Biographical Note

John Clay Smith Jr. was born in Omaha Nebraska on April 15th, 1942. He was raised primarily by his mother, Emily Verna Williams Smith (later Martin), after his father, J. Clay Smith Sr., was killed in an industrial accident in 1951.

Smith attended college at Creighton University, paying his way with scholarships and part-time jobs. It was there that he met his first wife, Olivia Blackamore. They were married after his graduation in 1964, and had a son the following year and twins the year after.

After Creighton, Smith moved from Omaha to Washington D.C. to enroll at the Howard University School of Law from which he graduated in 1967. After a brief stint at the District of Columbia Redevelopment Land Agency, he joined the Judge Advocate General Corps. While there, he also earned an LLM from the George Washington University Law School in 1970 to which he would add a juris doctor degree from the same school seven years later.

Leaving JAGC in 1971, Smith was hired to work on anti-trust issues at the firm of Arent, Fox, Kintner, and Plotkin. At the same time he worked briefly as an adjunct professor at the Howard University School of Law and began a deep and lifelong involvement with professional and community organizations. These would ultimately include everything from his local church and charities benefiting D.C.'s children to law school and bar associations to groups dedicated to the civil rights of African Americans and other disadvantaged groups.

In 1974 Smith joined the Federal Communications Commission as its deputy chief in the rapidly changing field of cable television and advanced to the post of associate general counsel two years later. He also became a member of the Administrative Conference of the United States. In 1978, President Carter appointed him as a member of the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission. In March 1981, the newly elected President Reagan appointed Smith the commission's acting head due to his status as its only republican member and the rapid departure of his democratic counterparts.

In fact, the other members of the commission left so quickly that Smith had to be temporarily given unilateral authority so that it could function without a quorum. There was some speculation that this position might be made permanent, which grew louder after a failed nomination, but whether because the self-described Lincoln Republican was out of step with Reagan's vision of the party or simply because of the stigma of being a Carter appointee, Clarence Thomas was nominated instead and became the new EEOC head in March 1982. Smith left the commission in August of the same year.

Due to the lack of documentation, the date and circumstances of Smith's divorce from his first wife Olivia and the courtship of his second wife cannot be determined. It can be said however that he first met Patti Grace Smith many years before their June 1983 marriage through her work with the National Association of Broadcasters. Their union also brought Eugene, her son from a previous marriage, into Smith's life.

After leaving the EEOC in 1982, Smith accepted a position as a visiting professor at Howard, joining the regular faculty in the fall of 1983. In 1986 he was appointed dean in the midst of a crisis over the school's accreditation. His two-year tenure as dean was tumultuous. Smith made controversial decisions aimed at raising academic standards and bar passage rates and fundraised continually to stabilize the school's finances. By the time he left to concentrate on his writing, the school was on firmer footing.

After resigning as dean, Smith returned to being a regular law professor. With the exception a brief stint as a visiting professor at Georgetown for the 1995-1996 school year, he remained on the Howard Law faculty until his retirement in 2004.

Smith gave numerous speeches throughout his career. He was particularly prolific during his time in the federal government, when his FCC and EEOC work and his positions as presidents of the WBA and FBA had him speaking at forums all over the country. Many of his speeches were ultimately published, and even the unpublished ones circulated due to Smith's willingness to provide copies of his work to interested parties by mail.

He also wrote extensively, publishing articles on legal subjects, communications, civil rights, politics, and history that made him an authority on the history of the black lawyer in America. After leaving his post as dean to focus on his writing, this reputation was cemented in 1993 by the publication of his first book Emancipation: The Making of the Black Lawyer. An encyclopedic history of early African American legal pioneers based on many years of painstaking research, the book won praise for its comprehensive approach to a neglected area of scholarship. It was followed by two edited volumes, Rebels in Law: Voices of Black Women Lawyers in 1998 and his final book Supreme Justice: Speeches and Writings on the work of Thurgood Marshall in 2002.

Scope and Contents Note

The Papers of J. Clay Smith (1942-), law professor, historian and civil servant, cover the years 1954-2006 (bulk 1978-2002). Smith corresponded widely with friends and acquaintances. His general correspondence (21.5 linear feet) contains not only letters and emails with such individuals but also the records of some of the voluntary organizations and associations with which he was involved and arrangements relating to his many speaking engagements.

Smith also kept in touch with his family. This correspondence (3 linear feet) includes personal letters and other documentation about his immediate and extended family. Although the correspondence with his second wife subsequent to her marriage and documentation on her life are included, records concerning his first wife Olivia and the courtship of his second wife Patti are missing from the collection.

The records of Smith's education (3 linear feet) begin in grade school with yearbooks and report cards, but the bulk of it concerns his time as a law student. In addition to material on scholarships and ROTC, there are extensive law school notes and materials relating to his thesis. Material relating to papers he wrote for classes as well as works published during his time as a student are grouped under Series 7: Research, Speeches and Writings.

Although most of Smith's affiliations with associations and groups are included with general correspondence in Series 5, several of these affiliations, including his presidencies of the Washington and Federal Bar Associations, were collected separately along with his work prior to joining the Howard Law faculty. Collectively these encompass 18 linear feet with records of his time at the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission making up the largest subseries.

