General Assembly Urges Students to Participate in UGSA
BY SHANAI HARDIS
Campaign Editor

The second general assembly of the 2006-2007 school year took place, presenting representatives of their elected issues of assembly regulations as well as budget and event planning. Representatives also made plans to enhance public relations for the assembly in order to get students more involved and knowledgeable about Issues.

First, Ferguson announced that the number of students becoming more active in the general assembly, saying that it should be more students present than representatives so that they can know what is going on. He suggested that students should be involved in the general assembly as well. One suggested that they have time to be together and time to have meetings.

Others did not disagree as Ferguson continued to encourage student involvement within assembly and committee meetings as well, suggesting ways they can be more active in the budget meetings.

Some students also found out where finance meetings are, as they are open to everyone, Ferguson said. He urges those interested in attending future meetings to connect Finance Chair Charlie Fortunato or Student Government President Colin Costello. According to Costello, there is no set date for the next meeting, but a UGSA Vice President attended the last one and a PUSA budget from the summer and current fall programming budget for the fall being.

We decided that it will be held on Thursday, with a spring and summer budget planned as well. We will meet more frequently," said Ferguson.

Students To Remember Late English Professor at Rankin Memorial Service
BY KENYA DOWNS
Contributing Editor

Few students are likely to keep up with events that took place in the Freshmen Convocation center during the summer.

One such event that registrants for love of the late Dr. Donald Cooper's memory had noticed that suddenly over the summer the location was replaced with 6'3" John Walker. Even fewer students, may know that the reason behind the sudden switch was that Cooper passed away on June 30, 2006, due to a brain hemorrhage.

"I registered for his class in July and then by August the name of the professor had changed," said Bob Jacoby, freshman communications major. "On the first day, of class, Dr. Walker informed us that Dr. Cooper had been replaced by a Mr. Cooper.

Many of Cooper's peer are questioning why Howard University failed to notify the students about the passing of their colleague. This has left his former students shocked and confused.

"We are beginning to see the 6'3" to resolve issues, just for the next semester," Nichols said.

Also at the meeting, held of Business Vice President Mark Thomas urged representatives and student involvement in the state of the School's address field from Dean Harry Newson.

Walker said the address is disease concern covering the problems such as class lack and lack of printers in the computer lab that the Business School has been having.

"Everything is going to come out and have what is going on so as many to our school soon," Nichols said.

Ferguson agreed and said, "The issues that the school is facing are ones that can happen in your classes. The school is trying to make sure teachers should definitely be informed or addressed.

Aside from finances and grading issues, Ferguson also hopes to get students involved in activities that they will be helping to support, including World AIDS Day and Peace Project, as well as possibly setting up a separate site for HUSA and the assembly for students to use.

All present assembly members were asked to sign the constitution in every fourth and third Wednesday in the Digital Auditorium in the Blackburn Library, unless otherwise involved with general assembly, students are invited to the general assembly.

The celebrations related to participate in the homecoming parade will be announced today at 9 p.m. in the Punch-out.

Homecoming, known to attract various colors and specialties, will be boasting about 150 celebrities from television, movie, and music industries this year at the parade.

Rumors about the names of these celebrities will be revealed until this week, parade coordinator Keith McGowan said.

"The student population will be very pleased. It will be a lot of oohs and ahhs," added McGowan.

Students were surprised by the news that Dr. Donald Cooper, an English professor, died this summer. A memorial service will be held in Andrew Rankin Chapel today. Some students had already heard about Cooper's passing.

Cooper's presence certainly be missed within the Department and Howard. Thomas Clarke said his contributions to the English department were "big. He was one of the best professors in the English Department at Howard. He tried to live by his students by sharing his personal experiences and attempting to stimulate critical thinking.

People will miss an extremely interesting and entertaining force. English is an art and he perfomed well.

Study Reveals Whites Recognize Privilege

BY WHITNEY BOOGS

According to the United States Declaration of Independence, "all men are created equal." However, many Americans believe otherwise. That's among the findings in a recent study conducted by the University of Minnesota. The study concluded that whites appear to be more aware of their privilege than previously assumed.

Doug Hartman, associate professor of sociology at the University of Minnesota and co-author of "The Critical Whiteness Studies," said, "Whites appear to be more aware of privilege than the existing white privilege scholars have often indicated."

"I think that based on the fact that about 35 percent of whites acknowledge that existing prejudices and discrimination (among other factors) help explain why they, as a group, tend to be favored relative to African-Americans."

Hartman said that whites tend to view their privilege as their standard opportunities awarded across the board. "We've Got Issues..."

Democrat vs. Republican

We've Got Issues... will appear in The Hilltop every other Friday. Produced in part by Project Voice, this section will appear in The Hilltop every other Friday.

Issue: This election cycle, African-American Republican candidates are running in several high-office elections (Candidates for the governorship of Pennsylvania; and Maryland Senate Candidate Max Sain). On the other hand, there's a possibility of high representation of African-American Democrats by congressional candidates if the Democrats win the House this November. African-Americans have long been the path of choice for blacks, young and middle. But not everyone in the community is taking the minority vote for granted.

