Sixteen Howard Students Arrested in Protest Monday

By ROSS R. BOTHER
CityNews & World Editor

Sixteen Howard University students were arrested in front of Francis Quadrangle on the campus of the University last Thursday evening, according to police reports.

The students were protesting the case of Amadou Diallo, a 23-year-old West African man, who was shot by police outside his New York City apartment on Feb. 4, 1999.

Each officer was charged with six counts of murder, attempted murder, assault and reckless endangerment. Diallo was shot by police in his apartment after they approached him and asked for his identification.

Diallo was shot several times, and died two days later. The officers were acquitted of all charges.

The police officers were acquitted of all charges, and the shooting sparked a nationwide protests, including the one at Howard University.

The Howard Student Association (HUSA) has completed most of their platform points for the upcoming Student Government elections. The platform points were discussed at the Assembly Elections Committee meeting on March 3.

The HUSA elections committee chair, Damon Waters, said that the committee had completed most of their platform points. The committee had also decided not to address issues such as the lack of publicized events.

The committee had also decided to focus on issues such as the lack of funding, the lack of proper notification and the lack of student involvement.

Despite financial woes, the University's Student Government will continue to address these issues and work towards a better future for the University.

Some students recalled coming back from Christmas break to find that their belongings in Meridian Hall were gone. "I opened my door and I saw my television and stereo was gone," Smith said. "I ran to my room and my jewelry was gone too." Smith said even her lotion was stolen and her door was locked, which led her to believe it was a man or another student.

Renita Smith is Brandy's mother. She said she is outraged and very upset with residence life and campus police. She still does not have her money. "I'm still waiting for the investigation to come to a conclusion," Smith said.

Karen Quawiy, Senior Policy Analyst of Human Resources, said, "The new policy will define relatives as a father, son, daughter, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, first cousin, nephew or niece. It also prevents hiring of spouses, in laws and step-relatives."

The new policy defines "relative" as a father, son, daughter, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, first cousin, nephew or niece. It also prevents hiring of spouses, in laws and step-relatives. It also prevents hiring of relatives employed at Howard.

"The policy came up for revision because it was unclear in definition of term "relative," Karen Quawiy, Senior Policy Analyst of Human Resources, said. "The new policy will better define the term."

The policy defines "relative" as a father, son, daughter, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, first cousin, nephew or niece. It also prevents hiring of spouses, in laws and step-relatives.

According to Quawiy, current employees hired by relatives will have their jobs now as a result of the new policy.

The Hilltop
Age of Shooter and Victim a Shock in Michigan School Shooting

By REBECCA PARSONS

March 1, 2003

The shooting at a Michigan high school was a tragedy that would change the lives of many students and faculty who were present that day. The shooter, a 16-year-old student, was described as a quiet and unassuming young man, who had no history of violence or mental illness. The victim, a 13-year-old student, was a popular and well-liked member of the school community, who had just received an award for excellence in academics.

In the immediate aftermath of the shooting, schools and communities across the nation were left reeling from the shock and sorrow of the事件. Many students and faculty members were traumatized by the experience, and the incident highlighted the need for better mental health services and more effective crisis management protocols in schools.

Despite these challenges, the school community came together to support one another and to honor the memory of the victim. The school and community leaders worked tirelessly to address the underlying issues that contributed to the incident and to prevent similar tragedies from happening in the future.

The incident also served as a catalyst for change, with many schools implementing new policies and procedures to improve student mental health and security. The incident underscored the importance of paying attention to the needs of young people and the importance of addressing mental health issues before they lead to tragic consequences.

Newly Opened Lending Exhibit in Chicago Receives Mixed Reviews

By JOSH WELLS

March 1, 2003

The newly opened lending exhibit in Chicago has received mixed reviews from visitors. Some have praised the exhibit for its innovative approach to lending and its emphasis on social responsibility, while others have criticized it for being too simplistic and lacking depth.

The exhibit, which opened last month at the Chicago Public Library, features a large number of loanable items, including books, music, art supplies, and household tools. Visitors are encouraged to borrow items and return them after a specified time period.

However, some visitors have expressed concerns that the exhibit is too focused on individual loans and does not address larger social issues, such as access to affordable housing or education. Others have criticized the exhibit for being too simplistic and lacking depth.

