The Howard Law Journal presented an event featuring panels, speakers, and discussions on a variety of topics related to race, law, and social justice. The event was titled "What is Black?: A Symposium on the History of the Black Panther Party and its Impact on Community Improvement." The keynote speaker was Malik Zulu Shabazz, National Chairman and Attorney for the Black Panther Party. The event aimed to provide a platform for discussing the history, impact, and legacy of the Black Panther Party, as well as to promote dialogue on issues such as police brutality, criminal justice reform, and community empowerment.

During the event, attendees engaged in discussions led by experts, law students, and panelists, exploring topics such as the historical context of the Black Panther Party, its role in community organizing, and the ongoing impact of its principles today. The event featured a range of speakers, including Patricia J. Williams, a law professor and author, who spoke about the historical context and contemporary relevance of the Black Panther Party. Other speakers discussed the party's role in addressing social and political issues, as well as its legacy and contributions to modern-day activism.

The event was part of a larger initiative by the Howard Law Journal to promote critical thinking and dialogue on issues of race, law, and social justice. It aimed to foster a deeper understanding of the complexities involved in issues such as police brutality, criminal justice reform, and community empowerment. The event was well-attended, with attendees from various backgrounds and perspectives, all of whom were eager to engage in meaningful discussions and explore new ideas and perspectives.

Some Howard Students Share, Others Don't Dare

BY MERCIA WILLIAMS-MURRAY

For most new students at Howard University, it's the perfect place to foster friendships and lifelong bonds. But for all the new students who are roommates, the experience can be unique and rewarding, or not so much. Some students believe sharing living space with another person, for nearly all the day, every day, is a very different experience than being alone. Some students have roommates they like, others don't want to share the experience with anyone. But no matter what your experience is, it's your business. The goal is to find a roommate that you can share space with and enjoy.
Payne Visits Fine Arts

PAYNE, from CampusA1

Payne also disclosed how there is much to learn about the industry once actors become a part of it. "People assume you know, so we have to share information," he said. When asked about his role on the early 90's comedy Martin and if he was typecast after the show ended, he admitted, "People think you are that person. It was hard to get out of that best friend role," Payne said.

Jacqueline Washington, a senior directing major said, "I definitely got motivation and inspiration. This reaffirmed my dedication to the arts."

Product Red Spreads AIDS Awareness Globally

BY KANDIS MASON
Contributing Writer

AIDS has claimed the lives of an estimated 30 million people in Sub-Saharan Africa, and experts project that death toll to increase by as much as 20 percent each year in the region in the world, according to AVERT, an international HIV and AIDS charities' website.

To try and offset the deaths, the HIV and AIDS epidemic that have resulted from this epidemic, numerous efforts have been supported in order to combat the spread of the disease.

Their efforts have been successful, though Product Red, an initiative started by rock star U2 and former U2 manager Paul McGuinness, has been very successful in the world of the music world.

The companies will be donating a portion of their profits to the charities of the music industry, and the AIDS charities that the charities have been charged with.

The companies that have been involved in this effort includes: Apple, Sony, and实现了, Amazon.

But despite the progress that has been made, the challenge to stop the spread of the disease remains.
The electronics industry is predicting a continued profitable holiday season as consumers gear up for the December 25, 2006, holiday shopping frenzy. According to a report from the Consumer Electronics Association (CEA) this year, shoppers are expected to spend more than $40 billion over the holiday season, up 11% from the previous year. The CEA predicts that digital video cameras, MP3 players, cell phones, and televisions will be top-selling items.

For students looking for a must-have gift, the new iPod could be the perfect gift. The iPod Nano, which is available in 4GB and 8GB versions, allows users to listen to music, watch videos, and view photos. The iPod also has a built-in FM radio and can be used to listen to podcasts. The newest addition to the iPod family is the iPod Shuffle, which is a portable MP3 player that can store up to 700 songs.

Parents are urged to look for other sources of financial aid for college-age children.

Parents Underestimate Costs of College Price Tag

BY RAYSHION GREGG

Parents think that scholarships are the best way to pay for their children's college education. While scholarships can help, the full cost of college is a complex calculation that many students and parents may not fully understand.

