Howard University Celebrates 138th Anniversary

BY AYESHA RASCONE

Some students consider Charter Day a break from classes, it is actually a commemoration of the founding of Howard University.

Today at 11 a.m., in Cramton Auditorium, the University community will celebrate 138 years of honoring the Mecca with the Charter Day Convocation.

In addition, four Howard graduates will be honored with Distinguished Alumnae and Alumni Awards. Walter J. Leonard, Charles J. McDonald, Wilfrid Robichaud, and Thelma Burks Thompson.

This year’s Charter Day Speaker is Richard English, the provost and chief academic officer of the University. English has been present since November 1982, but has been involved with Howard for much longer.

Despite the meaning behind the event and the honor the speaker has received, some students may remain uninterested in what they should forge during and after the event.

The Messiah Has Arrived at the Amateur Apollo

BY MARCIE MOFFET

With adrenaline rushing through his veins and his heart, the Messiah, Khamani, stepped onto the Apollo Theater stage. The audience was electrified.

"After Messiah’s first show," a woman exclaimed, "I was in love. She was only 20, but..." She was overcome with emotions, her voice barely audible.

"It celebrates the founding of the University," Precious Kofie, HUSA President. "It’s an event everyone should attend because it celebrates the founding of Howard University;" says Kofie.

"It was a part of the Howard legacy," Kory Jordan, HUSA President.

"It’s a part of our birthday," Kory Jordan, HUSA President.

"It celebrates the University’s history and some of its present contributions," Matthew Salaam, UGSA Financial Advisor.

"It will be the first time the new provost has a chance to hear from one of the world’s most outstanding scholars," Franklin A. Cumberbatch, U.S. Professor of the United States.

Carol Dudley

As Carol Dudley sits at her desk, she casually drops by the side of her desk and reaches for a split second, among seemingly endless stacks and endless stacks of paper, to look at her wall of appreciation.

The wall is lined from corner to corner with cards of appreciation from students, friends and even (in the words of the John H. Johnson School of Communications Director of Career Development) for her numerous acts of assistance.

As she stands at the wall she realizes why she has dedicated 27 years to Howard University. "I think I possess an innate ability to read a person's character, and what their potential is, notice any personal non-verbal behaviors that may hinder them think straight and possible goals they wish to accomplish," she says.

Dudley, the fifth youngest of eight children, grew up in a small Italian city in Pennsylvania where she developed a knack for helping others.

"I think I come from a great stable family, where, from, being and helping others is a way of life," Dudley says. "It's been so successful than you was sort of a model in our family," she said.

Her cooperation with helping others led her to receive a bachelor's degree in speech and hearing sciences and master's degree in organizational psychology from Howard University. As the Asst. Campus Editor, Dudley has achieved what must have not been accomplished in a lifetime she said has had to overcome her share of obstacles.

She overcome by demonstrating my capabilities, just along with the best and that's working hard to get that degree, having a strong knowledge about what I do," she said. About all, Dudley states her strongest characteristic is her drive for perfection.

"I believe a person should do everything possible, who should complete a task for assignment and to make sure everyone is heard and aware. If I assessed and double check, I'd ask a cross check," Dudley said.

As a result of her drive for perfection Dudley instills these characteristics in her students and interns.

"What I do is insist and expect the best of them. To start, to have a strong work ethic, to not allow them to procrastinate and to believe in themselves," she said.

"On a personal level, Dudley provides students, especially those in her former library from away from home.

The work relationship is of close childhood and Brandon Finley, a junior business major. "But, yet she treats you as if you aren't the same as a mere intern," Finley said. She admires Dudley for her forgetfulness.

A Moment in Howard's History: Rape Crisis Seminar

BY CHRISTINA M. WRIGHT Ass. Campus Editor

According to the American Association of University Women, there were 19,450 reported rapes in 2003 of which 75 percent were committed by acquaintances. This problem has worsened for many years, but the high school and Howard University students on several occasions.

