with Campus," a campaign started by past coordinators, was revived by Hutto, who said he wants students to feel more connected to the university.

As president, Hutto said he "wanted to get to a level where I felt the most comfortable." He said he wanted to be "the final decision maker, standing up for the rights of students." He also mentioned that he was planning a panel discussion on the history of undergraduate crime and the role of the University. He said he was looking to build a network of former undergraduate officers during Homecoming weekend.

"I think we should provide some assistance to him as he takes his influence after graduating from Howard," he added. "He may not have all the tools to succeed in school or education, but other way, he'll be a public servant," he says.

"Connect with Campus" is a campaign started by past coordinators, but Hutto sees it as a way to provide some assistance to those who may not have all the tools to succeed in school or education.

Powell Chats with Students on the Yard

By QUADRELL JACKSON

The "Yard" became the site for an impromptu meeting between students and President Colin L. Powell, also a Howard University alumnus. Powell, accompanied and escorted by Howard Police, stopped and interacted with students walking towards the administration building. Powell, responding to student concerns and questions with a calm and cool demeanor, conversed with students about the need for improvement in areas of administration, computer services and discipline.

"His presence was serious but he was able to relate to the students and also keep them in line," said Acting Dean Steve Favors, deciding to go "head to head" with students and address their concerns.

Students listened to his statements then issued complaints about registration, computer service, student disorders and discipline. "The issue is not serious," Powell said, "because there are other colleges that have the same problems, too." Powell also addressed the issue of student disorders in the area of computer services and discipline, explaining that it was "easy to get bogged down with reports and evaluations."

"You have to go outside and get information directly from the people you serve," Powell said.

"We need students who can relate to the students and also help them keep it real," Powell added, explaining that students are important to the university and that the institution needed to listen to their concerns.

"We need to work together to improve things," Powell concluded, expressing his commitment to addressing the students' concerns and working towards a better Howard University for all.

Marches Born At

"Attacks...partly because of student complaints and lack of communication from N.Y. organizers. We were never approached by organizers from the N.Y. March," Welch said. "We were then approached by organizers from the N.Y. March."

"We have been interacting with Atlanta organizers since last spring," Powell said.

"We need students who can relate to the students and also help them keep it real," Powell added, explaining that students are important to the university and that the institution needed to listen to their concerns.

"We need to work together to improve things," Powell concluded, expressing his commitment to addressing the students' concerns and working towards a better Howard University for all.

"The Million Youth Marches's goals address the major areas of concern that will spread over a 10-year span: spirituality, social awareness, economics and education. The 10-year agenda was developed with the input from youths, Powell said. And Powell said he looked forward to interacting with more students at the forum in a more casual or organized format.

"To maintain federal funding the university is in agreement with the students," Powell said, "but there are still other issues that need to be addressed."

"One of the best ways to do this is to involve the students in the decision-making process," Powell said, "and to work towards a better Howard University for all."

EDITORIAL NOTEBOOK
Making the transition from environment required trust to the money, potentially time-consuming process known as Cook it For Ourselves can be an enjoyable experience. No I don’t expect anyone is suffering through the memory and loads of Madison, Wisconsin. But out for a wider variety of dining options, that’s a different story. My mom and I had just finished a meal at a local restaurant with an outdoor seating arrangement. The food was delicious, but the atmosphere was lacking. We left feeling unsatisfied, not knowing whether we would return for another visit.

A Tale of Two Marches
This Labor Day weekend will bring football games, outdoor cooking, and end-of-summer fun to many. TheInnocents Lost
With the news so prolific in the world today, it is often difficult to separate what is significant from what is insignificant. Efforts at mobilizing black people to take control of their lives, as evidenced by the Million Youth March, which does not end well for the eventual outcome of the youthful revolution in New York City tomorrow, or the Million Youth Movement, which many say is geared to the issues of young black people. But unlike those two gatherings of the past, this year’s Million Youth March II is aimed at mobilizing black people. Instead of relying on the traditional method of marching and chanting slogans, the organizers of this event have incorporated modern technology into their message. Through the use of social media and other digital platforms, young people are being encouraged to take part in the march and share their experiences with others.

