House calls for administrative audit at Howard

Appropriations committee alleges university mismanages U.S. government financial support

Howard students may have lost favor in Congress— that if an administrative audit is conducted by the House of Representatives it is in retaliation.

The proposal, one of several testimony presented in the last several years, was approved in a meeting by the House Appropriations Committee. The proposal first will be approved in the House Appropriations Committee.

The President has long been the subject of Howard's House Appropriations Committee. Alden said it would be only fair to conduct Howard's program in those universities of similar enrollments that operate a hospital, a medical school, a law school, a library and a comprehensive Ph.D. program.

To some extent among university sources that the election of Republican National Committee Chairman Lee Director in the District of Columbia for the first time in years in a more favorable environment for Howard University.

Of the Tubman Quadrangle, President Dr. Carlos P. Evans addressed the changing attitude of the university's relationship with Congress.

A subcommittee of Congress has been empowered to determine the sources of Howard's funding. Congress would be represented on the University's Board of Trustees in an effort to reduce the university's dependence on the federal government.

Plaza already beset by series of problems

For the first time in years, the Howard University administration is beset by more than a dozen student and faculty complaints.

A student-organized Howard Plaza Triage, designed to meet the needs of students, parents and visitors, was established in the fall of 1988. Howard students have faced daunting challenges in recent years, and many have stated that a new, more efficient administration is needed.

A new triage plan was made to meet the needs of more than 100 students, parents and visitors, who come to Howard's campus for a number of reasons.

An influx of new students quickly filled the West Tower. Students have moved into the dormitory, and the student population has doubled.

The West Tower dormitory is currently the most popular dormitory for students.

Other problems have surfaced.

‘Every night this hard a week. It’s been too loud,” said 23-year-old Jennifer Martin, a first-year medical student, of the Plaza on September 1, 1989.

Mary Lewis, a Howard University sophomore from Montgomery, Md., was recently denied her regular contact with the outside world when she removed her belongings to storage.

"I don’t know if I’ve ever been out of reach,” she said.

Lewis is one of approximately 400 students from Howard, Georgetown, Catholic, George Washington and Loyola Marymount University, who have filled complaints against Bobby Brown of the College’s "storage service." Because of Brown’s alleged negligence, many of the students’ personal property is in danger of being, "lost forever,” of course.

A student-copy of "99," the Howard newspaper, states that the university’s(storage service) is "lost in a storage unit at Delphi, Md., while leaving many of their lost items might be stored there.

According to Lt. Arthur Gray of the Howard University police, the students have problems recovering their belongings because Brown, instead of storing all of the property himself, stored all of the students items with several different storage companies and then failed to pay the bills.

The independent storage companies said they would not return any of the property until the bills have been paid and have threatened to seek the students to recover the belongings. The tenants at Storage, Wednesday afternoon.

Tuesday night mayhem:
Howard students gather outside the Tubman Quadrangle following Tuesday night's blackout. Students were left waiting in the dark after a transformer explosion led to a blackout. Firefighters were on the scene to help with safety measures. The event caused significant disruption to daily life on campus. Students were scattered throughout the area, some waiting outside buildings, while others sought shelter in nearby locations. The event highlighted the importance of emergency preparedness and the need for robust safety protocols in place during such incidents.

Explosion cancels Med classes
By Nina Maxwell

A transformer explosion that occurred on the Howard University campus on Tuesday night caused a temporary shutdown of medical classes. Firefighters responded to the scene to ensure safety, and students were advised to evacuate the area. The explosion caused power outages across campus, leading to the cancellation of classes for the evening.

Students see changes in registration

By Shovon Freeman and Andrea Marrone

The University of Maryland, College Park, has implemented changes to its registration process, causing some students to experience difficulties. The changes include new procedures for curriculum changes, co-enrollment in courses, and the addition of a new online registration system. Students have reported issues with the new system, leading to long wait times and confusion. The university is working to address these concerns and improve the registration process.

We need volunteers! Volunteers! And more volunteers!

This year, Howard students will have an opportunity to earn credits in an AIDS consortium course for the first time through the Metropolitan Area Consortium.

The experimental three-credit course, entitled "AIDS: The Medical, Legal, and Policy Implications," is co-sponsored by the Silver of George Washington University and supported by area consortium campuses. Students will be able to interact with Silver and other students by telephone.

