By DENISE HORN & AUBREY DONNELLS

Rapper and hip-hop mogul Shawn Carter, better known as Jay-Z, swooped through campus Saturday night in a flash concert bound by contract. Howard was one of the seven stops the artist made on his "12-12-12" final tour.

"They were looking for something new and different. Something, really, really cool," said one student who witnessed the event at Live Nation production company. Live Nation produced the show.

The live-stream production set up in front of the Washington D.C. stop Howard was the only indie campus the tour visited. According to past shows, the artist never plans to get a lot of attention at college campuses, but Howard was an exception.

The artwork on stage was cool and unique. The rapper arrived by a non-traditional venue, a non-traditional venue, flying into the city on a private jet and arriving in the "Theatre, Short and Sweet, Best Portland production company. Live Nation production company.

South Africa Passes Bill Legalizing Same-Sex Marriage

BY JANICE WALTON

On a continent where South Africa crafted a liberal regime, which denied blacks the vote rights in contrast to the white voters, this move is a big step forward for the country's constitution.

The bill provides for the voluntary union of two persons, which is institutionalized and regulated by either a marriage or civil union.

It looks into the ways actively supporting the partnership is heterosexual or homosexual.

After the long years of apartheid's discriminatory regimes which denied blacks and others their rights, South Africa's legal change, differing from traditional African societies, is a step toward social and sexual orientation.

The bill is seen as a blow to the country's enemies, those who promote democracy, as they wish to extinguish their options. By declaring that never again shall it be that any South African will have to be segregated by law, the bill is of a great deal, both real and emotional.

Love Jones Caters to Ladies

BY MERCIA WILLIAMS-MURPHY

The Students' Giveback Project is an organization that brings a different catch phrase that prompts people to help others. The founder, Joshua Nelson, said in between rushing around the crowded ghettos, that they have a great community service project.

Howard, along with Pennsylvania Millennial III started Project Giveback, a local community service organization, in 2006 after he collected money and donations to help feed the homeless during the holiday season.

"It's not like I planned to start an organization," said Josh. "At some point between the holidays, I realized that those people needed to help the homeless to survive and supervise the food distribution."

In the 2006 holiday season, the first phase of the organization involved feeding the homeless. Bishop Jarvis Seegars expressed how "People liked the idea," Miller said. "We decided to expand the project to help the homeless with the second phase from Thanksgiving through the holiday season."

Several students shared poems about their love during the special Valentine's Day event held last Friday at Howard University. It was a night indulged with poetry, spoken word and song. The students shared their feelings through a variety of expressions such as their ability to contribute to the community service organizations.

The women questioned Gourdine said. "At various churches, fraternities and sororities we've asked people to help us give back. People helped us with the project."

The students said that the second phase of the project was approximately 4:30 to 7:00 p.m., when volunteers assembled the food packages at Propper-Henry Elementary School. "The last week of the project was the actual distribution of the food to various families by the volunteers.

Several students said that they were engaged in giving back to the community, but it was a night in need of a traveling. "In the end, I must admit that it was a night of being generous," said the students.

Several students were busy helping the homeless in various organizations and the students were engaged in giving back to the community, but it was a night that was a mix of hard work and being generous. "In the end, I must admit that it was a night of being generous," said the students.

The release of Microsoft's media player, the Zune, is slated to create a rivalry between its parent company and the Apple iPod. The Zune offers features that do not include FM radio and music file sharing among Zune owners.

"I think that the FM tuner is a very good idea," Ira. "I have the FM transmitter, and it accomplishes the same thing in the iPod or 60 GB of 80 GB," he said.

"But the future of the iPod is the Zune," said Howard. "I think they are going to have to add music, so that we can listen to music with the Zune, and that's what I like about it."

"In some ways, it's the same thing as the iPod," said Lauren. "But overall, it's just nice to have another option. Just like having a different car or a different computer."

The Howard Bison football team closed out the 2006 season with a 20-17 victory over Delaware State, bringing their final record to 5-6 and finishing 3rd in the MEAC to 4-4. The win propelled the Bison (8-5 overall, 6-2 in the MEAC) from earning a share of the conference title, with three honours going to Hampton.

After a Howard three-yard gain on a fake punt from quarterback Bryan Johnson, junior running back Alphonso Johnson took the ball 29 yards for a touchdown to make the score 10-7 before half time, then drove 80 yards on the score to wide receiver Larry Johnson connecting with again answered a Delaware State touchdown with one of their own, this time with Johnson connecting with wide receiver Landon Hill on a 24-yard touchdowns pass. Howard dodged a bullet when Delaware State recovered a fumble put inside Howard's red zone, but failed to capitalise as they missed a field goal.