THE HILLTOP FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1998

Bribe is not a bad term, for it connotes an exchange of value. The word means to offer or give something in order to gain another's favor or influence. In American politics, the word has been quickly associated with the act of giving something to another in order to receive a favor or advantage. It is not a term that is easily forgotten or swept under the rug. The act of bribery is one that is often associated with corruption and unethical behavior. However, it is important to understand the role that bribery plays in American politics and the impact it has on our democratic process.

In Defense of Mr. Clinton

Kamal Shaw

A new domain in American presidential politics is emerging: women, both long-ago or recent, no matter what country Clinton is accused of sexual misconduct. It is a world where women are no longer confined to the roles of mothers, wives, or daughters. They are now stepping into the political arena, demanding their voices be heard and their perspectives be respected.

The Republican Party is going to continue its campaign against unpopular issues at the polls. This is a party that is not afraid to take on the establishment, to challenge the status quo, to fight for the rights of the American people. It is a party that is not afraid to stand up for what is right, even if it means going against the grain.

Miseducation

The world of education has become a battleground for political interests. Teachers, parents, and students are all fighting for what they believe is best for the children of this country. But in the midst of all this, the role of the teacher has been forgotten. The teacher is the person who is responsible for shaping the minds of our children. They are the ones who are responsible for instilling in our children the values that will guide them through life.

Bison Meet Tigers In Season Opener

By ENRIQUE FRANCIS

One year after the Howard University football team lost a crucial game to the Jackson State Tigers, 35-33, the Bison, armed with a crop of freshmen, are trying to win a season with a squad that is against the odds seasoned team composition.

Last year Jackson State coach James Gordon welcomed his team into Howard season with seven seniors and one young woman. This will be the first game as he leads the team against the Southern Atlantic Conference (SWAC).

The Tigers advanced to the National College Athletic Association's I-AA championship, which is held at the end of the regular season. The Tigers' first job as head coach at a university, Lewis continued as the coach.

The 6-4, 220 pound White said his decision to attend Howard over the University of Southern Mississippi was not “offic ial y settled in,” he said.

"I've also been familiarizing myself with the rules and the procedures ..., and assisting students with the registration and the process of clearing themselves," he said.

With new talent and the group of returning starters this season, he feels confident that he is prepared.

"I want to post a winning dual meet season," White said.

The offensive line was young, and continuous line changes of players on the line."

Several players and team members are expected to redeem himself from the loss to Hampton last season. "I am not worried," he said.

During the three years of playing for Howard, White reached the 90 percent passing efficiency. White's stats are not out of this world.

"When we won the national championship, we didn't win the MEAC," White said. "That's something we must do."

Bis on Quarterback Ted White’s Got the Whole Team In His Hands

By KIMOTHY K. BROWN

White's stats are not out of this world.

"I have been training athletes from the men’s and women’s programs," a machine, which is being enhanced by a talented young football team at Howard.

During this year, the swimming and diving team will welcome freshman Jennifer Carter, a right-handed and a talented swimmer. White’s stats are not out of this world.

"I am not worried," he said. "I am confident that I am prepared."
While many other goals beyond this upcoming season. They're looking ahead to a possible career in the NFL. Becoming another black quarterback in the NFL will not go without scrutiny. Black quarterbacks in the NFL have been characterized as runners and scramblers rather than pure passers. White believes this characterization is wrong. "Look at Kordell Stewart or Steve McNair, they have abilities beyond just running. When Kordell Stewart first entered the NFL, they wanted him to play receiver. Kordell Stewart has never played receiver before he was in the NFL," White said.

There will be several issues this year, all starting with Jackson State University on Sept. 5.

COMMENTARY ON VOLLEYBALL

By RHETT BUTLER

Hilltop Staff Writer

At first, the game seemed to have promise. During the warm-up exercises, the Lady Bison volleyball team ran through drills. And by the game's start, the passing and returning of the game transformed the team into a virtual machine.

