Student Seekers at Job Fair

BY ERIC BAUNER

Students arrived at the Blackburn Student Center on the morning of Thursday, March 1, 2007, to attend the Career Fair hosted by the Howard University Student Activities Board (HUSA). The fair, held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., featured representatives from a wide range of organizations, including corporations, government agencies, non-profits, and universities. Attendees had the opportunity to network with professionals, learn about various career fields, and explore potential job and internship opportunities.

The fair was well-attended, with hundreds of students in attendance. Representatives from companies and organizations spoke to students about their organizations, job opportunities, and the qualifications they were looking for in candidates. Many students took the opportunity to ask questions and learn more about the companies and the careers they represented.

Overall, the Career Fair was a successful event that provided students with valuable networking opportunities and information about potential career paths. It highlighted the importance of career planning and the role that organizations such as HUSA play in supporting student success.

While people are constantly concerned about what Howard can do for them as far as safety is concerned, they are also quick to question what we are able to do for them.

This is exactly where the Bison Watch programs come in. Established during the 2003-2004 school year by Dean of Residence Life, Charles Gibb, the program brings residents together to form a campus watch program, according to Mark Lee, director of residence life.

Lee is a residence hall student organization of concerned citizens of the residence halls. Larry Pendler, property manager of Howard Hall, told the program is one of the most important programs that we have here at Howard.

The program is comprised of residence hall members who want to help out. They are students who have a concern for their living environment and wish to take their second shift, assisting with the safety and security of the building.

"As a student, being a part of residence hall makes me feel like I am a part of something," Pendler said. "I think that it's a great opportunity for the students to get more involved with their peers and to see everyone, you get more family atmosphere."

In addition to physical safety, Bison Watch has gained experience and opportunities.

"I think that it's a great opportunity for the students to get more involved with their peers and to see everyone, you get more family atmosphere," Pendler said. conflict of interest for the president and vice president to be a part of the legislative branch. "President Bush doesn’t run Congress," he says.

In addition to this major change, Blakemore oversaw more checks and balances made between the executive and legislative branches. Also a constitutional amendment during his term resulted in the establishment of permanent committees.

All of the improvements went along with Blakemore’s platform, “Restoration, order, integrity and vision to HUSA.” Blakemore wanted to make HUSA more efficient, and he felt it was time to pass it off. According to Blakemore, before his term there was “a lot of scandal.”

Blakemore and his staff also oversaw the standardization of the organizational funding process. A portion of the student activities fee typically goes to funding for organizations. HUSA dispenses money to the organizations for programs held throughout the year. This was yet another way Blakemore attempted to "restore order" to HUSA.

Blakemore says that as long as students retain the interest of HUSA executives and work with the administration, objectives will turn out well.

Overall, Blakemore says he enjoyed his term, although he did not run for a second term. However, Blakemore wishes he could have been there longer to achieve goals he did not have time to accomplish in a year.

After graduating in 2005, Blakemore stayed involved in politics. He says, "The summer after I graduated, I was deputy campaign manager for city council back home in Cleveland." He also worked with the National J. Edgar Hoover Foundation. He also attended Syracuse University and Blakemore goes to New York University.

For now, Blakemore is taking a break from politics. He plans to return to Cleveland to work for Congress, or perhaps become mayor beforehand. He also has an interest in non-profit fundraising.

DID YOU WANT ANTIBIOTICS WITH YOUR LUNCH?

WE DIDN’T THINK SO.

That’s why we’re serving naturally raised meat.

In fact, all of the meat we serve in D.C. — beef, chicken and pork — is free of antibiotics and added growth hormones, fed a vegetarian diet and raised humanely.

We think meat raised this way, naturally, tastes better.

Serving naturally raised meat is another step in our ongoing Food With Integrity journey — bringing you the best ingredients from the best sources.

New Howard Deli Opens on 7th Street

BY CHARLOTTE YOUNG

On the corner of Florida Avenue and 7th St., loud booming go-go music can be heard blasting from a solitary black speaker sitting on the street. Three doors down, the smell of fries, chicken and fish tugs on those walking by to take a load off and grab a bite to eat. "I just came in here to eat something while I'm waiting on the bus. I usually get a bacon cheeseburger and fries," said Antonio Brown, a District resident who is already a faithful patron of the business.

The Deli is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Co-owner of the Shaw Howard Deli, Jacob Walker (below) believes it is important to give back to the community. He would like to see more Howard students frequent the Deli.

When I was younger, it drove me crazy when one poorly behaved student would engage in guilt-free behavior, and suddenly the entire class would be sitting inside looking at each other during what was supposed to be recess.

This occurred when an action is followed by an unfavorab le stimulus like getting burned and results in a decrease of repeating the behav­

It happened all the time.

In fact, being impatient is probably the number one way to

Test Yourself
Knowledge is power, so we at The Hilltop decided to test your knowledge. We'll be posing questions and providing you with activities to sharpen your skills and build your knowledge.

Why...

I believe if you truly care for somebody, you will wait. After all,
with everything in the world
happening and changing, knowledge is power.

Consider, understanding and all of those other things are good traits to have — such as being considerate, understanding the next go 'round.

...do American Idol con­

Football Player 2: Yeah. You coming to my room? We can play some Halo.

FBP 1: Nah man, last time I came by you didn't want me to play.

FBP 2: What are you talking about, negro?

FBP 1: You heard me, dude.

FBP 2: Well, no ball, but I was trying to sleep that night and when I go to sleep my senses get all messed up.

FBP 1: What?

FBP 2: Like, my senses - I hear stuff. Like, everything, man.

FBP 1: I'm going to my room.

Government Failing Troops

This Saturday, U.S. Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates called for a review of the outpatient care center at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, which is located on Georgia Avenue in upper Northwest.

Gates said the state of the center is "unacceptable and unacceptable living conditions, as revealed by The Washington Post's first report on Wednesday, to become such a poor facility, they should see the overworked nurses as second-class citizens. If ever they come home from fighting abroad."

Our View: The government needs to take care of its own troops who are away and those who have returned home.

As she watched her older brothers play basketball, Shannon Carlisle dreamed about the fast pace and aggressiveness of the game. She has been working on her game since early childhood.

Born in Indianapolis, Carlisle was raised with a passion for basketball. She began playing the game at a young age and continued to hone her skills throughout her childhood.

Carlisle's dedication to the sport paid off when she was selected to play for the varsity team at Morgan State University. She quickly became a key player, leading her team to numerous victories.

Carlisle's success on the court is a testament to her hard work and determination. She has never taken her talent for granted, always pushing herself to be the best she can be.