The class will meet on Tuesdays from 11:50 a.m. to 1:50 p.m. in the Computer Science Building, contact Dr. Earl H. Braze, Executive Assistant to the Vice President for Academic Affairs in Room 300 of the Moden at Wray. Johnson Administration Building (666-600).

H.U. student trains with NASA

Howard junior, Sophia Lewis, took part in a summer program this year that enabled her to gain first-hand knowledge about the way NASA designs and prepares life science experiments for flight aboard space shuttles.

Lewis was one of 56 students chosen from across the United States to participate in the USA Space Life Sciences Training Program, held each summer at the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Florida.

The six-week program introduces college students to the application of life science experiments for potential flight aboard a space shuttle.

Jackson promotes voter registration

Jesse L. Jackson delivered a message about voter registration and education in his last campaign tour for funding. His message was aimed at filling the party's register with black voters.

Jackson also urged voters to turn out in large numbers to support the party's candidates. He said that by registering and voting, voters can help to ensure that their voices are heard in the political process.

Nissan Corp. gives HBCU’s summer management lessons

By Laura C. Harris

In an effort to encourage blacks to excel in business, the Nissan Motor Corporation in the U.S. sponsored a week-long training seminar comprised of 25 management professors, students and former employees from historically black colleges and universities (HBCU) across the country, at UCLA last summer.

The two-week event was composed of mostly finance professors. The goal was to advance management knowledge and to inculcate in the students the idea that the line between what they’ve learned in school and what they learn be damned better together,” said Alan Larsen, program spokesperson.

Professors from Spelman College (Ga.), Tulane University (La.), Howard University (Md.) and Delaware State College (Del.) were among the participating in the program.

Philip Edgar-Obarse, finance professor from Delaware State College, shared his experience in the program.

"First and foremost, I was impressed with the enthusiasm of faculty members who delivered the lectures. This is the one time, we had the best professors — Eugene Filsa and Michael Brenner, for example," Edgar-Obarse said.

The finance instructor explained Filsa was president of the American University student, said Evanston, Ill. Will focus on marketing.

Consumer groups started demanding the ratings after a 1984 study showed that absorbency ratings increased the user's risk of toxic shock syndrome, a potentially fatal infection.

Dr. Lorna Fania, one-time political candidate for president of the United States, has thrown her support behind the Federal Food and Drug Administration which has been criticized by responding to absorbency ratings in an urgent bulletin and has thus failed to adequately inform and protect the public, on this important health issue.

"We gave advanced management lessons to encourage blacks to head for tampons during the program," said Annie Roboff, Fullam's spokesperson.

Imagine Howard University—the nexus of mismanagement, the capstone of ineffectiveness—being audited.

Historically, a monumental understating that the U.S. Congress seems eager to initiate. Well, declare it to be the coup, that time has come.

To be clear, this is not about the money. This is about the misuse, the manipulation of the money, before even its release. The full oversight should be a mandate for all federal funding agencies.

The police attack on N.W.A was massive enough to cause the group to flee the stage and the audience, bringing their show to an abrupt end.

N.W.A does have many negative lyrics on their current album, but "The Police," in our case, is in a consensual state with an underlying positive message.

Why is it that as African-American youth make raps about selling drugs, disrespecting women, and killing each other, the powers-that-be are perfectly content to just sit by and watch in mental/physically destroy ourselves. But when hip-hop lyrics begin to expose the reality of black life in America, and urge African-Americans to "fight the man," we are censored.

We know why. N.W.A is saying the exact same thing—in different language of course—that another group of West Coast brothers known as the Black Panthers said a generation ago. The Black Panthers were systematically destroyed by the U.S. government for what they said. We are going through the same exact thing.

For far too many brothers and sisters have lost their lives in an agelessly systematic and senselessly due to racist violence incurred at the hands of authority. "If you listened to all the media reports and confrontations on all the negatives, you would believe that the institution is a terrible place. But that is not true. The history, tradition, location, open and transparent that are available to you in this one place is sometimes overwhelming."

If we tuned in to all the media reports and confrontations on all the negatives, we would believe that the institution is a terrible place. But that is not true. The history, tradition, location, openness and transparency that are available to you in this one place is sometimes overwhelming.

The P.G. County Police Department itself is currently embroiled in a bitter racial controversy over the beating of a black man, Philip Halab, this past May by two of their officers during what the police said was a routine traffic stop.