Christiane is known to have many dimensions and through the simple means of writing with a music book and let’s “sing Go! It be of charge of your life, you can live a life knowing that God will always be there in good time and bad,” Heather Veitch said.

Not only is Veitch a Christian, but she’s also a for- mer Los Angeles radio host and the founder of JC’s (Jesus Christ) Girls. Veitch, along with Lisa (Jo) and a group of women from the San Gabriel Church in California, created the Web site designed to minis­ ter to women and men in the adult entertainment in­ dustry that is making moves throughout the country.

“I’ve never heard of adult entertainment before,” said Deborah, another sophomore psychology major.

“The idea of porn and adult entertainment, though, being a Cali­ fornia myself I know that the adult entertainment industry is big there, it’s good that people are taking the initia­ tive to stop what’s going on,” Avitali said.

Based out of Riverside, Cali­ fornia, the site, which is now being advertised well over 100,000 visits since its launch in August 2005. To keep the name appeal as a porn site, their site was designed by a soft porn veteran designer and the photos were done by famous pornographic family.

Basically designed to function as an entertainment Web site, the service sheets show up when Web sur­ fers type in "jesusgirls." The "look is kept because the creators wanted to appeal to people in the adult entre­ tainment industry and move them in a subtle manner.

Even the spokeswoman, Heather, Levi and Terri, are an example of American’s new generation of mavens.

But Eugene does not think the new feature is intrusive. "It allows people to express their opinions, and it lets people know what I’m thinking," Eugene said.

"Anyone that under­ stands the Lord’s message is fit to spread it. One cannot say ‘be good’ or ‘suspicious’ when describing the abilities of one person versus another in sharing the Lord’s message, for it is the Holy Spirit that speaks to another person’s heart," Giller said.

When asked if Impact has ever been on people in the adult enter­ tainment industry, Giller said, "We would do in no way be opposed to doing as in the future. However, an event like this is not needed if we feel that it is needed in." Medusa Bourbonnais, a representative from JC’s Girls agrees with Giller and thinks that students should not be allowed in the industry. So, anywhere that they exist.

"All too often, Christians across the board [students and nonsstudents alike] tend to live naive in that box that you seek the traditional trend of ministry, like attending bible studies, evangelizing door-to-door, going down to casinos or going where there exists any of those right next door who are desperate for a little love and hope," Bourbonnais said.

Bourbonnais also says people think who work in this line of ministry need to be astutely dedicated.

"For me more important than a religion degree, those who become involved in a ministry like JC’s Girls need to be spiritually armed and mature. We seek to minister to people in the adult entertainment industry that the enemy is after and throwing in—therefore if we are not armed well in a relationship with other believers and Christ, we are not likely to withstand attacks from the enemy." While I am all set, meeting with his turf, bourdonnais added.

Facebook Users Question Privacy and Purpose of Added Features

It’s 8:37 p.m. and sophomore psychology and human development major Alexa Arambid is taking a break from her homework to check out Facebook.com, where she finds that she has been tagged in several of her friend’s notes.

She peruses the notes casually, and finds many birthday wishes, updates from her friends from high school and random funny anecdotes.

Arambid spends a few moments responding to the comments before returning to her homework.

Arambid, like other Howard students, has been swept away by Internet phenomenon Facebook.com. With notes, a form of blogging that allows people to keep track of their friends, students have even been tricked into becoming addicted to Facebook.

As the popular social networking site, Facebook, leads to the similarity, many students say that they feel like they are addicted to Facebook.

Did you know that Facebook users are more likely to use the site to express their thoughts than to just show up at a party or club? According to the social networking site, Facebook.com, people use Facebook notes to brag.

"I want you to know I would just tell you," he says, "It’s more personal than reading about it, but it’s a lot more info.

Arambid also said that there is no time he could use him itself the feature.

"I was asked if the Facebook note was completely for fun," Arambid said.

She believes that Facebook notes are like journals, except that the world can see it one’s thoughts. Robin is a little way of the notes that people publish and their notes.

"If I want to say something to people, I have access to them. One cannot say ‘be good’ or ‘suspicious’ when describing the abilities of one person versus another in sharing the Lord’s message, for it is the Holy Spirit that speaks to another person’s heart," Giller said.

On CBS Sunday morning news show, Face the Nation, and former Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee By. Charles E. Rangel (D-N.Y.), reaffirmed that his desire to push a bill that would reinstitute a mandatory military draft.

Rangel is running behind this push is questionable. As stated on the show, Rangel feels as though reinstating the draft would further the interests of minorities than his rationale, we staunchly consider more misguided political strategies. As for the idea of the pos-donations, I believe the voters are a race.

Our View: The way to avoid war is through diplomacy, not by raising troop numbers.
