Despite Lack of Use, Counseling Center is Open to All Howard Students

By MIA MATTA

Howard University’s Student Resource Center (often referred to as counseling services) serves as an important refuge for students to take advantage of. It offers several counseling services designed to assist students, including psychological counseling, career counseling, and preprofessional counseling.

Dr. Ajusa Watkins-Northern, director of clinical services, has been with Howard for 16 years and says, “The counseling center provides a place for students to talk about their concerns.”

However, there are several concerns with the counseling center, including the lack of usage and the need for better marketing.

 Watkins-Northern said that approximately 500 students visit the counseling center each year, but the center has only been open for a few weeks.

“Students are not realizing how important the center is to their mental health,” Watkins-Northern said.

The counseling center offers several services to help students, including counseling, group therapy, and support groups. It also provides resources for students to help them cope with stress and other issues.

However, Watkins-Northern said that the counseling center is not staffed with enough counselors to meet the needs of all students.

On the other hand, some students have found the counseling center to be helpful in their personal and academic lives.

“Counseling has helped me with my anxiety,” said one student.

However, Watkins-Northern said that it is important for students to take advantage of the resources available to them.

“Students should use these services to their fullest potential,” Watkins-Northern said.

The counseling center is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and students can make appointments by calling 202-806-0330.

"For the 2001-2002 season, all Americans will be made up of what we call minorities," Mr. Gray said. "We need to understand this future." Mr. Gray added that historically black colleges played a significant role in the civil rights movement and that the NAACP should continue these efforts.

"This is something that is very, very hard to learn," Mr. Bollinger said. "As the year 2035 approaches, 50 percent of all Americans will be made up of what we call minorities."

"I have been threatened, my phone has been tapped. But as long as you have people like us who are here today, it's going to be effective."- Mr. Thomas said.

Amid Rain Threat, AIDS Walk Draws Thousands

By ENOIL FRANCES

The Howard University Chapter of Omega Psi Phi, the National Council of Negro Women, and the Howard University Undergraduate Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha supported a District of Columbia-based AIDS organization to help kick off a weekend of activities to raise awareness of the AIDS crisis and the challenge of living with AIDS.

The 12th Annual AIDSWalk, held in Washington, D.C., includes the construction of the National AIDS Memorial at the foot of the Lincoln Memorial. The walk began at 9:30 a.m. Saturday with an estimated 10,000 participants from 50 states and around the world.

The event, which is coordinated by the D.C. AIDS Action Network, is the largest AIDS walk in the nation and is part of a network of walks across the country.

AIDS Action Network CEO Don A. Bishaw said the walk is a way for people to come together and show their commitment to fighting the epidemic.

Bishaw said he was pleased with the turnout for this year's walk.

"We have seen a steady increase in participation over the years," he said. "This year we had more than 10,000 participants, which is a testament to the importance of the walk and the work we do."

Challenging Established Conventions

omething is rotten in the District. Twelve years ago the city opened a new convention center in the Shaw neighborhood of Washington, near Mount Vernon Square. The center was designed to bring increased tourism to the city and to provide a site for large conventions and events. But as the center was built, it became clear that many residents of the Shaw neighborhood were concerned about the impact the center would have on their lives.

The center was built on land that had been previously dedicated to public use, including a park and a school. In 1995, residents of the Shaw neighborhood went to court to challenge the construction of the center, arguing that it was built without proper environmental review. The court ruled in favor of the residents, but the city appealed the decision.

As the court case dragged on, the city decided to sue residents of the Shaw neighborhood who lived near the center, alleging that they were engaging in illegal activity. The city's action was seen as an attempt to silence residents who were speaking out against the center.

Residents of the Shaw neighborhood argue that the center has had a negative impact on their community. They claim that the noise and traffic associated with the center have made it difficult for them to live their lives. They also argue that the center has displaced long-time residents and has led to increased crime in the area.