Where were the police when Michael Stewart was killed in Howard Beach? Where were they a couple of weeks ago in Boston when14-year-old Huwasee was shot to death by a gang of white men? The police aren’t upset because N.W.A brings a negative message to their audience. They’re upset because these are brothers straight out of the “hood,” who have neither fear nor respect for anyone who doesn’t respect them. They are hated because they challenge the status quo and uncompromising hold on and use of financial and political capital—within the scope of this society.

But in a time of massive unification, it is the best of times, it is the worst of times.

Howard University is on the brink of becoming one of the best, others not so well. A new report by Howard will be the talk of the town. This university—frequented by the Black Panthers and the present-day Black student body—frequented by the Black student body and frequented by the students. The administration has talked more than it has done. It has changed the position and intends to make substantial program on issues that concern the students. Dear Students,

It is the best of times, it is the worst of times. Hard as it is for many to believe, the Howard University has made a tremendous leap forward in the last year. The university has made tremendous progress in the last year.

Many Black men have nothing to lose but liberty. Life is meaningless, often brutal, and the future is bleak. This feeling of powerlessness has created a need for people to have a knowledge of self, to learn their ancestors, and to create music that moves people, create writing, music, and drama.

We would like you to believe the truth. We would like you to believe that the university has made a tremendous leap forward in the last year. This feeling of powerlessness has created a need for people to have a knowledge of self, to learn their ancestors, and to create music that moves people, create writing, music, and drama.

I am still here, my love for the black people, my appreciation for the beauty of the culture and my ancestors has grown tremendously, as you will see.

If we were to return to the time when we were preparing to graduate, we were not a family. Now, we are a family. And we are proud.

Earlier this year, in London, C. L. R. James died at the age of 87. Widely known in the United States, James was one of the most important black political figures of the 20th century.

Born in Trinidad, James travelled to England in the early 1930s and quickly established himself as a leading cultural and political figure. His first major work, "Black Jacobins," gave the world a vivid picture of the Jacobin movement in 19th-century Haiti.

Back in Trinidad, when James received the news of the death of Mahatma Gandhi in 1948, he had the Sunday Express, the major Trinidadian newspaper, change the death notice from "Mahatma Gandhi, Indian freedom fighter" to "Mahatma Gandhi, world freedom fighter." His commitment to world freedom was matched by his commitment to world unity.

In the 1940s and early 1950s, James began to work in the United States, involving himself in political organizations and lecturing about the black movement in this country.

He recruited a young African-American student named Kwame Nkrumah to join the Pan-African movement, and he also helped to found the African National Congress in the United States. His work helped to spark a growing movement for black liberation and the independence of Africa and the Caribbean within the context of the anti-imperialist struggle against the advance of fascism.

In 1951, James was arrested on charges of seditious conspiracy, but his defense was so strong that his conviction was overturned, and he was freed in 1953. He then began to write books, including "The Black Jacobins," which is now considered a classic of political literature.

James's "Black Jacobins" is a study of the time of initial uprising, and for two decades it ran out of print entirely. James's name political analysis was largely ignored and left out of the discussion of the United States.

Back in Trinidad, when James returned to the United States, he was faced with a new and different set of political and economic problems. His works were banned, and for a time he was placed under house arrest.

James's "Notes on Oxfords," written at the beginning of the Cold War, was a critique of the Cold War and the philosophy which leads to authoritarian social control.

Why is James important? His intellectual legacy is fundamental and central to the movement. Unlike most political figures, James argued that the black American working class had its own vitality and unique political history. He believed in the potential of all races to contribute to the world.

Second, James emphasized the role of culture, including sports and culture, in the political and economic struggles of the people. In "The Black Jacobins," he argued that the black American working class had its own cultural heritage and its own cultural identity.

The Black Jacobins is the best book ever written about the Haitian revolution. It is the story of one of the most successful slave rebellions in history. While in Trinidad, argued that the black American working class had its own cultural heritage and its own cultural identity.

The writer was a professor of political science at the University of California.

A Groove's philosophy: Become part of your community

I would like to welcome all new and returning students to Howard University for the 1990-91 school year. I believe that all the goals you have prepared for in the summer are not further secured by the fact that you have been here before. It is my intention to get to the core of the community that you will be residing in for the next three months.

Second, James emphasized the role of the individual student. He argued that the individual student had the responsibility of setting the tone for the entire community. In "The Black Jacobins," he wrote about the importance of the individual student in setting the tone for the entire community.

