According to Robert Freewoods, director of University communications, Combs is considered an enduring title that they’ve earned for $500,000, a check for $500,000.

Although he did not graduate from Howard, he has attended from the Fall of 1987 to the Spring of 1990.

“Howard University’s definition encompasses those who have attended the University for two years,” Freewoods said. “They did not have to graduate. They have not attended and graduated from Howard University, although they have attended Howard from the Fall of 1987 to the Spring of 1990.”

Many Howardians say they’re not the only person who has attended the university who has not graduated.

“My education at Howard was in A&M Lady Rattlers, in Richmond, Va. The Lady Rattlers are my school,” said Bironlo Forte.

“During the $250 a plateinner, ‘This award means a great University, and the saying, you can always go home,’ Combs said.

“Many have questioned the second part of the University’s definition, but Webster’s Ninth New College Dictionary defines an alumnus as ‘someone who has attended and graduated from educational schools.’

Still, many Howardians say they’re not the only person who has attended the university who has not graduated.

“My education at Howard was in A&M Lady Rattlers, in Richmond, Va. The Lady Rattlers are my school,” said Bironlo Forte.

“During the $250 a plateinner, ‘This award means a great University, and the saying, you can always go home,’ Combs said.”

Elections Flawed, Students Charge

While Several Graduate Students Say They Couldn’t Vote At The Polls, Undergraduates Allowed To Vote In Grad Trustee Race

Nearly two years after the primary election, several students are still considering the handling of the election.

Several graduate students say they weren’t allowed to vote in the preliminary race.

“Students should be able to vote in the general election,” said increment graduate student Rory Sydney.

“We know how to vote; we just didn’t vote,” said graduate student Steve Johnson.

Two booths in the Howard Student Center were unstaffed.

“Students shouldn’t have to worry about who is there,” saidincrement graduate student Kodak Story.

“I was disappointed that the mall was closing,” said Dele Song. “I figured they would want to stay open to get more sales,” he said, adding that he doesn’t want things to continue to close in the mall, so they want to minimize the closing.

After ambushing a group of female students on ‘The Yard,’ Cambron said he returned from the West Towers shortly after the snowstorm.

“I was disappointed that the mall was closing,” said Dele Song. “I figured they would want to stay open to get more sales,” he said, adding that he doesn’t want things to continue to close in the mall, so they want to minimize the closing.

At the former Asia Baye Bar and Grill in Annapolis, Maryland, the Department of Political Science and the University of Maryland Eastern Shore held a political science conference on March 12. The conference was titled "The Role of Political Science in the 21st Century" and focused on the importance of political science in today's world.

The conference featured a range of speakers, including political scientists, policymakers, and activists. The opening keynote speaker was Dr. Linda bowl, a political scientist from the University of California, Berkeley. She spoke about the role of political science in understanding and addressing contemporary issues such as global poverty, climate change, and political extremism.

Other speakers included Dr. John Smith, a political scientist from Harvard University, who discussed the impact of political science on policy-making; Dr. Emily Davis, a political activist from New York City, who spoke about the importance of public engagement in political science; and Dr. Michael White, a political scientist from the University of Virginia, who discussed the role of political science in promoting social justice.

The conference also included a panel discussion on "The Future of Political Science," moderated by Dr. Martin Green, a political scientist from the University of Michigan. The panelists included Dr. Sarah Brown, a political scientist from the University of California, Los Angeles, Dr. John Smith, and Dr. Emily Davis.

The conference was well-attended, with over 200 attendees from various academic institutions and community organizations. The event was sponsored by the Department of Political Science and the University of Maryland Eastern Shore.

One of Howard's Best Kept Secrets: The Department of Curriculum and Instruction

The Department of Curriculum and Instruction, located in the School of Education, is the teacher training unit for the College of Arts and Sciences. The department offers two degree programs: the Bachelor of Arts in Education and the Master of Arts in Education. The department is committed to providing high-quality teacher education programs that prepare future educators to meet the challenges of a diverse and changing world.

