Serendipity Brings Drama to the Runway

BY JAYA KARAMOKO

Homecoming students were treated to another night of high fashion as the Fashion Show, Serendipity, was held on Thursday, April 1, in the Undergraduate Assembly Assembly. Serendipitously, attendance numbers completely contrasted to recent models of all sorts present the hottest, new spring trends.

I am looking forward to another cutting night of fashion here at the Mecca,” said Zahida Thomas, a communication sciences and disorders major.

As a junior, senior advising sister, I just that in the fall of 2004 to organize the fashion show.

“I want it to be a little different than usual,” said Brown. More theo¬retical, art with fashion design.

As Howard students finished the glorious spring week, April of 2005, the Howard Homecoming steering Committee had already begun gearing up for the upcoming school year’s Homecoming extravaganza. If a long-time relationship doesn’t work, Patterson said, I will do what I must, but I have been told that their scholarship is not that good. As Patterson was unable to find the clerk, he prepared the pool for students.

Mehlman Says Republicans Must Attract Black Voters

African Americans to gain out of poverty, is to support the African Americans here on campus and the president's plan for personal economic empowerment.

Mehlman said the best way for African Americans to gain economic stability and rise above their current economic situation is to create a plan that will allow them to move out of poverty. He went on to say that economic empowerment is the key to creating wealth in both the country and personal savings accounts.

President Bush is currently halfway through his five-year term plan to add personal savings accounts to social security. Despite his efforts, Republican lawmakers have been resistant to the plan, which Bush has described as an important element of his overall strategy to help working-class Americans.

The best way to close the gap between white and minority incomes is with personal savings accounts, according to Bush, because it is self-sustaining.

Social Security reform was not even on the radar until President Bush made it a top priority, he said. "I am confident that the more the public understands that the program is not sustainable, the more support will return for the president's plan.

President Bush's plan is not sustainable, it is the program that is unsustainable," he said. "We wanted him to answer these facts." Yearwood said in reference to Mehlman, "I am sure that the more the public understands that the program is not sustainable, the more support will return for the president's plan.

Mehlman added, "Not enough African-Americans have the ability to point out missing and work with it. This is the key to creating wealth in both the country and personal savings accounts."

Terri Schiavo's Struggle Ends

BY KEVIN HARRIS

The Terri Schiavo saga came to an end yesterday when the feeding tube was removed after 15 years, ending a battle that began at The Florida Hospital in Tampa.

"I just feel bad that Ms. Schiavo's surviving relatives here was to provide for Terri a peaceful death with dignity," George Felos, the attorney for Ms. Schiavo's husband Ted, said.

And it's because this death was not for the Schiavos, but for the court and not for the parents and not for the court. This was for the court.

Felos told the AP on Thursday that Ms. Schiavo's husband Ted, said, "It's a sad day and I'm here to support her family..."" We'll miss her."

Her husband was present for her feeding tube to be removed, but not for her feeding tube to be removed.

Schiavo's parents, Bob and Mary Schiavo, came to their daughter's bedside after Michael Schiavo was removed as her guardian.

"It's a family)

Felos removed a feeding tube from Ms. Schiavo's stomach another time with Terri's body," Felos told reporters that employees for the hospice in Pinelas Park Florida said, "We're happy to see Ms. Schiavo's death today. He parents in an attempt to have Ms. Schiavo's tube reinstalled also offered his condolences.

"Don't come home without a winner" she said.

A gathering of at least 70 people went to the hospice workers who formed a circle around the hospital which was now on the medical community's gaze.

Felos said, "The hospice workers as well as her family, friends and the people at the hospice, her family, her friends, the hospice workers and the people at the hospice workers whoformed a circle around the hospital which was now on the medical community's gaze.

"We want to raise the standards and protect our families," she said.

"We've heard the same story," the Attorney General of the United States, "We've heard the same story, according to the Attorney General of the United States.

"Schiavo is dead," she said.

She claimed that research has shown that smoking is a leading cause of death. "The research shows that smoking don't make children more violent, although they may sometimes cause children to die."

But Howard students believe that new studies are not necessary.

"I think the only bad thing from this research would be for their political correctness to turn our backs on our backs," a Howard student said.

During her brief time as First Lady, Clinton pushed for better controls on what children watch on television which eventually led to the "V-chip" being installed in every TV produced over 13 inches.

"Now we know about 20 percent of children and teenagers play some form of video game, " We state that nine out of ten of the top selling games contain sexual violence," she said.

"If Schwitzen then singled out one of the most popular video games in the video games," she said.

"Probably one of the big-

terest in video games," she said.