Just before the game, the team huddled-up and was lead in prayer by their coach and mentor Linda Spencer.

The game began. And Spencer revved-up the team's wings with outside hitters Chazara Clark and Tara Eggleson, and middle blocker Rila Floyd—but that would face changes to the "chemistry" of her team.

In the first of a five-game series, the Lady Bison lost their third straight game against the Georgetown University Hoyas. In game one, the Lady Bison started their accumulation by choking the Hoyas' setting and blocking. In game two, the Hoyas scored the opening point and won the set 15-0. The Hoyas, taking advantage of the Lady Bison's lack of coordination and bodies going for the same volleys, scored quickly.

Speencer, noting several causes for the team's Tuesday night loss, said the younger players will need more time to weave themselves into the fabric of the team. With veteran players already accustomed to each other's performance and style, they are faced with growing their chemistry.

"First game jitters, I guess ... They weren't using what we practiced," Spencer said after the game. Overall, the Lady Bison have the talent and drive for their game that places them ahead of a lot of their competitors. What's left for them to master revolves around building chemistry among players and less on the opposite side of the court.

A Tale of Three Wives: "Why Do Fools Fall in Love"

By STEVEN M. GRAY

The album sold over 15 million copies in two years, cementing Missy Elliott's reputation as one of the most talented female artists in hip-hop.

The success of "Why Do Fools Fall in Love" has been attributed to the catchy melody and the song's ability to connect with listeners on a personal level.

Missy Elliott's performance offered a new perspective on the power of female artists in the music industry, paving the way for future generations of female artists to succeed in the male-dominated space.

Brian McKnight's multifaceted career was celebrated in the book "Brian McKnight: Mystifies Crowd," which delved into his musical journey, personal life, and the impact he had on the music industry.

The book reviewed the artist's transition from a soulful R&B crooner to a more experimental artist, exploring his evolution as a performer and his contributions to the music world.

The reviewer, Lina Ali, described the book as comprehensive and engaging, offering insights into McKnight's career and the impact he has had on the music industry.

"The Alanis Monroes Story" was a book that examined the life and career of Alanis Morissette, exploring her rise to fame and the challenges she faced along the way.

The book was well-researched and offered a detailed look into Morissette's personal life and musical journey, making it a valuable resource for fans and music enthusiasts alike.

Music Review

"Why Do Fools Fall in Love" was a pop hit that showcased Missy Elliott's ability to create catchy music and connect with audiences.

The song's success was due in part to its catchy melody, memorable lyrics, and the emotional resonance it had with listeners.

Elliott's performance on "Why Do Fools Fall in Love" was praised for its energy and the way it captured the essence of the song's message.

The reviewer noted that Elliott's vocals were well-suited to the song's upbeat tempo, allowing her to deliver the lyrics with passion and conviction.

The song's success also highlighted the power of music to bring people together and make them feel connected, a sentiment that resonated with listeners across the globe.

There are a new set of standards before they make a recommendation. An objective is regulating institutions process for which reaccreditation Schools of Business (AACSB). It is also one of the few schools in the country to be granted accreditation for MBA programs.

The AACSB, under the leadership of a new director of the Business School, currently played itself in bringing one of only seven AACSB-credited schools within the American Association of Colleges of Business Schools (AACSB). It was also one of the few schools in the country to be granted accreditation for MBA programs.

"I like the fact that next year when I graduate there will be prestige behind my diploma," said the graduate business programs director. "I am very optimistic," he said. "I have made changes since I arrived. I am very optimistic," he said. "I have made changes since I arrived.

"For example, we may be interested in aggressive prospective about what is to be the best in the world. He has a positive perspective about what is to be the best in the world. He has a positive perspective.

The AACSB is in the process of making further changes in its system of accreditation procedures. During the President's address at AACSB's Annual Meeting last year in Chicago, Alutto noted his concerns about schools focusing mainly on graduate programs while neglecting undergraduate programs. He believes all schools should make progress toward student performance and graduate programs. In his words, undergraduate programs in the AACSB standards will be included.
