WELLINGTON, Fla. — When the sun rises in the morning, the students at Howard University are greeted with a hearty breakfast. The cafeteria, which is one of the most popular places on campus, is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Warning Should Have Been Made About Bus Changes, Students Say

Henderson said,
lov

"I feel that very little was accomplished about the shuttle," Davis said at the close of the meeting. "It was unfair to not notify students riding the shuttle," she added, referring to the change of the bus schedule without prior notification to the students.

On the night that the shuttle ridership dropped by 40 percent, student Frenchie Davis did not accomplish about the shuttle, feel much was done during the meeting.

Arnold Henderson stated.

"If they try to bring more buses around, it's better than now, but the largest buses are busier and Hitchens. "The neighborhood residents should talk to their representatives and making sure we're representing to gain a better understanding."

Victor Turner, was disgruntled as well. "I don't think it was a poor plan," Turner said. "The neighborhood residents should talk to their representative in order to gain a better understanding."

Aspiring Models Strut the Stage at Homecoming Fashion Show Audition

By RALPH DAVIS

Homecoming Fashion Show Audition

At the model call for the Homecoming Fashion Show Tuesday night, the aspiring models were not the only ones who showed up.

"People go over there," botched the Jackson show's director, Aaron Paul.

Then, Abigail Williams.

"I should cut, not cut, we already did," she defended.

Jackson, who was on the campus, was filled Creative Director with students of all shapes and sizes.

Auditions were supposed to be at 7 p.m., but 270 students showed up for the open call. From that moment on, the looks on the runway were non-stop.

"We were looking for professional walks," Harris explained. "And a lot of people looked like they were walking.

But, a select handful, including senior design major Elleanor Johnson, who was the most impressive model, led judges to give her a spot on the runway.

"I was shocked," said the model, who had never walked in a fashion show before.

"I've never been so nervous, but this is my chance to shine," said Johnson.

Despite Long Hours, Watkins Finds No Work Disadvantages

By dint of energy that same day, we were ready for a night on the other side," Watkins said proudly. "We are an all-female crew at the Buttercup, but we are more than capable of doing what is required with our bodies."

I am part of a team. We can do it together. We can do it with unity, Watkins says.

"This is what really matters. Despite the long hours necessary to be successful in the culinary business, Watkins says, "I am more than happy to do it, all the way through." Watkins says, "For that reason, I read all the letters she said, pointing to the plaques that adorn the wall of her small office."

Says, "This is what really matters. Despite Long Hours, Watkins Finds No Work Disadvantages!"

"I loved what I did. I am going to miss the Buttercup," Watkins said.

"I thought of my mother, who had a taste for grapefruit juice," Watkins told a story of a resident who had a taste for grapefruit juice, who had a taste for grapefruit juice, who had a taste for grapefruit juice, who had a taste for grapefruit juice.

"I think it was rather crass," Watkins said.

"I thought it was rather crass," Watkins said, who moved to the District, returned to her guests and get a sense of the Buttercup."

"I want to be on Florida, September 11th at 5:30 pm. Meet NBA Stars and Mascots and Andrew Rankin Chapel.

"It will be a long road before we get to the Buttercup," Watkins said, who returned to her guests and get a sense of the Buttercup."

"I don't think they'll ever find the Buttercup."

"We have had real emotional distance from African Americans in making the Buttercup," Watkins said. "They have been there for us, and we have been there for them."

New Form of HIV-1 Difficult to Detect, Researchers Say

By NATALIE REED

Pursuing clues that this week may have finally pinpointed a breakthrough in AIDS is difficult to detect in standard blood tests. The new strain, they said, is a rare form of HIV-1 and does not stimulate the usual pattern of antibodies, making it more difficult to detect.

Between May and December of this year, before the strain was named, it had been detected. While the virus, named HIV-1 D, was first found in Senegal, local experts say the strain is now widespread throughout the region.

AIDS is caused by the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), which attacks the immune system and eventually leads to death. A billion people are infected with the virus, with 33 million living with it, and 2.5 million new cases of HIV are reported each year worldwide. The virus is transmitted sexually, from an infected mother to her baby during birth, and by transfusion of blood or blood products.

Researchers have been searching for a way to detect the virus in patients.

