Biographical/Historical note

Mary Cornelia Burke Washington was a celebrated and successful city planner and housing professional who served on the state and federal levels. Burke Washington was born in Tuskegee, Alabama on July 6, 1926. Her parents, Ruth and Walter Sturgeon Burke both graduated from Howard University. After graduating from Howard University School of Law, her father relocated to Tuskegee in order to create the first federal Veterans Administration hospital for African American servicemen. The family returned to Washington while Burke Washington was still a child. She grew up in D.C. attending area schools and graduating from high school. She would later attend the University of Wisconsin majoring in economics and city planning. After graduation, she relocated to New York City, and worked as a city planner and the federal housing departments. In 1974 she became the first woman to be appointed head economist for one of the 10 regional offices of the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development in New York. She also served as a member of police departments review boards, including chairing the Civilian Complaint Review Board, a post allowing her to confront police brutality. In addition to her federal and state service for housing and police commission, Burke Washington was a champion of women's affairs in the federal workforce, presiding over the National Association of Commissions for Women.

Burke Washington married Walter E. Washington in 1994, the first appointed and elected mayor of Washington D.C. Returning to D.C. was a homecoming for her. After her husband's passing, she continued to rally for his causes.