Despite these criticisms, the exhibit has received a fair amount of attention and has drawn a steady stream of visitors. The library hopes to continue to evolve and improve the exhibit in response to visitor feedback.

The exhibit is open to the public and is free to visit. It is located on the second floor of the Chicago Public Library and is open during regular library hours.

Students CreditPoor Eating Habits to Demanding Schedules

By KARA A. MILLER

March 1, 2003

Many students report that their demanding schedules and lack of time are the primary factors that contribute to their poor eating habits. In a recent survey of high school students, 80% reported that their busy schedules leave little time for healthy meals.

One student, who is a member of the school's track team, said that practicing for three hours after school leaves her with no time to prepare a healthy meal. Other students reported that their schedules are so packed that they often resort to fast food or convenience stores for their meals.

In response to these challenges, some schools have implemented new policies and programs to help students make healthier choices. One school, for example, offers a nutrition class that teaches students about healthy eating and provides them with tips for making healthy choices despite their busy schedules.

Despite these efforts, many students continue to struggle with poor eating habits. The challenge is to find ways to help students make healthier choices despite their busy schedules and demanding lives.

Lyndon LaRouche, the Next U.S. President?

By Laurens Anderson
Hilltop Staff Writer

Lyndon B. Johnson, the 36th President of the United States, was an individual who was deeply involved in the political landscape of the United States. His presidency was marked by a number of significant events and policies, including the Vietnam War, the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and the Great Society programs. Despite his controversial legacy, Johnson's presidency remains an important chapter in American history.

Johnson was born in Johnson City, Texas, on August 27, 1908, and grew up in the poverty-stricken area of East Texas. He attended the University of Texas and later received a law degree from the University of Virginia. Johnson began his political career as a county prosecutor and later served as a U.S. Representative from Texas from 1937 to 1947.

In 1947, Johnson was elected to the U.S. Senate and quickly rose to prominence as a powerful ally of President Harry S. Truman. Johnson was known for his political savvy and his ability to negotiate deals, earning him the nickname "the master of the Senate." He served as Majority Leader of the Senate from 1953 to 1959 and played a key role in passing significant legislation, including the GI Bill of Rights and the Taft-Hartley Act.

In 1960, Johnson ran for the presidency as the Democrat nominee and won a close election against Republican candidate Vice President Richard Nixon. As President, Johnson faced a number of challenges, including the escalating Vietnam War, which he had initially opposed but ultimately escalated to a full-scale military conflict.

Johnson's administration is often remembered for its significant domestic achievements, including the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Medicare and Medicaid programs, and the War on Poverty. However, his policies also faced criticism, particularly his handling of the Vietnam War, which many felt was a costly and unnecessary commitment.

Johnson's presidency ended with his resignation in 1968 after the controversial assassination of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. He died on January 22, 1973, at the age of 64. Despite his political controversies, Johnson remains an influential figure in American history, known for his political skill and his role in shaping significant legislation.

Florida Hotel Chain Proposes Settlement in Discrimination Case

By Emily Betters

Adrian Mark Hedges and Robert Sanchez have proposed a settlement agreement was proposed to the United States District Court for the Northern District of California (N.D.Ca.) in the case of "Mark protestors," which was filed in 2001. The settlement, which was filed on November 1, 2001, was confirmed by the court on December 1, 2001.

Under the proposed settlement, Adrian Mark Hedges, President and CEO of the San Diego-based AMS Hospitality Group, Inc., and Robert Sanchez, President and CEO of the San Diego-based AMS Hospitality Group, Inc., have agreed to pay $5 million in damages to the plaintiffs, as well as $1 million in attorneys' fees. The plaintiffs, who are members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), have alleged that the defendants discriminated against them in the provision of hotel services.

The settlement agreement also includes a provision for the defendants to provide training to their employees on the importance of non-discrimination, as well as the establishment of a fund to be used for the benefit of the plaintiffs. The settlement is subject to court approval and is expected to be finalized in the next few months.
The Evolution

of Lil’ Kim

By MARIELLE BOW

fter years in the limelight, Kim Jones donned some of her biggest names in hip hop fashion in a format similar to MTV’s ‘‘Unplugged,’’ complete with an island theme. The current lineup of her ‘‘Hot Sauce’’ video, the next show for the rapper, is scheduled for April 13 in central New York City.