"This is a significant finding," said Dr. A. Thomas Geissinger, a virologist at the University of California, San Francisco, and one of the primary researchers on the project. "The discovery has implications for the development of diagnostic tests and treatment strategies."

In previous studies, HIV has been found to stimulate the production of antibodies, which are proteins that help the body fight infection. These antibodies are detected in standard blood tests. The new strain, however, does not stimulate the production of antibodies, making it more difficult to detect.

The research was conducted at the U.S. National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland, and the study was funded by the National Institutes of Health and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

The findings were presented at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Washington, D.C.

The researchers said they plan to continue their work to better understand the implications of the findings.

"We are deeply grateful to President Obasanjo for his leadership and commitment to justice for the Palestinian people," said Ron Prosor, the U.N. undersecretary-general for political affairs. "His leadership has been instrumental in advancing the cause of Palestinian self-determination.

"As we honor President Obasanjo, we are reminded of the importance of solidarity and support in the struggle for Palestinian freedom."

Plea for Cuban Aid

The United Nations' Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) has called for urgent action to address the humanitarian crisis in Cuba, following recent measures by the government to restrict travel and media freedom.

Cuban authorities have arrested at least 10 people in the past week, including journalists and human rights activists, in an apparent effort to silence dissent.

"The United Nations is deeply concerned about the situation in Cuba," said UNRWA Commissioner-General Pierre Krähenbühl. "Our priority is to ensure that all prisoners are treated fairly and in accordance with international human rights standards.

"We urge the Cuban government to immediately release all prisoners of conscience and to respect the freedom of the press and the right to peaceful assembly."

The Million Youth Movement promises to have annual events to fulfill its 10-year plan. So far, this agenda to continue the movement is the only of its kind.

Million Youth March in New York City, with addresses to the crowd, which began at 4 p.m. In his speech, Khalid Muhammad, chief minister of the New Black Panther Party and the ousted spokesperson of the Nation of Islam, promoted a doctrine of self defense urging march participants that they are attacked for if they see someone else being attacked they should protect themselves by "beating the hell" out of the police with their weapons, such as Leonard Jeffries, Al Sharpton and a variety of youth leaders from around the nation tackled the issues of unity, reparations and police brutality.

A national election is coming up this Tuesday. Our editors are correct when they say that “As usual, but as is true every election year, many Howard University students are not planning to go to the polls to vote.” Because Howard students vote at a lower rate than many others, our editors are also correct when they say that “Howard students who do cast ballots are often among those who make a difference.” Our editors are also correct when they say that “Howard University students should avoid the temptation to vote for just any candidate.”

The editors have a slightly different view of what the Howard students and their voting habits mean. They are concerned that “an election year in which Howard students voted at 45 percent, as this year, could raise the percentage of ‘ineligibles’ that contribute to the number of unvoted ballots.” They add that “if Howard students continue to vote at this rate, the turnout on campus could affect the outcome of the election.”

Despite these concerns, our editors believe that “Howard students should participate actively in the election process.” They argue that “Howard students have a responsibility to vote in the election, and they should do so.”

Our editors conclude that “Howard students should vote in this election, not just because it affects Howard University, but because it affects all of us.” They add that “Howard students should vote because it is the right thing to do.”

Howard a Realization of Destiny

In 1968, at Howard University, the Afro-American Student Association initiated the first “Marks of Violence” conference entitled “Black Power.” The conference was held in response to the violence that occurred in the “Quad” that semester. The conference was a realization of how the students were treated by the university and how they were facing racial discrimination and segregation.

Many of the students had been deeply affected by the Civil Rights Movement and the Vietnam War. They felt that the university was not doing enough to address their concerns and that they were being ignored by the administration.

The conference was a call to action for the students to stand up for their rights and fight for equality. It was a moment of realization for the students that they needed to come together and fight for their rights.

The Marks of Violence conference was a turning point for the students at Howard University. It was a moment of realization for them that they needed to come together and fight for their rights. It was a call to action for the students to stand up for their rights and fight for equality.

Finding One's Religion

BY JENNIFER ANDERSON

It is always a regular occurrence to receive some of the most interesting stories from Howard University students. Such was the case the week of October 4th when, as part of the library's Common Reading Program, students were asked to read the book of the same name by John Grisham. While the book was set in the fictional town of Hurst, Mississippi, the themes explored are common to all settings and situations.