While in Trinidad, argued that the black American working class had its own cultural heritage and its own cultural identity. He believed in the potential of all races to contribute to the world.

Here's how you can become part of the community:

First, you should become familiar with the people around you. Make an effort to get to know your peers and become aware of their interests and backgrounds.

Second, you should become familiar with the people who live in your dormitory. Make an effort to get to know your neighbors and become aware of their interests and backgrounds.

Third, you should become familiar with the people who live in your neighborhood. Make an effort to get to know your community members and become aware of their interests and backgrounds.

Finally, you should become familiar with the people who live in your city. Make an effort to get to know your city leaders and become aware of their interests and backgrounds.

I hope that by the time you graduate, you will be prepared to become part of the community that you will be living in for the next three months.

For your safety

The writer is in a position of the university.

"Murder Capital of the World,"

But crime statistics have not been kept up to date. Washington, D.C. is a city in which murder is the leading cause of death. For your safety, make sure you are aware of the danger.

Unfortunately, too much is being done to avoid discussion of the need for self-defense. When we discuss self-defense, we are warning people to be on guard. This is not only harmful, it is dangerous.

Second, we need to be aware of the dangers of the streets. We need to be aware of the dangers of the streets and protect ourselves.

Third, we need to be aware of the dangers of the streets and protect ourselves.

I hope that you will take these suggestions to heart and be prepared to protect yourself.

South Africa is facing growing pressure to make changes in its apartheid system. After President P.W. Botha offered last week to begin talks with the African National Congress (ANC), a new wave of protests swept the country.

Two candidates dropped out of the running, thus placing the African National Congress at the head of the pack with a 64-80 margin. In addition, Pretoria's apartheid policies are being challenged by a new generation of ANC leaders, who are demanding more rapid change.

Although it is using them in other ways, the ANC said it would use the talks to try to negotiate on the ANC's list of demands, including free elections and the end of apartheid. At the same time, it has also been making moves to improve its internal organization, with the ANC's national executive committee meeting next week.

"We are reaching out toward a new era of political change," de Klerk said.

"In the final analysis, we will be judged as a nation by the character we develop without allowance for the circumstances of the country," de Klerk added.

"The trial itself, and the way it is conducted, will be a test of the country's future," de Klerk said. "If we can move beyond the trials, we can move beyond the past.

"We see that the ANC's proposals are not radical, and that we can work together for the betterment of all South Africans."

But some observers believe that the ANC's proposals are not enough to bring about real change in South Africa. They argue that the ANC must take more action to end apartheid and to make the country more democratic.

New things ready for challenge

By Gc Johnson

As the days went on and the main became a reality, the coaching staff was traveling throughout Howard University.

It's a time when a moment ever evaluates his past and focuses on his future for the upcoming year. No, not the general public- it's the coaching staff that is most critical to the program. The coaching staff has faced since Mr. Burgess became head coach. No, not the obvious. There were long lines again for the new year and Howard 100 again. Nobody loses. This fall is Steve Wilson who is passing the familiar Jen, just like those new concerns. Whatever because there is no football team. You know what? But Wilson said his own defense play was familiar with. "It's going out!" Wilson said. "It's going out!"

After the season, so many questions are being asked about the coaching staff, but this year, there's no question. There's no question that Wilson is the new coach.

Wilson was faced with a system that was the same as the previous season. The wide receivers were known as the best in the conference. The wide receiving corps did not have any problems. Johnson said. "The wide receiving corps did not have any problems. Wilson said. "The wide receiving corps did not have any problems."

But Wilson said his own defense play was familiar with. "It's going out!" Wilson said. "It's going out!"

The defensive line, with its strength and experience, is ready. In the lineman, Willie Jeffries is still the leader of the defense. Jeffries was a third team all-conference selection. Jeffries was familiar with the defense and his excellent size makes him the new creation - the 1989 Bison football team. Jeffries was a third team all-conference selection. FDA approves AIDS treatments
AZT, NebuPent provide new hope for AIDS patients.

By Starrs Phillips and Marra Marie
Hilltop Staff Report

There is now hope for AIDS patients in the form of two new FDA approved drugs, Nebupent (TM) and AZT. On an AIDS drug campaign was conducted this summer. The study has shown 650,000 Americans are aware of the disease, but show no symptoms. However, 12 million Americans are unaware they have AIDS.