Kim has been in the spotlight since 1994, when she and Puffy, now 36, started a joint venture called Bad Boy Entertainment. Their hit single ‘‘All Night Long’’ was a minor hit, but it paved the way for their subsequent hits, including ‘‘I’d Date U’’ and ‘‘Rapper’s Delight,’’ which peaked at number one.

Kim’s success has been attributed to her distinctive style, which includes samples from old-school hip hop and R&B tracks. Her music videos often feature her wearing designer outfits, including Versace and Dolce & Gabbana. She has also been known to wear custom-made outfits by designers such as Rudo and Co.

The rapper has won three Grammy Awards, including Best Rap Solo Performance for ‘‘Miss Independent.’’ She has also been nominated for several other awards, including the MTV Video Music Awards and the Soul Train Awards.

Despite her success, Kim’s personal life has been marked by controversy. She was involved in a legal battle with her former manager, Clive Davis, and has been sued by several record companies for copyright infringement.

Kim’s music career has been characterized by a mix of commercial success and critical acclaim. Her albums have sold millions of copies worldwide, and she has been praised for her lyricism and flow. However, she has also been criticized for her, at times, reckless behavior, including drug use and Troublesome behavior.

Kim continues to be a force in the hip hop industry, and she is currently working on a new album. She has also been involved in several charitable initiatives, including the ‘‘Kim Jones Foundation,’’ which supports education and health initiatives in the United States and Africa.

Howard's Badminton Team Captures Championship

By Kevin D. Stewart
Hilltop Sports Editor

Howard’s badminton team is coming off a strong 2000 season. After coming off a second place finish in the MEAC in 1999, the team continued and won the Northern Regional Badminton Championship hosted by Swarthmore College. In placing second in their respective competition, taking third of the five teams, Howard was able to defeat last year's champion University of Pennsylvania for the title.

Howard’s No. 1 nationally ranked player Ademola Ogunsanya and his Trinidad national team teammate Arthur Alexander defeated their opponents and trend each other for the men’s doubles title. Ogunsanya defeated Alexander 15-13, 15-9. But the final player making up the doubles team, Howard earned 25 team points, putting the team into the driver’s seat for the rest of the way.

The team stole the men’s doubles title 15-3, 15-6 from Penn. In the combination of Ogunsanya and Alexander, also Ogunsanya and teammate Percy Boldon took the mixed doubles title 15-7, 15-1.

“Nothing could go wrong for us this year; we were able to dominate and bring the title home to Howard.”

The team is planning to compete in the 2000 Collegiate National Badminton Championship tournament in April at Stanford University if they can raise enough funding from the University’s administration.

“Tatiana is really starting to improve. She has yet to lose a singles or doubles match. She is an exceptional player,” said Stickel.

Women’s Tennis

Match Cut Short

By Money G. Walker
Hilltop Staff Writer

On Sunday, February 20, the Howard University women’s tennis team played an extremely competitive match against Georgetown at the Moreland County Club in Monrovia, Va. Neither was able to stop the other, creating a tie.

This challenging match was interrupted by a tennis match between Virginia (No. 10) and the University of Maryland. When the two were finished, the Howard and Georgetown teams had to make one cut in the game.

By the time the match was over, there were no winners. All the Howard’s team players showed great qualities. In single matches, senior Tatiana Okpala won 6-4, 6-3, and junior Tiffany Spence won her match 4-6, 6-3, and 6-4, and freshmen Taimura Okpala also won a double match 8-6 with fellow teammate Lattia Alkins.

“Tatiana is really starting to improve. She has yet to lose a singles or doubles match. She is a exceptional player,” said Stickel.

Intramural Activities

Takes Hold of Howard

By Dr. Shandrea Freeman

Maybe your athletic skills aren’t ready for MEAC competition. Or maybe you lack the time and dedication needed to balance your athletic and academic responsibilities. Looking for an alternative? Well, look into the Howard Intramural Recreation Program (HIRP).