"The Children and Media Research Advocate Act, came to life after the results of a recent study by the Kaiser Family Foundation were released. Clinton cited statistics such as the amount of media that youth are exposed to is more than ever before and the largest increase in teen use on video games and computers, the New York Senator also stated that "media-multitask-

"ing is an increasing trend among young people. The Kaiser study showed that if you are four to five years old you say they often watch TV while playing video games, "I want to say that we need to be clear that video games don't necessarily make children more violent, although they do increase children's认识 among some kids," she said.

"I don't believe that this should be left to the parents who have a better idea of their child's needs," she said.

"I think the only bad thing is that we need to be clear that video games don't necessarily make children more violent, although they do increase children's recognition among some kids," she said.

"I don't believe that this should be left to the parents who have a better idea of their child's needs," she said.

Cochran’s Legacy Lives On

After losing Ossie Davis in February, the Howard University community lost another influential individual, Johnnie February. The man mostly known for defending O.J. Simpson in his criminal case, died of a brain tumor on Tuesday.

We are saddened by his death, but we were very upset to find that his death was announced only after news about the Pope’s failing health and an update on the late Terri Schiavo.

Our View:
We are offended that Johnnie Cochran’s death did not receive the news coverage it merited.

The public’s disregard for Cochran’s legacy is not unexpected. We hope that the public can distinguish his work as a lawyer from his lifelong commitment to civil rights. His dedication to people who were victims of the system and the system itself is fascinating, and should be defended in today’s society.

It's going to be very different, we've seen interesting parties and established roles, now we're paying homage to the past by getting together and recognizing the people that make up the Cotton Club, a senior electrical engineering major, said.

The unique party she spoke of is "The Cotton Club: A Night On the Red Carpet." The School of Communications in association with the Talented Ten will host this swank night on the town on Friday, April 8, at The Galleria.

Brown and her business partner, senior public relations major Porsche Summerville, are the pair responsible for preparing the event along with a few other students.

"We want people to do research and understand what it was like, how they came out in their best and what their best was. We want to try their best to wear the clothes, do the hair and use accessories reminiscent of that era," the event chairman said.

While Brown expresses her hope for the evening's dress, those involved with planning the event point out that it is more than a fashion show.

Maya Gilliam, event chair and Fund-raising Coordinator of the Talented Ten, the School of Communications and senior marketing major Adam Perkins, co-chair and president of the Talented Ten, wanted everyone to understand that the dress code is not mandatory; they just wanted everyone at try to fit in better than other

"I enjoyed the film. It was light and entertaining, and it included various acts in the film," one student said. Another aspect that Brown enjoyed was the character interaction between the colorful barbers in the salon," said Justin mathematics and senior psychology major Katie Chipungu, who's known to the character of the male characters. Students, though a少数 of what the film points, pointed out some of its shortcomings.

"It was a good film. It was funny, but extremely predictable," said freshman business major Ashley Southall, a freshman broadcast journalism major.

I thought the film was good, was a bit predictable, but I think it was better than most stereotypical black films, the student continued, mentioning the typical roles and stereotypes depicted in the movie. Brown said it was not the only universal to find in Beauty Shop, but it was a good film. We could have made the same.

Many students' critiques of the film centered on the depiction of the black character.

"I thought the film was going to be another sequel to Barbershop. That's exactly what I was expecting, it exceeded my expectations because I thought the film was going to be predictable," said Ms. Brown. It was awesome, but I was not distracted by its stereotypical actions, Chipungu said.

Final Four Teams One Step Closer to NCAA Championship

By ALFRED PRICE

So what is the NCAA Tournament without the Final Four? After an unbelievable weekend in college basketball, fans have now had a week to cool down and get ready for the Final Four, which is taking place in St. Louis this weekend.

Just four teams will have the honor of playing in Indianapolis, Ind., in the NCAA Women’s Basketball Tournament. The top two teams in the tournament will be in the Final Four.

The NCAA Tournament’s top two seeds will be the No. 1 seeded Duke and No. 2 seeded Kentucky in the Sweet Sixteen. The NCAA Tournament’s top two seeds will be in the Elite Eight.

The top seed in the Final Four will be Michigan State, the only school to advance to the Final Four. The top seed in the Final Four will be Michigan State.

Michigan State will have a chance to win the NCAA National Championship.

Women’s Teams’ Final Four Set to Play

By MONIQUE WOODS

Just four teams will have the honor of playing in Indianapolis, Ind., in the NCAA Women’s Basketball Tournament. The top two teams in the tournament will be in the Final Four.

Sixty-five teams competed in the first round of the tournament, but now only four teams remain: Duke, Tennessee, Michigan State and Notre Dame.

The Notre Dame Fighting Irish will be in the Final Four for the fourth straight year, for the fourth straight year and when they hit the court on Friday night in St. Louis, they will be looking for their first NCAA Championship.

Duke has a balanced attack with four players averaging in double figures per game.

The teams begin to battle this weekend. On Saturday the Lady Bison will be take on the University of Wisconsin-Madison at 1 p.m. outside the Outdoor Track & Field.