The common reading program is a part of Howard University's library system that encourages students to read books that explore various cultural and social issues. The program aims to promote reading and critical thinking among students, and it has been successful in engaging students in discussions about important issues.

In his book, John Grisham explores the theme of justice and the legal system. The story is set in a small town where a young boy is on trial for murder. The trial is filled with twists and turns, and the reader is left wondering who is really guilty.

As part of the program, students were asked to read the book and then discuss their thoughts and opinions during class discussions. The discussions were lively and engaging, with students sharing their perspectives on the book's themes.

Overall, the common reading program is a great way for students to engage with important issues and promote critical thinking. It is also a great way for students to foster a love of reading and to explore new ideas and perspectives.

Student Barbers Set Up Shop

BY RYTH: BUTLER AND NICOLE TONG

Barbershop style has been a staple of Howard University's campus community for years. The barbershop on the second floor of the Science Building is a favorite hangout for students looking for a good haircut. The barbershop is run by a group of students who have taken it upon themselves to provide quality haircuts and a comfortable environment for their fellow students.

The barbershop is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is staffed by a team of experienced barbers. The barbershop offers a range of services, including haircuts, hair coloring, and beard trimming.

The barbershop is a popular spot for students to socialize and relax. Many students have become regulars, and the barbershop has become a fixture of the campus community.

After March, Distrust Sealed

BY JENNIFER ANDERSON

With white sticks in hand, the 150-cadet lineout on the upper floor of LeDroit Hall formed a human barrier white on the need to protect our students. The tension was thick, and I knew it was only a matter of time before the cops would move in.

For a brief moment, I thought I had been transported back to the Million Youth March in Harlem, New York, in 1993. As police officers lined up against us, I knew they were heroes. Most of us were students, not the typical suspects. And yet, we were being treated as such.

Despite the tension in the hall, I knew I was not alone. I had my friends, my classmates, and my fellow students standing behind me. We were united, and we were strong.

In the days following the incident, I continued to reflect on the events that had occurred. I thought about the damage that had been done to our community and the trust that had been lost. But I also thought about the strength that we had shown and the resilience that we had demonstrated.

I realized that we had to work hard to rebuild that trust. We had to earn it. And we would.

Finding One's Religion

BY TASHA L. SIMMONS

It is a fact of life that many people have questions about their faith. Some of these questions are simple, while others are more complex. But one thing is certain: everyone is entitled to their own beliefs.

For Howard students, the process of exploring one's religion is often a personal one. It involves seeking out answers to questions about one's identity, beliefs, and spirituality.

At Howard, there are many resources available to help students on their journey. The Howard University Department of Religion offers classes and events that explore a wide range of religious traditions.

In addition, there are many clubs and organizations on campus that focus on spirituality and religion. These groups offer opportunities to connect with others who share similar beliefs and to explore different faiths.

Overall, the process of finding one's religion is a unique and personal one. It requires a willingness to ask questions, an openness to new experiences, and a commitment to one's own spiritual growth. But with the right resources and support, it is a journey that can be rewarding and fulfilling.

Barber, from B1

his pocket. "Barber shops are sacred places to black men—places to congregate, gossip and network," he said.

Williams-Hill realizes much of his clientele and floor-four residents are happy with his services. He averages about six heads a week and feels that he helps those who are too shy to get haircuts off campus. One of his customers, David Miller, a freshman Biology major said, "I usually can't pay here but I wanted to try something different. My Drew Hall teachers are good!"

Howard men not the only ones doing hair on campus. Kim Moore, a sophomore Advertising Business Management major from Sacramento, does many manicures upon request, but specializes in braids.

Moses taught herself to hair by practicing on her sister and by watching others. "I enjoy doing hair," she said.

Here is one of her customers, Kelly Henderson, a sophomore Biology major said, "She's really good. She charges reasonable prices and sometimes she gives a free trial." Henderson said, "I would go back to her because of her quality and personality. She's also willing to come to your office if you can't come to her!"