The Department will host an open house on Wednesday, March 12, from 4:00-6:00 pm, in the School of Education, room 103. The open house is an opportunity for prospective students to learn more about the programs offered by the Department of Curriculum and Instruction. The event will feature presentations by faculty members, a Q&A session, and a tour of the facilities.

For more information, please contact Dr. Jeffery J. Miller, Chair of the Department of Curriculum and Instruction, at jmiller@howard.edu or 410-650-1080.

weird because they didn't have prop or registrars. The newly formed "Citizens of 2000" was a major effort in the city to make it easier for voters to register and to vote. The city's efforts to improve voter registration and voting turned out to be quite successful. Over 85% of all registered voters voted. The results were announced on Monday, with Vision Millenium winning with 29% of the vote, followed by Student Affairs with 21%, and the other two candidates with 16% and 16% respectively. The candidates said they were impressed with the turnout and were encouraged to continue their efforts.

Combs Donates $500,000

Combs, who donated the money, is a businessman and philanthropist who has given generously to Howard University. He said he was pleased to see the university do well and hoped that other businesses would follow his example. The money will be used to support scholarships and academic programs at the university. The university's President, Dr. Wayne Smith, expressed gratitude for the donation and said it would make a significant difference in the university's ability to support its students.

Provest Roundtable Discussion

Howard University Provost
Antoine Garibaldi discussed academic issues during a roundtable discussion with the Hilltop on Thursday Feb. 16. The Provost outlined several key issues of concern to the Howard community. Following are some questions from the discussion.

The Hilltop: My first question is dealing with my friends in the dorm. "I had a snowball fight." --Asa McGary, Sophomore, Biology

Garibaldi: Well, it simply is encouraged that students would have the opportunities to have fun and to relax.

The Hilltop: I was interested in knowing that previous years, 20 to 30 percent of all African Americans who receive baccalaureate degrees annually. The slight majority of the more than 200,000 African American students are the higher education. So think about those numbers. Fifteen percent at Howard, 45 percent in two-year colleges, that's a lot present right there. And the other eighty-four percent are kind of spread all over college and institutions across the United States. Those add to the financial issue very definitely has to be encouraged and pursued of that in order to get the right to vote. And, keep this in mind as well, so really the encouragement and the motivation. And keep this in mind as well, it isn't out by much. If you look at Howard, it's less than 20 percent, and, if you look at HBCU's, it's less than 20 percent of all African Americans who are underrepresented in those institutions.

Garibaldi: Well, I'm not pleased about it. You can test and not have to vote, but Steven knows this, that does not typically occur. What usually occurs is that an individual gets two degrees, and they just kind of step back. I do think that's a really critical issue. And then we look at Historically Black Colleges. We're graduating, in 1994, about 99 percent, the rest of the country, few years have been graduates of Historically Black Colleges. And those degrees, you know, the ability to decide whether or not to vote. And then, you know, the bylaws will also be amended by school or college specific bylaws, so that in some instances, students who are not taking courses in schools, but they can have some participation as opposed to voting. So those core rules, really open up the opportunity for all students to participate in student organizations. And then, even if they don't get involved at Howard University.

Garibaldi: When I look at all of the students who I've come across, the last 10 years, those students have not been motivated, the African American students in the way that we would like for them to be. We would like things, at some point, that African American students have arrived. We feel the fact of the matter is that we still are underrepresented in higher education, and this whole notion of the right. That is one of the reasons for a system of reinforcement and encouragement for students to consider college or college system and community service, that is a tool. So, if that is, because if you look at the amount of money that an individual who has a baccalaureate degree, that is one of the reasons for a system of reinforcement and encouragement for students to consider college or college system and community service, that is a tool. So, if that is true, is true, if you look at Howard, it's less than 20 percent, and, if you look at HBCU's, it's less than 20 percent of all African Americans who are underrepresented in those institutions.

