Abstract	TransAfrica seeks to educate Americans regarding the history and culture of those of the African diaspora, provide economic and political support to the continent, and to inform the world of Africa's development. Records document the day-to-day business of the organization as well as its history. Records include press releases, board of directors meeting minutes, annual reports, correspondence, development plans, financial documents, and annual reports.

Biographical/Historical note

The Black Leadership Conference convened by the Congressional Black Congress in 1976 sought to address the needs of the continent of Africa. As a result of the conference, TransAfrica was founded to provide visibility to Africa in high-level international affairs. TransAfrica became a non-profit organization on July 1, 1977, and is the oldest African-American foreign policy organization. TransAfrica seeks to educate Americans regarding the history and culture of those of the African diaspora, provide economic and political support to the continent, and to inform the world of Africa's development. Foreign policy development and humanitarian efforts have been a hallmark of TransAfrica's work. TransAfrica is credited with its stance against apartheid in South Africa and development of trade unions in the southern region, political struggle against dictatorship in Haiti, and its establishment of democratic elections in Nigeria. TransAfrica's most recent endeavors include building closer ties among African Americans and Africans on the continent of Africa through awareness and involvement in foreign affairs.

Scope and Contents note

The TransAfrica Records document the day-to-day business of the organization as well as its history. Records include press releases, board of directors meeting minutes, annual reports, correspondence, development plans, financial documents, and annual reports. Also included are files on the Arthur Ashe Library, projects in Haiti, Latin America, South Africa (including reports on the Truth and Reconciliation Committee), intern files, and files on publications such as Africa Now and African Renewal Journal.