The center has also had a negative impact on the city's economy. While it has brought in new business, it has also displaced long-time residents and has led to decreased property values.

In conclusion, the center has caused many negative effects on the community and the city. It is clear that the center was built without proper consideration for the needs of the community and that it has had a negative impact on the lives of those who live near it.

"Memo to the President: I'm here with a story that I think needs to be told..."

I'm here with a story that I think needs to be told..." said President Barack Obama. As he sat at the podium, his voice filled the room, his words resonating with purpose and passion.

"This is the story of a young man, a tale of triumph over adversity. It's the story of..." Obama continued, his eyes fixed on the audience.

But as he spoke, a shadow passed across the room, casting an eerie glow over the scene. The sound of footsteps echoed through the hallway, growing louder with each passing moment.

"...of determination and hard work. It's the story of..." Obama paused, his voice growing stronger.

But it was too late. The footsteps were closer now, the sound of clicking heels grew more distinct. And then, with a sudden burst of energy, a figure emerged from the shadows.

"...of hope and the power of the American dream." Obama concluded, his words ringing out in the room.

But the moment was short-lived. As the figure approached, the president's eyes widened in surprise. It was not the audience he expected, but something far more...

IN MANY COMPANIES IT TAKES YEARS TO PROVE YOU'RE MANAGEMENT MATERIAL....

WE'LL GIVE YOU 10 WEEKS.

Ten weeks may not seem like much time to prove you're capable of being a leader. But if you're tough, smart and determined, ten weeks and a lot of hard work could make you an Officer of Marines. And Officer Candidates School (OCS), a place where you get the chance to prove you've got what it takes to lead a life full of excitement, full of challenge, full of honor. Anyone can say they've got what it takes to be a leader, yet only ten weeks to prove it.

Bill To Increase Financial Aid Awaits Approval From Clinton

By ERICKA GOODMAN
Hilltop Writer

The House of Representatives and the Senate passed a bill last week that will increase financial aid for college students by raising the limits on and quantity of grants and federally funded work study.

The Higher Education Reconciliation Bill will help nontitle benefits of direct loans to a maximum, raise the limit on grants and work-study for eligible students, and prepare disadvantaged children for college, along with many other improvements.

Another avenue of the bill where established to exempt veterans' benefits from being canceled against students when they apply for financial aid, streamline international and graduate education, increase information for federal, hold colleges and Universities accountable for tuition increases, provide clear and precise standards for reporting col l ege costs, make the students and borrowers more responsible.

At the Iowa town meeting, graduating senior international student Latazhe Price expressed concern about loan fees, which, according to a recent

In order to graduate, the student will have to complete three years of community service. In addition, 10 students in the School of Business will be required to complete professional association for management education (AASCM) for that approved community service requirement for students.

We are leading the nation," said Dr. Ely Dorsey, chairperson of the Community Service Committee, "Staying next year, elected classes in the School of Business will be mandated to take a community service component in addition to classes during this academic year. Students will be spending an additional amount of time working on a service project of their choice.

Under the Hill Top Rail Plan in the Community Service Committee, the service activity must have academic- and career-related goals. Faculty members must work with the School of Business to ensure that the service component is in the process of discussing the best way to develop the service component to fit the needs of students.

The committee is composed of faculty members and students. Dorsey said that students have been very active in the development of the community service component.

The issue of how to improve community service between Howard University and the DC area has been a major issue. Faculty members, under the direction of the new plan, will help in the effort. The Howard and DC community members, Dr. Joe R. Williams, who teaches Business Communications in the School of Business, grow in the DC area, the former district community members will benefit from service work.

"I'll be having some students go back out, we're going to get models for the campaign in the community," she said.

The implementation plan is now in the process of being finalized. The second plan will then be sent to the Deans of the school of business. After being approved by her, it will then go to the president of the university and then to the Board of Trustees. The Community Service Committee is optimistic that the schemes will be completely approved by the end of the year. In January the group plans to begin testing the new plan on students.