“Although we are focused on improving the physical skills of the students, we also believe that participation in intramural activities is a valuable experience to the student-athlete,” said program director Anthony McDonald. “It may be an opportunity to compete with another team, said program director Anthony McDonald. “It may be an opportunity to compete with another team, and we encourage Howard students to participate in the intramural activities.”

Intramural sports are not exclusive for students. Faculty members are welcome to participate. Both Provost Franklin Chambers have displayed their skills in games against students.

Intramural recreation provides a variety of activities that allow Howard students to develop character and skills. These activities include: tennis, table tennis, basketball, soccer, volleyball, badminton, basketball, track, lacrosse, and track.

Georgia, Tennessee Clinch Share of SEC Title

By John-John Williams
Hilltop Staff Writer

What a difference a year makes. Kenyon College’s Gators (18-10, 6-6 Big South) were once considered one of the biggest disappointments in the nation. This year, they are Big South champions.

Third-ranked Tennessee was led by guards Sonika Romandia and Kara Lawson who scored 22 and 18 points respectively in the 74-61 win over Auburn. Pennsylvania’s Player of the Year Tamara Cvetanovic scored 24 points before leaving the game with a high injury. The Lady Vols improved their record to 23-2. Auburn, led by Tabi Johnson’s 14-point effort, fell to 21-6.

Penn State, who improved its ranking to No. 5, disposed of rival Temple 65-56. Center Andrea Garner scored 15 points and grabbed 12 rebounds, and guard Lissa Shepard added 12 points in the Nittany Lions’ victory. Ohio State (12-14) was led by Lauren Beemer’s 20-point effort. Miami improved its record to 26-6 with a 76-73 win over Vanderbilt.

UNITY 2000 Struggles, Yet Succeeds

It is commendable that the HUSA administration worked all year without any compensation. It is also a credit to its leadership to keep an entire staff together, and able to perform their duties while still servicing the best interest of the student body. The Hilltop has criticized UNITY 2000 for not being as visible as it could be on campus. Another criticism of UNITY 2000 is that, despite good programming, a lack of publicity for these events kept them secret from the student body. The Editorial Board also would like to have seen HUSA take bigger and bolder stances on outsourced and understaffed HUSA Constituencies.

HUSA has failed to come through on a promised tuition freeze, which resulted in a three percent tuition hike in January; a student-run credit union, which will not be seen this year; and a promised National Student Scholarship, which UNITY attributes to lack of General Assembly support and lack of funds.

Amadou Diallo: A 21st Century Emmett Till

F orty-five years ago in Sumner, Mississippi, an all-white jury acquitted two white mates for the murder of the fourteen-year-old Emmett Till. The motive for the crime was the allegation that Till had "spoke fresh" to Mrs. Carolyn Bryant— a white female. In the dark of night, J.W. Milam and Roy Bryant were determined to teach Till a lesson; kidnapped him, stripped him naked, shut him in the back of a 75-pound cotton gin fan, and threw him into the Tallahatchie River. In spite of international outrage and intense media scrutiny of the trial, the all-white jury could not convict white men for killing a black male who transgressed Southern racial etiquette.

The Diallo trial jurors, four of them Negro who could not find fault in the officers who shot 41 times at an unarmed man, show that the status of human rights for black people has either stayed the same or gone backwards. This hemorrage of justice is a symptom of a steady erosion of human rights for African Americans since 1989. In 1995, the United States, biddied at such publicized events that portrayed it as a racist and divided society, because of the contradictions the Revels Union has for the human rights violations.

Our View.

The United Nations Human Rights Commission was the best location for avenging Amadou Diallo's murder. The trial was a predictable miscarriage of justice that celebrated the NYFD's human rights violations.

The Real Role Of The Student Trustees

By Jonathan Hutto

Dr. William J. Clinton, Ivory Wall, Sr., and I am happy to report that Mr. Louis Slade and Ms. Carole M. P. Thomas have been confirmed to serve as the 20th and 21st Student Trustees. Even though I thought Mr. Slade’s term would be more of a performance as student leader, I was incorrect. My analysis was that he led student affairs in a way that considered the holistic perspective of students. A recent analysis by Ms. Thomas has indicated that she led student affairs in a way that considered the holistic perspective of students.

