Congresswoman Urges Student Involvement

BY CHRISTINA M. WRIGHT
Asst. Campus Editor

Tweezers reshuffled and nearly two hours later, the Howard University College Democrats sponsored their last installment in their "Fifteen of the Best" series yesterday in the School of Business auditorium.

Congresswoman Sheila Jackson Lee (D-TX) was the guest speaker of the final event, and, despite a busy schedule, delivered a cry for help for the people in Darfur. Returning from a recent visit to the country, she described a visual for the audience.

"Imagine being surrounded by water 30-degrees outside. Children are as small as they can be, looking almost like a sandstorm themselves. There is limited food. Cattle being killed. There are women who are scared to even admit that they have been raped," according to Karen Redmond, College Democrat member. Darfur began to fight against the take over of their land in 2003. Since then, there have been 1.5 million people homeless, 20 villages destroyed and the citizens have been raped, tortured and killed. The United States administration recognized the events in Darfur in late September of 2004. However, there has been no action taken directly in the nation.

"We must come to the realization that the United States government has 80 to 100 billion barrels of oil, 4,187. "The cause of the fire is still under investigation," said Chief Galloway.

Bush Thanks Troops, Celebrates Fall of Baghdad

BY KEVIN HARRIS

President Bush celebrated the two-year anniversary of the fall of Baghdad, by thanking troops returning home from Iraq.

"Neither you are coming for our safety, you are making an enormous difference for the people of our nation and for the people of our world," Bush said speaking of the Port of Hood military base in Texas. "I want you know for your service, freedom for millions and I want to thank you for making this nation proud."

Bush thanked the 45,000 soldiers in attendance for their efforts in bringing democracy to Iraq. However, the president warned that more work has to be done, before troop levels can be significantly reduced.

"In the last two years you have accomplished much, but your work isn't over," Bush said. "Iraqis need help to achieve that democracy, as they struggle to build a new future." The president thanked the troops for their sacrifices and said it was the right thing to do.

"The president warne that more work has to be done to help them achieve that objective," he said. "The Iraqi people are counting on us to help them achieve that objective." The president thanked the troops for their sacrifices and said it was the right thing to do.

"Sharpton Denies Campaign Fraud. The Rev. Al Sharpton, who ran for president in 2004, denied yesterday that his ill-fated campaign violated federal laws two years ago. Citing unidentified sources, the Philadelphia Inquirer said Monday that the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) in New York had opened an investigation into Sharpton’s campaign financial reports.

"Sharpton's investigation is reportedly part of another unrelated probe into Philadelphia businesspeople and city officials. Sharpton denies any wrongdoing, and said he has no knowledge of an investigation. "We have not seen any evidence about the report that was aired on ABC News last night," Sharpton said in an interview with the Associated Press.

"Low Americans 20 years down the road won't have to deal with a day like September 11, 2001," President Bush did not mention the events of September 11, 2001 when he spoke at Port Hood last Friday but the topic was discussed as he could attend the forum of Pope John Paul II.

"While President Bush visited with troops, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld was in Iraq meeting with members of the newly created government. Rumsfeld urged the government to ensure that the Iraqi people are accounted for. Anything that would delay the return of full sovereignty to Iraq, he said, is unacceptable.

"Among the real threats to the new government are the insurgency and the corruption, says Rumsfeld. In Iraq, the insurgents have already been tried under British law. However, the most powerful country in the world is feeling the need to provide treatment to 10,000 children around the world. Congresswoman Lee Visits

The Congresswoman was pleased to receive the warm welcome of Howard students and faculty. During her visit, she addressed several important issues, including the importance of financial literacy and the need for comprehensive immigration reform. "People who work hard and play by the rules should be treated fairly," she said. "We need a system that rewards those who contribute to our society and punishes those who break the law." Lee emphasized the importance of education and the role it plays in empowering individuals to achieve their full potential.