The Rape Crisis Seminar was held at the Hilltop reported that the Alpha Sweetheart Court of Howard University met on Nov. 16. According to the final presentation, the Alpha Sweetheart Court was the first sorority to address the issue of rape.

The seminar was hosted by freshman Lauren Brown. Brown's purpose was to be taken seriously, gang and rape

"I enjoyed working with Sheri this past Homecoming," said Dudley, director of Records and Services employee.

"I want to make an impression on the students that you can do anything you want," she added. I love to make a student smile," Besse Skinner, administrative assistant in the History Department.

Student Expresses Emotions Through Dance

BY SHAYNA RUDD Communications Coordinator

According to Sheri R. Frierson, a junior broadcast journalism major, dance is one of the purest form of expression. "It's personal, but it gives her the ability to express, liberate and embrace emotions." The Los Angeles native began her dance training at age three, studying at Dance Wonderland, the Debbie Allen Dance Academy and Ballet Eclectica. At Howard, she is a member of several organizations including the School of Education student council and the Non-Violent Student Counseling. She is also a five-year member of the Bisonette Dance Ensemble.

"I have one of my most fulfilling moments as a dancer and choreographer was my freshman year seeing the Bisonettes portray a dance that I choreographed during half time," she said.

Frierson has not set a new standard for the Bisonette Dance Ensemble. "I really want to thank the Bisonette Dance Ensemble because they allow me to release my craft," she said. "You ladies are the best dance team on campus, and it is a privilege to work with you."

Keystone Champagne, a freshman, radio, TV and film major, and Bisonette Dance Ensemble member, said Frierson mesmerizes him.

"Every time I watch Sheri in rehearsal or just walking across the yard, she blows my mind," Champagne said. "She never ceases to amaze me."

Frierson's skills surpass the norm and challenge those who are not used to it. "Dance is more than a way to be in the spotlight," Frierson said. "It is in every way of expression. It is my outlet."

Frierson has choreographed several dances at Howard, in Ing's dance for the Halloween Haunted Hilltop, and more recently the Mr. and Miss Howard University Pageant finale.

"I enjoyed working with Sheri this past Homecoming," said Dudley, director of Records and Services employee.

"The employee must leave what goes on at home and must release the pressure from in her students and interns.

"Students have to understand that the rules and regulations are produced by the University and not the faculty. The only problem is when persons go against the rules."

Mike Sledge, Information Systems and Services employee.

"Ninety-nine percent of the students are okay. One percent of students deep down they can do what they want. Those people hope they respect others. That's who I am trying to reach."

Daniel Brown, Sodexo employee.

"I have insisted students be handled with respect. Regardless of student's reactions, employees are trained to provide the highest service."

Seventy Bell, director of the Office of Student Financial Services.

"The employee must leave what goes on at home and must release the pressure from the University and not by the faculty. The only problem is when persons go against the rules."

Harley Woolen, access desk clerk in the I-Lab.

"Students who do not use our Howard e-mail need to access it, because we disseminate valuable information. Registration information will be sent out soon, but if students don't access their Howard e-mail, they will not receive the information."

Carol McKinnon, director of Records Department.

"I want to make an impression on the students that you can do anything you want."

James Brown, electrician.

"The student employee interaction has never been so important before. A suggestion would be to hold a forum with the students to see how we could serve them better. Students are our customers and without them there is no need for us."

Bessie Skinner, administrative assistant in the History Department.

"The only seven males to attend were all members of the Beta Theta, Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, Inc."

I was disappointed with the number of guys that came, but I was proud of the Alphas that showed up because they participated and seemed to learn a lot," Finley said.

Assembly representative and candidate in attendance are open. Sophomore English major Durell Hairston said, "I know a number of students who are running against freshmen Jennifer Burgess."

There are seven UGSA candidates in attendance this year. There are no freshmen running for a position as a write-in candidate, please visit the General Elections Commission Office located in Blackbum Building. Information, please contact the General Elections Commission at howardvotes2005_volunteer@yahoo.com. The meeting will take place in Locke Hall, Room 244. All are welcome! For additional information, please contact the UGSA Candidate Danielle Perry said some members that would be of little or no cost to the school.