In his April 28, 1970, the culmination of student efforts to be granted priority must realize its destiny. Either fulfill it or betray the mission of Howard University. The values and large-ly

Sterling Replies To The Grade

By Benjamin E. Mays

In the spring of 1973, the Howard University Student Assembly, under the leadership of John K. Finney, Jr. and I, proposed that the university establish a new grade system. This is a departure from the traditional A, B, C, D, and F grading system that has been in place for many years.

The new system is designed to provide a more comprehensive evaluation of student performance. It includes a set of criteria for each letter grade, which are intended to reflect the breadth and depth of a student’s academic work. The system also includes a discussion of how the grades will be used in the future, including the potential for using them to improve the university’s academic reputation.

In conclusion, I would like to thank the student assembly for their efforts in developing this new grade system. I believe that this is an important step forward in improving the quality of education at Howard University.

The Hilltop and I

By Chie Styx

I will miss the Hilltop because it is a student newspaper, and it has been a source of information for many students. It has provided a platform for students to express their opinions and share their experiences. It has also helped to foster a sense of community among students.

Although I am not a student, I believe that the Hilltop is an important resource for students and should continue to be supported. It is important to maintain a student-focused approach to the newspaper, and I will work to ensure that this continues.

As a former student, I believe that the Hilltop is an important part of the student experience at Howard University. It provides a valuable forum for students to express their ideas and opinions, and it has been a source of inspiration for many students.

I hope that the next generation of student leaders will continue to support the Hilltop and make it a vibrant and engaging student newspaper.

Howard Prepares for Election Day

By Josephus Williams IV

FRIDAY MARCH 3, 2000

Election Day Iowa holds its 12th successful election process. All eyes were on Howard University, as the Howard University Student Association, Howard University Assembly, and Howard University Student Government held their elections. The General Election Committee has thus far conducted the process, and the candidates have been approved for this year's election. The HUSA L.E.G.A.C.Y slate of candidates consists of a wide variety of issues, including academic, social, and political matters. The HUSA Legacy slate of candidates, led by Student President Andre Street and Student Vice-President Shella Simmons, has made up the 45th class of students who will address the Howard community. The election has been without its share of challenges, as the candidates have faced difficulty in gaining public support. As such, the General Election Committee has decided to provide the candidates with a platform.
Why Aren’t Women Running for HUSA President?

By Jenni-Jo Williams IV

Women have not been a significant presence in student government at Howard University. Although a number of women have been elected to the board of trustees, there has been an absence of leadership in the student body. The lack of women in the student government has been a source of concern for many students, who feel that there is a need for change.

Recently, the Howard University Student Association (HUSA) elected its first female president, who has been lauded for her leadership and vision. However, the election of a female president has sparked questions about the broader issue of women’s underrepresentation in student government.

The University has made efforts to increase diversity in student government, including the creation of an office of diversity and inclusion. However, the lack of female representation in student government remains a concern.

In addition, the University has faced criticism for its handling of the HESA (Howard Student Employee Association) strike, which began in 2019. The strike was led by a group of female students who demanded better working conditions and fair compensation. The strike was eventually settled, but the incident highlights the need for greater representation of women in student government.

The underrepresentation of women in student government is not limited to Howard University. Across the country, women continue to face barriers to leadership positions in student government. This issue is particularly relevant in the current political climate, where women are increasingly being called upon to lead in various capacities.

The lack of women in student government is not just a concern for women, but for the entire student body. Women bring diverse perspectives and experiences to the table, and their absence from leadership positions can result in decisions that do not fully reflect the needs and desires of the student body.

The election of a female president at Howard University is a step in the right direction. However, there is still much work to be done to ensure that women are fully represented in student government at Howard and across the country.

In conclusion, the underrepresentation of women in student government is a significant issue that requires attention. The election of a female president at Howard University is a positive step, but it is important to continue to support and encourage women to run for leadership positions in student government.

Donald Henson says it's not too late. As the week before polls of campus-wide elections open, Henson and his campaign team, Hilltop Student Alliance (HSA), are hoping for a last-minute surge of support to propel him to victory in the presidential race. But even if he falls short this time, Henson believes his experience is preparing him for the future.