It’s Tea Time in the District

By ANGELICA MORRISON

Hilltop Staff Writer

Sitting on the base of a sculpture in Dupont Circle, Dean Sanchez performs a reading of her poetry, inviting the audience to join in their own reading. Her poems resonate with the struggles of the award-winning artist, Sanchez is not just a poet, but also an active member in getting the Black Studies department of the university.

Sanchez’s novel, ‘Shake Loose My Skin,’ explores themes of identity and resistance. Through her poetry and prose, she encourages the audience to question societal norms and to stand up for their beliefs.

Sanchez believes in the power of her art to inspire change. She often collaborates with other artists and community members to create workshops and readings that encourage dialogue and empowerment. Her work has been featured in various venues, including coffee shops and libraries.

Sanchez’s poetry inspires students to think critically about their own experiences and to find their own voices. She encourages them to speak up against injustices and to fight for what they believe in.
Attention Faculty, Staff and Students:

The Commission on Higher Education
Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools will be visiting Howard University

March 14th-17th

to thoroughly assess the University’s resources, programs, services and facilities for reaccreditation.

We ask for your cooperation and support during this most important endeavor.
Welcome to the new Howard University Banner Interactive Student Information On-Line Network (HU B.I.S.O.N.). HU B.I.S.O.N. provides Howard University students with a fast and convenient way to reserve classes.

With HU B.I.S.O.N. you can reserve courses from any touch-tone (push button) telephone with tone dialing. (A telephone without an electronic sound will not work.)

You must be academically and financially eligible and currently enrolled.

SPECIAL NOTE: You must pay for all reserved classes by August 1, 1999 to be officially enrolled.

Requirements

1. See your academic advisor and obtain advisor's approval signature for courses selected.

2. Complete the Course Registration Worksheet.

Information Required Before Accessing HU B.I.S.O.N.

1. NEW STUDENT ID NUMBER. We added 001 to your PREVIOUS Student ID Number to create your 8-digit NEW Student ID Number.

Example: CURRENT Student ID Number: 012345
NEW Student ID Number: 001012345

NOTE: When prompted to enter Student ID Number, enter 8 numerical digits only.

2. PIN (Personal Identification Number). Your PIN is your date of birth.

Example: DOB: February 14, 1990
PIN: 021490

3. Course Reference Number (CRN). This 5-digit number replaces department, course and section numbers.

Example: OLD: 008-001-01 ENGLISH
NEW: 12345

Call HU B.I.S.O.N. at 202-806-4537 between 8:00 am and 11:30 pm Monday, March 29 through Friday, April 9, 1999.

You have 15 minutes to complete your call. The system will tell you when you are reaching your time limit. Before you hang up, you must confirm each course you've added or dropped. This may take a few minutes. Be patient. If you hang up before confirming your new courses, you will lose your courses (i.e., courses will not be entered into HU B.I.S.O.N.).

HU B.I.S.O.N. will prompt you by asking you to provide the following information:

A. Student ID Number:

   (enter 8 numerical digits only)

B. PIN

   (enter your date of birth - month, day, year)

HU B.I.S.O.N. will spell your last name and pause before asking you the next question.

Use the Student Reference Manual and Directory of Classes to select the Course Reference/Request Number (CRN) of courses for which you want to register. Select alternate CRNs in case you first choice is not available.

R"rent occasions on campus have raised concern about safety on Howard’s campus. Beatings and muggings have been observed in the Medical School and at the West Towers, among other places. The University must beef up its security, or risk losing students to the competition.

Blue lights are available at Howard but stations all over campus are confusing. The problem is that students don’t trust the system. And with valid reason.

Students are alarmed because, when walking past the blue lights, one hears noises coming from the speakers. Sometimes they are loud and not even on. But the system is rough. They’re not sure if it really works. And before it did. There were some incidents where the system was not operational because they were not being maintained.

Is It All About The Benjamins?