A large part of the collection (19 linear feet) documents Smith's career as a law professor and dean of the Howard Law School. These materials include internal memoranda relating to university affairs, course syllabi, and material relating to public controversies, conferences and other public events at the school. From the period of his deanship, there are also a range of financial records and documents regarding the school's accreditation. His involvement with the school's alumni association is also covered. Although not a diarist, Smith maintained appointment books between 1972 and 2000 (1 linear foot) with a few breaks in the 1990s. These contain information not found elsewhere in the collection and are of special importance regarding his career.

Smith maintained a public profile from his youth, and was written about as a prominent African American in the government, a black republican political commentator, the dean of a famous law school, and ultimately a historian. This material is included in the ephemera series.

Smith was active in the comments process on pending regulations, particularly regarding communications, and these are included in his case files (5 linear feet) along with the records of legal cases in which he participated. Most of his legal work, including cases for JAGC and Arent-Fox were excluded because of confidentiality, as were the pro bono cases he took throughout his life. The remainder consists primarily of amicus briefs for civil rights organizations. The collection also contains the many awards and certifications accumulated by Smith over the course of his life.

Smith gave numerous speeches and vigorously pursued their publication in addition to being a prolific writer of everything from books and papers to letters to the editor. The records of his research, speeches, and writings (51 linear feet) include copies and drafts of his speeches, published papers, and books. It also includes book reviews and correspondence with publishers and people he hoped could contribute to his research. The files resulting from the research itself are also available, particularly the Black Lawyer Files collecting documents concerning various black lawyers, and his files on Blacks in Telecommunications. Smith numbered both sets of files and item level listings by number are available in a separate document. The research files also include materials relating to specific books that Smith wrote or edited.

The collection includes a small amount of ephemera (1 linear foot) consisting of printed material in which Smith was mentioned as well as Smith's collections of photographs of himself and other black lawyers (4 linear feet). Some of the records of the collection are restricted, including the records of Howard University's appointments and promotions committee and search committees as well as a number of legal cases in which Smith served as counsel.

Custodial History

This Collection was periodically deposited over a span of more than two decades to the Moorland-Spingarn Research Center. However when Smith retired in 2003 he deposited the last quarter of his collection to the newly founded Howard University Law Library Archives.

Staff at both repositories decided that it was best to process both of these donations as a single collection, and to house the Law School series at the Law Library Archives in order to fulfill Smith's wish that a portion of his papers be housed in the Law Library Archives.

Series 3: Law SchoolSeries Description

Boxes 12-29. This series documents Smith's career as a law professor and dean of the Howard Law School. These materials include internal memoranda relating to university affairs, course syllabi, and material relating to public controversies, conferences and other public events at the school. His involvement with the alumni association is also under this heading. During the period of his deanship, there are also a range of financial records and documents regarding the school's accreditation. Arranged chronologically.

The Series is located at the Howard University Law Library Archives, Room 401, 2929 Van Ness St, NW, Washington, DC 20008, Please call (202) 806-8304 to make an appointment to use this series.

Series 4: Organizations and Select AffiliationsSeries Description

Boxes 30-48. This series documents Smith's professional work outside of academia and his involvement with certain associations for which he kept records separate from his correspondence. These include his employment prior to joining the Howard faculty, most notably at the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission, as well as the presidencies of bar associations. Arranged by organization.

Series 7: Research, Speeches, and WritingsSeries Description

Boxes 75-125. This main part of this series is arranged chronologically and consists of draft and final versions of Smith's speeches, writings and books, as well as research correspondence, and correspondence with publishers. For information regarding travel and speaking arrangements see Series 5. Documents and drafts specific to particular books edited or authored by Smith and are also in this series. The Black Lawyer and Blacks in Communications files, are arranged by a numbering system for which a full listing (with some gaps) is available separate from this finding aid. Some of the Black Lawyer Files are also arranged alphabetically by the name of the lawyer, and court cases and newspaper articles about Black Lawyers have also been collected.

Black Lawyer FilesSub-series arrangement

This sub-series was arranged based on Smith's original order. Smith created an item level index, on index cards, with a unique classification based roughly on his accession order. A link to a transcribed version of his index is available at http://hudocs.wrlc.org/eReserve/jclaysmith/Black_Lawyers_\(BL\)_Index.pdf_Index.pdf)

Sub-series arrangement

Blacks in Communications Files

This sub-series is an extensive verticle file which was created by Smith from the 1970s into the 1990s. It contains news clippings, government documents, ephemera, correspondence, memoranda, and other documents related to minorities in communications, with a particular interest in minority ownership of television and radio stations. Smith indexed the files in two series: "Communications," which is a more general series, and "FCC/EEOC History," which deals with the particular history of the these agencies in relation to minorities in communications. The sub-series is arranged to correspond with Smith's index order. A copy of Smith's index (with some small gaps) is available at: <http://hudocs.wrlc.org/eReserve/jclaysmith/J%20Clay%20Smith%20Communications%20indexes.pdf>

Series 9: PhotographsSeries Description

This series, which is described at the item level contains numerous photographs of African American lawyers, some dating to 19th Century, but most far more recent. Many of the photos document the history of Howard University School of Law. Smith was also an avid photographer, and the collection contains many photographs that Smith took himself.

Many of the photographs are prefixed in the finding aid with a BLP (Black Lawyer Photo) number. As with many of his research materials Smith indexed many of his photos, and these are his index numbers.

J. Clay Smith, Jr.

Midway through processing the photos, the processing team discovered two additional boxes of photographs. These were not interfiled but instead processed in parallel, and are listed in the finding aid as "Additional photos."

Approximately 700 of these photographs are available online at: http://dh.howard.edu/jcs_photos/