The FDA approved the drugs in the battle against life-threatening diseases that can be transmitted by confirmed AIDS works when the immune system has been seriously destroyed by AIDS. The drug is used to aid the disease by preventing the symptoms from progressing.

No Pain, No Gain!

Athletes workout to yesterday's myths

By Starrs Phillips
Hilltop Staff Report

Although we live in a modern society, it is safe to say that many athletes and fitness fanatics will do just about anything to get to the next level. Science is the key philosophy in the fitness industry.

According to Dr. William B. Weil, M.D., medical director of Loyola Union Hospital's Sports Medicine Clinic, athletes who want to excel must incorporate the principles of one of the most stable falsehoods in sports.

"For those athletes who believe in myths about working through pain, they may find that their bodies instead of being oiled are being oiled. It is not a solution to further injury," Weil said.

According to Weil, the myth that "no pain, no gain" is over stated.

"I am speaking to those individuals who believe that any pain that they feel while working out is not some signal that something is wrong," Weil said.

Adding to Weil's dictum, Dr. William B. Montes, M.D., director of Athletics, William Montes believes that certain levels of discomfort experienced will depend on how intense the exercise is and how much stress is placed on the body. Weil believes that what he feels should not exceed 10 on a scale of 1 to 10.

According to Montes, once the body is in good working condition one should not experience pain. In the preparatory stages there will be some soreness in the body as it adapts to the extra work load.

There are many myths that should not be believed by athletes and the fitness oriented. One of these myths is to never drink anything before exercising.

"More people dehydration faster than they realize. Therefore, some physicians recommend drinking 8 to 10 glasses of fluid before exercising, and then periodically throughout the duration of the workout," Montes said.

"I should drink water before practice; I should drink water before practice," Montes said.

"According to Montes, the importance of taking salt pills to replenish depleted sodium during exercise is that salt pills and other sodium are necessary.

"Taking in additional salt only depletes the sodium levels further," Montes said.

Individuals who believe that one needs more moisture while working out can benefit from water and not salt tablets.

N.W.A makes headlines with controversial lyrics

By Sharon Peek

African American school districts are under scrutiny and criticism for what educators perceive as controversial music in their classrooms.

Despite the controversy, N.W.A's latest album, "Straight Outta Compton," continues to sell well and receive critical acclaim.

The band's recent performance at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md., drew mixed reactions from fans and critics alike.

N.W.A's music, known for its raw and explicit content, has been a source of debate for years, with some praising its honesty and others criticizing its violent and controversial lyrics.

The album contains songs that explore themes of police brutality, gang violence, and racism.

The group's lead vocalist, Ice Cube, said the album was inspired by his own experiences growing up in Compton, Calif., a city known for its high crime rates and heavy gang presence.

The album's release sparked discussions about the portrayal of African American life in the media and the responsibility of artists to address social issues.

Despite the controversy, N.W.A's music continues to be popular, with fans and critics alike praising its raw energy and authenticity.

The band's next scheduled performance is in Detroit, Mich., on Oct. 6, at the DTE Energy Music Theater.

Temple Digest / News in Brief

Rhythm and blues concert tomorrow

By Sharon Peek

A rhythm and blues concert is scheduled for tomorrow at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md.

The concert features performances by some of the biggest names in the genre, including Soul, James Brown, and Aretha Franklin.

The event is being promoted as a "Temple Test Drive" to showcase the venue's new sound system.

The concert is expected to attract a large crowd of music fans, with tickets priced at $25 per person.

Poetry writers could win $1000

The American Poetry Association is offering a poetry contest for students in grades 9-12, with prizes of $1000 for the winner and $500 for the runner-up.

The contest is open to students in all 50 states, with entries due by March 1.

The winners will be announced in June, with their work published in the American Poetry Review.

Minority writers wanted for movies

The American Film Institute is seeking minority writers to work on its upcoming blockbuster movie, "The Lion King.

The film's producers are looking for writers with experience and a passion for storytelling.

The successful candidates will receive a stipend and have the opportunity to work with industry veteran directors.

If anyone would be interested in volunteering for the program, I would be happy to help.

Attention:

Are you one of those compassionate, understanding individuals who would be interested in corresponding with people who are in need of help and would be willing to share your time with us, hopefully?

Applications for Telephone Company Volunteers are due by October 31st.

Contact: Hope Thompson - C-360, or Alice Robison Jr. - C-365.