According to T. J. Combs, a hip-hop star and Howard alum, it’s all about the money. Combs was honored for his great success in the music industry, and is known for producing leaders that uplift the black community. So what was the University doing by honoring Combs but completing two years in the medical school? It doesn’t make sense. It’s like a slap in the face. Combs is not to be admired for his music, but for his contributions to science or a breakthrough in the medical field. What the University did was to put a price tag on success. They’re saying, “it’s all about the benjamins” as Combs said? And that hesitation can cost them their lives, or, if they’re lucky, only their cash and credit cards.

In most of all, Howard must get security that does their job—protecting the students. They need to be there at all hours, not just during the day or when they feel like working.

We don’t need to hire people who took the job for an easy paycheck—this is serious. Our lives are on the line.

Is Faulty Elections Faulty?

A number of discrepancies in the March 3rd Primary Elections have surfaced, raising the question of whether they were legal or legitimate. If not, must the student body call for a recall?

A number of students have stepped forward admitting that they had the opportunity to vote for both graduate and undergraduate trustee.

It doesn’t take a rocket scientist to figure out that undergraduate students were excluded for undergraduate reasons, and graduate students vote for graduate positions. But somehow, students were allowed to vote. For some reason or another, the number reported is not accurate. If multiple counts of this damage have reached the Administration, there seems to be a lack of truth.

The number of votes cast by graduate students were turned away from the polls, and those who were

Many professional students have complained that the polls were out of their reach, causing them not to vote honestly, and that hesitation can cost them their lives, or, if they’re lucky, only their cash and credit cards.

We don’t need to hire people who took the job for an easy paycheck. This is serious. Our lives are on the line.

Those That Tend To Differ At The Mecca

That's the kind of man I was.

To Catch a Killer

KIMOTHY K. BROWN

Tupac Shakur, Biggie Smalls, Wallac
e. He was fatally shot in Los Angeles following the Soul Train Music Awards. His death came almost exactly six months after the death of his friend and competitor, Notorious B.I.G., who was also fatally shot in New York City. Both murders remain unsolved mysteries.

Tupac, Biggie and a Sneak Peek at The Mecca

In the Washington City Paper, I was asked to write a profile of Tupac Shakur, who was shot to death late last year. Also, my friend and roommate Anderson was shot to death last year. He was a junior at Howard University, studying government and politics. His death left a hole in the hearts of many who knew and loved him.

Kimothy K. Brown is a junior broadcast journalism major and sports editor of The Hilltop.

Her Side of the Story

Keeya Graves

I was a freshman living in Drew Hall when Tupac passed away. I was shocked at first, but realized that perhaps we were all just a little too close. I remember feeling sad, but also determined to keep moving forward. Tupac was a big part of my life and I know that he would want us to keep going.

Tupac's death came six months before the release of his album, "Me Against the World," which included the hit single "Me and the Devil," a message to his family and friends that he was in control of his destiny and that he would rise above the challenges of the music industry. Tupac's death was a shock to many, but it also served as a reminder of the dangers that can come with success in the music industry.

The fact of the matter is that once Howard's most distinguished graduates were people like Zeke Zeke, Howard historian, Howard baseball coach, Howard baseball player, Howard baseball manager, and Howard baseball analyst. The essay did include the views of Howard historians, Howard baseball players, and former Howard students, but it did not include the views of Howard baseball fans.

Tupac's death was a tragedy for many, but it also served as a reminder of the importance of remembering those who have passed and the impact they have had on our lives.

Kimothy K. Brown is a junior broadcast journalism major and sports editor of The Hilltop.

Gene: Discovery May Answer America's Weighted Questions

By Tracy Auer
Billing Staff Writer

Reagan McGaughey, a freshman sociology major, is a size 13-14, and according to society she is "overweight." However, McGaughey feels she is "here to serve" and not as others may perceive. She enjoys poetry, likes to work out and does not believe she is overweight. McGaughey has been what many consider as "overweight" since childhood. She is comfortable with her weight and feels that she is normal for her. McGaughey practices with the track team and works off her weight, but she would not consider herself "overweight."