Question: "Which party will best serve the interests of African-Americans in the 110th Congress?"

Liberal View:

The stroke that the Republican Party has made to all African-American voters has been to overlook the vote of the new majority minorities, a group that between 2000 and 2004 accounted for 25 percent of the U.S. population and for Hispanics. Under this administration, the immigration laws have been relaxed and entry into this country has become about as exploitive labor in front of a Home Depot in a lucrative construction zone.

President Bush is one of the few that has welcomed the illegal aliens with open arms and by extension is working to dilute the voting power of the African-American community.

Conservative View:

For over 40 years, black voters have strongly aligned themselves with the Democratic Party. Republicans have all been clubs at swimming the vote of the new majority minority, a group that between 2000 and 2004 accounted for 25 percent of the U.S. population and for Hispanics. Under this administration, the immigration laws have been relaxed and entry into this country has become about as exploitive labor in front of a Home Depot in a lucrative construction zone.

President Bush is one of the few that has welcomed the illegal aliens with open arms and by extension is working to dilute the voting power of the African-American community.

"The reason is that the Democratic party has been negligent, ignoring a core liberal opinion, one that says people should be their voice for an entire people. The majority of African-Americans believe in the rule of law as temporary workers and illegal immigrants to obtain legal status as temporary workers."

"The Republican party has also overseen this ever-growing population of illegal aliens to obtain legal status, and has encouraged illegal immigration to obtain legal status, and has encouraged illegal immigration to the United States by allowing them to stay."

"The current tax structure has only benefited the upper-classes. This situation most adversely affects African-Americans, who who have not been able to do much about political and cultural advantages given to whites in American society. They argue that these advantages need to be used, but not to others."

Howard's Athletic Games Not Shown On Television

It has become a part of American culture to watch sports on television, some of which are college sports. However, many Howard students say it is not so easy to watch some of the bigger sports on campus, such as football and basketball, as they are not consistently on ESPNU. Some other students say it is a good idea to some students, but it is also very expensive to consistently watch these larger networks like ESPN.

Even when Howard games are on television, many students are aware. Howard vs. Hampton at last Saturday is on ESPNU, but many students say they do not watch the game because it is beneficial to have the games on television. The athletic department usually looks to selling sports packages, but the expensive package is not what many students want. The games are not shown on television because it is a business decision, some students say. Some students want to have it, but it is not a good idea for them.

Howard Football Team Stays Face

Division 1-A Rutgers Tomorrow

The Bison travel to New Jersey tomorrow night to face Rutgers University at 7 p.m. The last time Howard faced a Division 1-A team was in 2003, when the Bison played the Alcorn State.

The Scarlet Knights entered the game with a 1-3 record. The team was 3-3 since 1981. Rutgers is playing off of a big win against Ohio State, but they have not won over North Carolina this season.

Rutgers is led by offensive line backup Brian Leonard, who ranks in the top 10 in the nation in tackles, yards in tackles, and yards in tackles in the back four in major categories (rushing attempts, receptions, tackles, rushing attempts, and rushing attempts against LMC). Rutgers coach Greg Schiano returns an interception for a score. The team has played against Air Force, Army, and Missouri, but have not won against Rutgers.

Global Warming: Still a ‘Burning’ Issue In 2006

BY DANI E LLE KWAT I NG

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, the United States’ climate is expected to change due to global warming, but Washington residents are not taking enough action to prepare for the expected changes. "Each of the United States’ schools will become a tree," said one.

This change will cause increased precipitation and evaporation, more intense rainstorms and flood waters. "Global warming will affect every type of climate and natural regions. From the atmosphere, such as carbon dioxide and methane, to the land itself. The problem is that it is a problem that cannot be fixed," said another.

"In the section of Region I, we have seen some really amazing changes. We have seen a giant increment that has been a trend and a dis�sant that exists within the city. That is the reason that people cannot live in the city," said a source.

Horton Staff Writer

"Overpopulation is the over ride of any of the issues. Carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases have increased, and will continue to increase, as China and India develop industrially," said one. "It will not be in a period of global warming: almost a degree F. At the last 50 years. There are likely to be stronger storms out there, more deadly hurricanes, and melting ice caps in the future, if things don’t change."

The EPA also reported that there are efforts that accumulate from long-time exposure to pollution. The direct health effects include increased mortality, and illness resulting from adverse health effects in the intensity and duration of heat waves. Deaths, injuries, psychological disorders and exposure to dangerous pollutants in water supplies could increase if extreme weather events, such as storms and floods, become more frequent.

Rita Holmes, a freshman pre-pharmacy major, thinks that people do not do enough to prevent environmental changes. "I have seen many cities encourage recycling and energy waste, and people have taken the suggestion to heart. The problem is that citizens are actually taking these suggestions to heart. I think there should be less recycling bins and all businesses have to recycle bins instead of just garbage cans," Holmes said.