Tyrone to Fight McBradie

Tyrone, from Campus A1, is expected to address some of the issues he previously raised with the media. "I am looking forward to this fight," he said. "I have been working hard to get back into the ring, and I am confident that I can emerge victorious." Tyrone plans to use his pinpoint accuracy and powerful punches to secure a win.

Cause of Fire Unknown

The cause of the fire at the old building, in need of many upgrades, is still unknown. "It's too early to speculate about the cause of the fire," said a spokesperson with the fire department. "We are conducting a thorough investigation to determine the cause." The investigation will include examining the building's electrical system, heating and cooling systems, and any other potential sources.

Doctor House is an old building, in need of many upgrades, especially to the windows, bathrooms and kitchen areas. The carpet in the hallway is also in need of replacement.

Minister Ping Adresses HU

Minister Ping addressed the concerns of the African representation on the Security Council. "We have the same options that are being presented to us right now. Either the Security Council will add six new permanent seats without veto power with space for future differences, or we will add two new permanent seats, but it will be the second increase since 1962, and either way we will get no veto power."

His statements on the veto caused great controversy in the crowd, prompting some to ask questions. When asked why the African seats were just trying to get some ground, he simply replied that those in power did not yield and would not give it up.

Mr. Ping went on to discuss the push for African representation on the Security Council. "The U.N. is a tool to reach goals that are important to all of us. It is important to share this with other nations.

The warm reception of Minister Ping was well received by the attendees. "I think the speech was very inspiring," said one attendee. "It was clear that he is dedicated to making the world a better place."

Moreover, the meeting was attended by several distinguished guests, including several international diplomats.

The goals seek to eliminate the damage caused by fire. "Dorchester House is an old building, in need of many upgrades, especially to the windows, bathrooms and kitchen areas. The carpet in the hallway is also in need of replacement."

Tyson did address some of the more serious things pertaining to the fight. He described his recent knee surgery as successful. "I have been recovering from the injury as well as the knee surgery," he said. "I am confident that I can return to the ring in good shape." Tyson did add that he is looking forward to fighting McBradie and that he is ready to prove himself again.

Shyne Denied Album Royalties

When we were watching rapper Shyne’s video featuring Ashanti we saw him sitting in a jail cell. It was clear that the video was made without his present, since he has been incarcerated for more than a year. One would think Shyne had made his album in jail from the last time he was seen in court. When we were watching the video we saw him present, since he has been out in New York for more than a year. The laws should be geared toward people who are making direct profits from the crime. Thieves should be punished. The law should be changed to prevent people from profiting from their crimes.

Our View:

Since he made his album before jail, the “Son of Sam” law shouldn’t apply.

Ashanti may have been wrong to make a contract with Island/Def Jam, according to Allhiphop.com. He is now seeking to be released from his multi-million dollar contract.

What we do know is Shyne made good money and he shouldn’t be denied his royalties under this law simply because of the law.

Owen: The laws should be geared toward people who are making direct profits from the crime. Shyne wasn’t trying to make money off of his alleged crime, he is trying to make money the way he always has. And we don’t see anything wrong with that.

CORRECTION...

In the April 7 article “Business Owners Rally for Club U” by Lauren Stephens, the article incorrectly reported that Terrance Brown was murdered at the corner of 14th and U Streets NW, after being ejected out of Club U. Brown was stabbed inside the club itself. The Hilltop apologizes for this error.

Eating Disorders Cross Color Lines

The major eating disorders—bulimia, anorexia, and binge eating—are especially associated with white middle- and upper-class women. However, research from the University of Alabama shows that some black and Hispanic-American women are at risk in eating disorders.

Researchers at the University of Missouri in Columbia recently showed that black women and Hispanic-American women are more likely than white women to show symptoms of eating disorders, such as dieting and loosing weight. The researchers believe that these symptoms may be related to cultural influences and hormonal and ethnic differences.

Some researchers believe that these symptoms may be related to cultural influences and hormonal and ethnic differences. "We don't know if the symptoms are showing up because of the stress on women to be thin," said William Williams, who directed the study.