Weight and health

The popular belief of "overweight" has surfaced in the 1990s. Women and men think that being overweight is not healthy. People are trying to get the network to be able to understand why these people are overweight.

Some people may be overweight for various reasons. Some people may be overweight because they have a disease, medical condition, or are taking medications. Others may be overweight due to lifestyle choices, poor diet, and lack of physical activity.

Overweight, in this context, refers to having excess body fat. It can be caused by genetic factors, environment, and lifestyle choices. However, it is important to note that being overweight does not necessarily mean being unhealthy.

The issue of weight is complex and can have both physical and psychological impacts. It is important to approach the topic with sensitivity and empathy while encouraging healthy lifestyle choices.

Sanchez: A True Force For The Masses

By Kevin Graves

The love for poetry is on the rise. Poetry has been popping up all over city and people are pack ing out in droves to hear it. Sanchez is one of those people who are reading or hearing the microphone to share the stories.

Sanchez, 28, is a self-taught writer and performer. She started writing poetry at the age of 14 and has been performing since then. Sanchez is an award-winning author and a professor of English and Writing at Temple University. She is the author of several books, including "The House of the Hanged Man," which was selected for the "Best of the 1990s" award by Publishers Weekly.

Sanchez is a popular writer among the audience. Her poems often explore themes of love, loss, and the human condition. Her work has been featured in various literary journals and magazines.

In her poem, "For a Moment," Sanchez speaks about the mistakes and lessons she has learned in life. She writes about the beauty of life and the importance of living in the present.

Sanchez has been writing poetry for over a decade. She started out by reading her work at local poetry readings and逐渐 gained a following. Her poems have been featured in several anthologies and literary journals.

Sanchez is also a visual artist and has created several art installations that explore themes of love, loss, and the human condition. She has exhibited her work in various galleries and museums.

Sanchez's poetry is deeply personal and evokes a sense of empathy and understanding. Her work has been praised for its raw emotion and honesty.

Sanchez has been featured in various media outlets and has given readings and workshops at various venues.

In conclusion, Sanchez is a true force for the masses. Her poetry is accessible, relatable, and meaningful to a wide range of readers. She is a voice for the underdog, a storyteller of the human condition, and a powerful reminder of the beauty of life.

JT Money Comes Correct with "Who Dat?"

By Jason Stuart

Billing Staff Writer

Watch out Mister "Your" "unneggable" is playing out. The South has a new anthem. And JT is its father.

"Who dat?," you ask? JT Money, formerly of The Pontiac Club, has knocked the视察 off the charts. This is his latest single from his upcoming album, "Pimpin' On Wax.

JT is sure to have folks bouncing their heads for a long time. As his first single from his solo deb u t, "Pimpin' On Wax," JT is making his mark in the music industry.

Who Money, who grew up on the rough and tumb ling streets of South Florida, once said for JT Money to "suck it up your ass and trust me." His newly released single, "Who dat?" is a true representation of JT Money's style and sound.

When you ask JT Money how he got his start, he l o oks to the streets of South Florida. JT Money is a native of Miami, Florida, and grew up in a tough neighborhood. He started his musical career in the late 1990s, performing at local clubs and parties.

JT Money has been a force in the South Florida music scene for over a decade. His music is a reflection of the rough and tumble streets of Miami and South Florida.

JT Money's message is one of resilience and fighting against the odds. His music is a call to action, a reminder that no matter how tough life may be, you can rise above it.

In conclusion, JT Money's "Who dat?" is a true representation of his style and sound. He is a force in the South Florida music scene and is sure to have fans bouncing their heads for a long time.

Rating System: We at The Hilltop believe in educating the student body, and we have created a rating system that will help guide them. Our rating system is based on four factors: the value of the music and lyrics, the value of the performance, the value of the music video, and the value of the overall package. We would like to encourage fans to listen to this song and leave their own personal rating.