"It's not too late. We've got one more day to win," Henson said. "I'm not giving up on myself. I've been misleading people by saying I'm not giving up. I am giving up. I'm going to pass on my experience to the next person who wants to run."

Henson's campaign has been focused on promoting his credentials and experience. He has served as a student leader and has been involved in various campus organizations. His campaign promises include increased transparency and accountability in student government, as well as increased communication with students.

"I'm not as revolutionary as John Henson," Henson said. "I'm not as revolutionary as Louis Sterling. I'm not as revolutionary as Shantrell Lewis. I'm not as revolutionary as anyone else. But I'm the one who can make it happen, because I have the experience and the knowledge."
KPMG Consulting

"KPMG would like to congratulate the Howard University community at-large for a job well done in managing the challenges of the Millennium roll-over. The partnership of KPMG and Howard University in this endeavor was an exceptional demonstration of what can be accomplished working together as a strategic technical partnership. We look forward to partnering with the broader Howard University community in the future."

Mike Winston-Candidate for Graduate Trustee

By Monica Swenson
Vanderbilt University

"Vanderbilt is a great school," attests Michael David Winston, candidate for vice presidential running mate in this year's SGA general election. "I want to be the remains of key decisions, the ability to become president, to sit in a crucial position and participate in the future of the University." Winston makes his ambitions clear in the first part of this interview.

"We need to understand how we can constituency: the Natural Sciences Executive Vice-president, Garlic's role will be to raise Garrett, de-velopment, especially in the areas of counseling, and the social sciences. We need to look at the potential of our students, to make sure that we are in a position to bring in the best students, to bring in the best faculty, and to provide a strong foundation for our future."

Winston plans to make sure that the graduate students have a voice in the decision-making process, and that the graduate students' needs are taken into account. He is committed to improving the facilities and services available to the graduate students, and to ensuring that the graduate students have a strong voice in the development of the University. He is confident that he can make a real difference in the future of the University, and that he can bring in the best students and faculty to help make that happen.

One of the student questions was about the graduate students' role in the decision-making process. Winston was enthusiastic about the potential of the graduate students, and he was confident that he could bring in the best students to help make that happen.

"I have never been a politician and I never will be. I have pursued this position out of a feeling of personal responsibility!"

Clarence McCray
HUSA president candidate

"Our plans are not intangible. This shouldn't be difficult because we're battling the "real" issues."

Eloni Crayton
HUSA vice-president candidate

"Our programs are small, but they make sense. We have the resources to make small changes with large impacts."

Seliano Simmons
HUSA president candidate

"We are people and students first, we exist in a humane way and we are approachable."

Nikkole Salter
HUSA vice-president candidate

"I know that we were brought together not only to be HUSA president and vice-president, but so that Dawn could save my life."

Nwaji Jibunoh
HUSA president candidate

"Each individual has priorities. I knew what I could commit myself to."

Dawn Henson
HUSA vice-president candidate

"After being editorial editor and discussing what was wrong on campus, I started becoming concerned with the issues and thought I could be a critic-to-leader. As a result, I've been thinking about it [undergraduate trustee position] for a while now."

Charles Coleman
Undergraduate Trustee candidate
The Hilltop Endorses O.R.E.M.

The editorial board of The Hilltop, the nation's largest black collegiate newspaper, endorses the O.R.E.M. slate of Sellano Simmons and Nikkole Salter for President and vice president of the Howard University Student Association (HUSA) for 2000-2001.

Our View

The O.R.E.M. slate, Sellano Simmons and Nikkole Salter, are the most qualified for the positions of HUSA president and vice president for the 2000-2001 academic school year.

Does it really hurt to push a few levers in a voting machine? If there was a vote for a new Tupac Shakur or Jimi Hendrix at the Ral J. Bunche Center, there would be a mass exodus to the back yard, there would be a mass exodus to the polls. It's also sad when more students show up to complain when some students who do not care about Convocation, Charter Day or even speak about U.S. history. Simply put, these students have no concept on what is happening around them. We don't care about Conversation Day or even speak about U.S. history. We are still writing history.

The student body of Howard University should abandon its apathetic attitude and let its voices be heard in Wednesday's student government elections.