On Howard’s campus, several clubs are dedicated to spreading the word. Danielle McGhee, a junior political science and engineering major, is a Howard representative for SAVE DC, which is a National Association of Student Environmental Leagues campus. "On Howard’s campus, students are far from environmentally aware. In fact, we have even learned that the school has an environmentally-conscious group. The group is called the Student Environmental Association of Howard University (SEAHU)," McGhee said. "Students throw the hilltop in the trash, litter the Yard with unwanted flyers and papers, and then complain when the campus is dirty or their tires are punctured by broken glass or metal from bottles and cans left in the street."

McGhee offers solutions for students wishing to do more to help the community. "If students wish to be more environmentally aware or help with the recycling program at Howard University, they can join the Facebook group ‘Can We Get a Tree?’ The environmental group ‘BU Recycles, Do Ye?’ or the SAVE DC group, which is a Washington, D.C. group of students from local universities collectively joining to raise awareness about environmental issues," McGhee said.

Brittany Kepple, a junior dance major, is an environmental activist and a member of Howard’s Environmental Society. Kepple said that students can do much more here to help the campus as well as the rest of the District and environmentally sound.

"The organizations on campus had a great idea by planting trees on the Yard and in various places on campus but we, as a Howard community, should branch out and start planting trees in the areas outside of campus. There is an effective recycling program on campus or in the dorms. Howard should meet with environmental groups on campus to work on implementing a comprehensive, effective recycling program," Keppel said.

Virginia has a lot to offer students who may be looking for a quick weekend getaway.

Road Trip Planner: Virginia

BY DANI E LLE KWATI NG

‘Oh, what a night, the best of nights, when I am at home in Virginia!’

Many people think Virginia, what can you do there?‘ For some, it is a vacation and for the others, it is a place to visit. The “Commonwealth of Virginia” is a 40,000 square mile area, bounded by the Atlantic Ocean, the Rappahannock River, the Blue Ridge Mountains, the Valley, and the Appalachian Plateau. Virginia has three major regions: the mountains in the West, the Piedmont in the central part of the state, and the Tidewater in the East.

Virginia is rich in history. It was the first settled on Virginia’s ground. Now, almost 400 years later, James River in 1607. During that time, many small communities sprang up. ‘The Strip.’ Outdoor activity and culture. Englishmen and, in the Carolinas, the same thing. Virginia was used as battlefields and played a major role in the Civil War.

Not only is Virginia the birthplace of many of our heroes and heroines, Virginia has become a paradise for people. Here, people can enjoy. Patrick Jackson, a Virginia native and senior geography major, is a Howard representative for SAVE DC, which is a National Association of Student Environmental Leagues campus.

"Virginia Beach is cool three-hour getaway that isn’t too expensive,” said Jackson. "Who is from Woodbridge, Va. ‘Ava.’ Virginia Beach there are lots of cemeteries, so you can always check it out.”

Roo the streets, Virginia Beach has been a major spot because of the railroad and major trucking routes that have brought people in from the inland to see the beach. Although the people of Virginia Beach, on average, don’t make as much money as their neighbors to the north in Portland, it is at the fifth largest city in the United States.

As the “strip,” Virginia Beach did a lot more than grow in “The Strip.” Outdoor sailing, windsurfing, kite surfing, scuba diving and popular nature walks are very popular.

Lauren Gordon, a freshman political science major, said, “I decided to take a road trip to VA because they have the best beaches. The beach is very historical, which is the ultimate road trip destination. I made a stop at Virginia Beach.”

What made us cool? she asked.

Leave our Traditions Sacred

We now have revived some traditions around campus with our editors this week. But we want to express our excitement on the campus news source and only seek to tell it how we see it.

That's why we're traversing the many of us to see the freshman class attempt to alter girls visiting Drew to Facebook a whole movement is on when the heat of the screwed Howard's embedded some feathers around campus convenient piece of cement to lived what have become last week when a label off a girl who goes to Drew too much and is being called 'Drew Rat' after freshman year.

And more importantly, we doubt you will have many of us to see the girls realize they are not going to change Howard traditions and define the things that are more important than literally would much rather be called the Boots Wall name loses its power and make up the Drew Rat label, rather than to be guys allow you to be disrespected.

Our View: Freshmen should stop trying to change Howard traditions and focus on the important things like going to class.

Our View: Freshmen should stop trying to change Howard traditions and focus on the important things like getting the 'A's while they're easy and staying away from the regret worth the:String.

In the fall of 2010, you are not going to change the Boots Wall's name or take the label off a girl who goes to Drew too much and is being called a Drew Rat. However, it is up to you whether the girls realize they would much rather be called hot in the pants that literally you will give up.

Don't let that guy throwing crackers on the window "to feed the Drew Rat" off the book, and ladies, don't let bragging out with friends who happen to be girls allow you to be called a "Drew Rat." Call a guy out for what he is, don't be someone who has no female friends and is waiting for his mother to visit in finally use his violation.

It's admirable that many of the girls want to defend the "honor" of their female friends, but fall back. Because, in reality, it's really even uses the name "Boots Wall" or "Drew Rat" after freshman year.

The same way you didn't believe the reason I did not make up the Drew Rat label, was lucky to be alive. They are also major problems in the African American community.

So to the freshmen class, ask that you follow your fate choice change traditions to more important things like getting the 'A's while they're easy and staying away from the regret worth the String.
