Biographical/Historical note

H. Naylor Fitzhugh was a teacher, mentor, businessperson and professor. Born in Washington, D.C. in 1909, his parents, William Hiram Fitzhugh and Lillian Naylor Fitzhugh, were highly regarded in the community. He attended Dunbar High School and excelled academically. At 16 years old, Fitzhugh earned a full scholarship to attend Harvard University. He earned his MBA in 1933, despite never being able to secure on campus housing. He was one the first African Americans to earn an MBA from Harvard Business School. Fitzhugh was one of the co-founders of the New Negro Alliance (NNA) of Washington D.C. in the early 1930s. The NNA became a policy-making organization promoting fair employment and treatment within the business community in D.C. Fitzhugh was an activist who went to jail for his beliefs and participation in protests. Fitzhugh joined Howard University as a faculty member in the School of Business. He remained there for close to 30 years, developing programs such as the Small Business Development center. Fitzhugh resigned from Howard in 1965 in order to serve as the Vice President of the Special Markets Division at Pepsi. As a VP at Pepsi, he specialized in promoting products among minority consumers. He created several mentoring programs and marketing projects at the company. While working at Pepsip, he also mentored young business students enrolled at Howard University and participating in the American Marketing Association campus chapter. Fitzhugh also served as a special consultant for the U.S. Census Bureau from 1975-1981. Fitzhugh was a prolific writer with an extensive bibliography of publications about business, marketing, teaching and demographics. Fitzhugh passed away at the age of 82 in 1992.