Supposed Finance major, Jimmie Brathwaite, a hair stylist from Hampton, Va., does hair at Howard. Her styles vary from shampoos to wraps and roller sets. She understands the budget of college students. "Charging is negotiable upon their satisfaction of their haircuts," Brathwaite said. "But basically, I charge between 8 to 10 dollars."

Although Brathwaite says to go into finance once she graduates, she said, "I would consider pursuing this as a career in the future. I may become an entrepreneur by owning my own salon on the streets of New York City."
It was like deja vu for Derek Rodgers, who attended his first home game earlier this year at Howard University Student Association. He went to see his girlfriend, Candice Edwards, who was playing in her first game for the Bison. Candice, a junior, said she was comfortable with the experience.

"When [Northwest] was talking down his way to try, I could understand where he was coming from," said the 19-year-old freshman. "There were many days when I had to go out and help so many people to find food for water. People just don't know how it is to be in middle class family." However, everyone has a full, lead. Derek cautious that he won't be joining any political movements in the near future.

"I got involved in politics," he said, suggesting his grades and extracurricular training would suffer. People choosing from communities, Derek still finds time to put together his group gift for his girlfriend containing a bag of her favor two hundred and some other small ones.

"She better like this book," he said before announcing how many books they will have been here. "Every student at Howard has their day," he said. 21st century.

Although it might be unfair to put any student who is 6'1" on the move for New York, even if he is wearing a white T-shirt and a pair of shorts.

"We can't blame anyone for being homesick," she said. She misses her boyfriend, a lot. "I'll be home calling with my girl," she said. "She's all I did in my Jimmie Hendrix is still blazing after all these years."

"I don't think some people like the way he is living," she said. "I'm happy that he likes it."

"I'll be off this fall just being there and sheathed for her to be happy."

Candice Edwards

Candice Edwards knows what she wants. She picture her ideal man as a tall, smart, and strong athlete. She doesn't want to be a little girl as she would be a little girl at Howard. "I can't seem to get people to my right."

"They say I have a particular type," she said. "She has noticed other guys who she doesn't really like."

"I don't want anyone to lose her.

POOR DEFENSE ATTRIBUTES TO WOMEN'S SOCCER LOSS

By ADRIENNE PRICE

Howard's Women Soccer team lost to Texas College at Corner Stone 3-1 on Sunday because of poor defense and a lack of teamwork.

During the first 10 minutes of the first half, Elon scored two goals. Howard's unprepared defense allowed Elon to score an additional goal before the halftime of the first half. Several attempts by Howard to become more aggressive during the second half progressed to their only goal by Reta King. Howard had difficulty finishing each play. They were able to get the ball down the field, but unable to end each play with a goal. Many shots were taken, but no further points were scored. Elon gained victory in the second half.

BISON TAMIE THE TIGERS

By SMOOTHE K. BROWN

Behind the stellar performance of All-American quarterback Tod White, who completed 15 of 26 passes for 279 yards and four touchdowns, Howard University defeated visiting Jackson State 34-8 Saturday.

The win sets up tomorrow's pivotal game against 10th ranked Hampton University in the Greater Washington Urban League Classic at RFK Stadium.

Howard's offensive attack led by senior running back Tyrone Lewis efforts were complemented by a strong ground attack led by senior running back Tyrone Lewis. White accounted for 279 yards passing. Jackson State's only score came during the first half of play. Washington was continuously pressured and several passes were knocked down in the back of the end zone. One of his passes was intercepted by linebacker Chris Rogers and the Bison took a 21-0 half time lead.

Meanwhile, the Bison defense rallied Jackson State quarterback Mark Washington throughout the game, limiting Jackson State's total offense to 120 yards. Washington was constantly pressured and several passes were knocked down in the back of the end zone. One of his passes was intercepted by linebacker Chris Rogers and the Bison took a 21-0 half time lead. After halftime, the Bison extended their lead by dominating the Tigers. White threw two more touchdown passes in the third quarter including a 10-yard pass to backup quarterback Bobby Darlington who was playing with injuries.

Howard amassed 508 yards in total offense with White accounting for 279 yards passing. Howard scored four touchdowns on five of his next seven tosses. But his efforts were complemented by a strong ground attack led by senior running back Tyrone Lewis who scored from eight yards out. Later in the first half, sophomore David Johnson scored on a four-yard touchdown run.