A recent study by the National College Parents Association found that the average cost of college for a family with a student enrolled in a four-year public university was $24,340. This cost includes tuition, fees, room and board, books, and other expenses.

Parents often underestimate the cost of college, which can lead to a financial crisis for families. The study found that families who underestimated the cost of college were more likely to take out student loans or default on them.

Parents need to understand the cost of college before making financial decisions. They should consider factors such as the cost of tuition, fees, room and board, books, and other expenses. They should also consider the cost of living off campus and the cost of transportation.

In addition, parents should consider financial aid options, such as scholarships, grants, and loans. These options can help reduce the cost of college and make it more affordable for families.

Parents and students should work together to create a realistic budget for college. They should consider all sources of financial aid and develop a plan to pay for college.

Lady Bison Soccer Pick Up First Win in OT Thriller

BY WINNIE CLARK-JENKINS
Milford, Ohio

Excitement and relief came from the field of Greene Stadium Sunday afternoon when the Howard women's soccer team finally won a game.

Lady Bison soccer team was able to pull out its first win of the season in overtime.

On Friday, Anderson played in her first game and worked hard with her fellow Bison to pull out a win.

Her goal helped the team keep their six-game losing streak alive. The Lady Bison have been a struggling team this year, but according to Anderson, they are just not giving enough effort.

"They just need to pull out their jerseys and fight on the field," Anderson said.

The Lady Bison had a rough season plagued by injuries, but Anderson continued to play at a high level.

"I want to have more heart and passion out on the field. I need to work harder and go all out every game," Anderson said.

The Lady Bison scored six goals in their first overtime win.

The game winning goal was scored with assists made by Longwood's two freshmen, Diallo and senior defensive lineman Rudy Hardie (2.5 tackles for losses) continue to make a strong argument as the top linebacker corp in the MEAC.

Men's Soccer Team Falls in Overtime, 1-0 to Longwood

BY WINNIE CLARK-JENKINS
Milford, Ohio

In a non-stop battle for control, the Howard men's soccer team was able to keep Longwood in check in a 1-0 victory for the Bison.

The score was 0-0 until the 62nd minute. The game winning goal was scored with assists made by Longwood's two freshmen, Diallo and senior defensive lineman Rudy Hardie (2.5 tackles for losses) continue to make a strong argument as the top linebacker corp in the MEAC.

Overall, our play was great, but the heat of the game, the stuff happens," Taylor said.

Along with Taylor's team was out of the top ranking in goals against Longwood.

"We just always see more of our finishing ability in games," Taylor said.

Despite the powerfully powerful team's dominance, the Lady Bison were able to hold off Longwood's shots despite the fact that visibility was limited.

"The Lady Bison were able to put up a tough fight against the Bison defense," Taylor said.

"If we continue to play like we did today," said Taylor. "We just want to keep it at the end and the rest will take care of itself in Greene Stadium.

"I think I did single things," said Taylor. "We just could not finish and we could not make that winning goal."

Local High Schools Getting Shine

Drug dealers and killers are given too much attention in the studios of D.C. public high schools.

That's why we at The Hilltop were so excited to learn that inner-city schools Coolidge High and Dunbar High would have their football game against each other televised on ESPN.

Friday night, the two teams met up and the roof of Dunbar's stadium in Northeast D.C. to an awaiting crowd of over 3,000 fans.

Dunbar was selected by ESPN to help "level the playing field" and prove that black kids can play with white kids anywhere.

Washington Post sports columnist George Solomon noted that even at halftime people were still outside waiting to get inside.

The game was not as close as it was expected to be, reported the Washington Post.

Today's game unified the community, even if it was just for one night, and it showed that we can do something about the direction of our country.

Along with ESPN's commentary, other notable sports figures weighed in.

Dunbar graduate and former defensive star LeBron James weighed in.

The New York Times weighed in.

The game, the was stomp ing on America's rights by jeopardizing our safety as a crucial link in terror plots from a jailed terror leader. This terror leader to terrorists. This terror leader to terrorists.