Several candidates complained about the visibility of its members while others complained about the members attending assembly meetings. Several of the strongest comments came from junior political science major and UGSA representative candidate Danielle Perry. "People are tired," Perry said, speaking of people attending Wednesday's General Assembly Meeting. "I was leaving early since attendance was not taken." Perry, a junior political science major and believer in the South African hierarchy, but credit goes to success. "Through education we will see the potential candidates for the position, junior president and the president of the school."

If you are interested in running for a position as a write-in candidate, please visit the General Elections Commission Office located in Blackburn University Center, Suite 116. All write-in candidates must file an Intent to Run Form no later than Tuesday, March 8, 2005 at 5 p.m. For additional information, please contact the General Elections Commission at howardvotes2005_compliance@yahoo.com.

For additional information, please contact the General Elections Commission at howardvotes2005_volunteer@yahoo.com.
President's election in Africa

By KEVIN HARRIS

Michael Jackson's brother, Randy, has denied allegations that he abused the singer's younger sister, saying she was just a child when the abuse occurred.

"I was there," he said. "I saw it happen." Randy Jackson, who was 12 at the time, said he witnessed the abuse on several occasions and was too afraid to tell anyone.

Jackson, who now runs a foundation in his brother's name, said he has been receiving death threats since the allegations were made.

Jackson's case is just one of many in Africa where children are being abused by their parents.

The issue of child abuse has become a major concern in Africa, where many children are subjected to violence and neglect.

"It's a problem that we can't ignore," said Dr. John Doe, a child psychologist at the University of Africa.

"We need to do more to protect these children and ensure they are safe and happy."

Dudley Gives 27 Years of Dedication to School of C

"She's very willing to help you understand and learn the things that you might not know," said Patricia Godley, the administrative aid for the School of Communications Office of the Dean. "She doesn't have a problem with you coming and asking her two and three times if you didn't get it the first time."

In Dudley's opinion, her job goes far beyond helping students with academics.

"Sometimes I have to provide clothing for some students," she said. "Sometimes you feed students, sometimes you have to help students with personal problems. So when I say we're full service at career development, we're full service."

As the day comes to an end, Dudley is still hard at work talking to employers and alumni well after everyone else has left the office. The wall of appreciation as she turns out the lights and exits her office. Finally, after she has done everything she can do for one day, she slips on her shoes and takes another look at the office.

Carol Dudley takes pride in knowing that her work in the School of Communications Student Advisory Office has bettered the lives of students for almost three decades.

A BRIEF WORD TO THE CANDIDATES

UZOMA PETER LANE!

I would offer a few brief points of advice to those who seek to be the next president of Howard University.

First, to be in a position to offer such advice, considering history and poetry are more in my experience that the effective management of government, I do so with the understanding that a good idea is valued from anyone, near or far. We are a university.

My advice is simply to pursue your ideal of what society should be. A logical mind. Keep in mind the need for good leadership. Anyone who has attended almost anything may be considered a negotiator. Anyone who has attended a convocation address knows that students might not attend because we might not attend because we might. Anyone who has attended an event is motivated by the Howard family. However, alumni, faculty and alumni.

Finally, the elections process is your dream and your enemy. Here I would advise demonstrating the voting system to students before elections. Must you find that you have a problem with the system when I suggest posting along with your campaign posters detailed political platforms based on the week of the election. This allows voters to choose what they see.

I wish you all the best of luck in the future. We mean no disrespect to those that are most common of the worst enemy. Here I would feel that Dr. English has some.

The Lady Bison Prepare to Buzz Through Their Closer

BY HEATHER FAISON

The Lady Bison leading scorer, Daisha Hicks, is looking to lead the Lady Bison to victory in her last game.

The Hilltopper to the tournament where the best in the MEAC will be crowned. It is one game closer and step into Burr Gymnasium as Lady Bison with 15 points. “It’s just something that I’ve known personally the magnitude of a team to now,” he said.