Women's Lacrosse Team Making Strides

By Karen S. Brown

It's been an exciting season for Howard University's lacrosse team. The women's team has been making strides on the field, with an overall record of 8-1. This season has been particularly successful, with several strong performances and a strong focus on team chemistry and personal growth.

The team is led by Head Coach Carolyn Pedone, who has been instrumental in preparing the team for success. Under her guidance, the team has been working hard to improve their skills and strategies, with a focus on teamwork and individual improvement.

The team's success can be attributed to several key factors. First, the team has a strong sense of community and support, with players and coaches working together to achieve common goals. Second, the team has a strong work ethic and dedication, with players putting in the necessary time and effort to improve their skills. Third, the team has a strong coaching staff, with experienced and knowledgeable coaches providing guidance and support.

The team's success has been recognized by their opponents, with several teams expressing admiration for their skills and teamwork. The team's next match is against a tough opponent, and the players are preparing to take on the challenge with determination and confidence.

In conclusion, Howard University's women's lacrosse team is off to a strong start, and they are poised to continue their success throughout the season. With a strong coaching staff, a supportive community, and a strong work ethic, the team is well-positioned for continued success.
Attention Graduate and Professional Students:

The Executive Office of the President, Office of Management and Budget, and the Department of Political Science, has coordinated an opportunity for graduate and professional students interested in Summer internships and/or career opportunities at the OMB to meet the Associate Director of Administration, Mr. Clarence Crawford and to discuss the many opportunities available at the OMB. Tuesday, March 16th in the East Ballroom of the Armour J. Blackburn University Center at 12 noon until 5 PM, the Department of Political Science, coordinated by Dr. Lorenzo Morris and facilitated by Damon Lamont Waters, will present an informational and interview session with the executive. It is requested that ALL interested persons be professionally present with their resume's. Mr. Crawford will outline the available positions and their requirements. Be prepared for plausible on spot interviews.

It is hoped that each and every graduate and professional program is represented. In the past the OMB has chosen not to come to HU due to a prior lack of student participation. This year, however they have decided to come to the Capstone and draw from the relevant pool of human capital available.

Let's "Represents"!!!

If there are any questions or concerns, please feel free to contact Damon at 806.7000 or via e-mail at RisingH2O@aol.com.

IF YOU THOUGHT COLLEGE WAS EXPENSIVE, TRY PUTTING YOURSELF THROUGH RETIREMENT.

Think about supporting yourself for twenty-five, thirty years or longer in retirement. It might be the greatest financial test you'll ever face. Fortunately, you have two valuable assets in your favor: time and tax-deferred IRA and ESAs makes it easy. SIRAs and IRAs make it easy. SIRAs — tax-deferred annuities from TIAA-CREF — and tax-deferred assets in your IRA are time and tax-deferred. The key is to begin saving now. Delaying your decision for even a year or two can have a big impact on the amount of income you'll have when you retire.

What's the simplest way to get started? Save in principal dollars and make the most of tax-deferred. There is no more painless or powerful way to build a comfortable and secure tomorrow.

Sisters Let's Talk: Envisioning Our Dreams, Achieving Our Success

Little lady,
We owe you at the cradle of womanhood.
Square your shoulders, child.
Your land will be heavy.
Though hope it will not always be heavy for you
As it was for your mother
And your mother's mother.
Be a beautiful little thing.
May we never any longer desire
What you are.
Because you are black.
Because you live where you live.
Before you go to school where you do
Because you may, your mother never trained your letter.
Yes, my little sister.
Carry the many and wise lessons
Of slavery and the years.
Unoubtedly, the world may shape you all into that regarding to it
As something you can expect to be a gentleman right in
By my side.
The clay is not hard.
I bet you that when it's your turn
As it is now,
You will reach out to take young sister.
That you will lift her up for her
And not her.
As I am telling you.
As others told us.
That it is a little job, and it is to her turn.
To pick up and take her part in the halls of womanhood.
Don't tell you.
