Delta Rally Educates Women

Sorority Calls for End to Violence and Discrimination Against Females

BY MERCIA WILLIAMS-MURRAY

The University of Maryland chapter of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc., hosted the first day of a week-long awareness event that aims to educate students about violence against women.

The rally was held at the university's Student Union Building on April 15, 1999, as part of an effort to raise awareness about the need for more support for women who have experienced sexual assault. The event also served as a way to bring together students from different schools and organizations to discuss the issue.

Key speakers at the rally included a panel of experts and advocates who discussed the impact of violence on women's lives and the steps that can be taken to prevent it. The speakers also emphasized the need for more support for survivors of sexual assault.

The rally was organized by the university's Student Union and was attended by students from across the campus. The event was also supported by the university's Office of Student Affairs and the Center for Student Development.

The rally aimed to raise awareness about the issue and provide resources for students who may have experienced sexual assault. The event was also a way to show support for survivors of sexual assault and to encourage them to seek help.

The Metro Transit Police encourage students to be safe on the Metro, and safety tips were not enough to save a victim. Police said the victim was sexually assaulted.

According to Metro Transit Police records, there were no hazardous conditions at Metro stations reported in the year 2009 and 2010. However, there were 11 other offenses reported in 2008 by the Metro Transit Police. Even though homoe.

Ballston Station

Ballston Station is located in Arlington, VA, and is home to many businesses, restaurants and residents that give the Western Virginia neighborhood an urban atmosphere.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Metro Transit Police officers arrested a man Tuesday night who was threatening to jump onto the tracks near the Gallery Place station.

Just off the orange line is Ballston Station. For some the home is unfamiliar, or for others the stop is a great escape for food and shopping.

Several Howard County officials said that they did not know until after the buggy was removed from the track that it would be a problem.

According to the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) for transportation. According to the WMATA, the transit system transports a third of the federal government's work and millions of tourists to the nation's capital on a regular basis. It is a cover that the transit system is safe and reliable and that of the WMATA.

Softball a Lifelong Love for Larc Pickett

BY KENYA DOWNS

Once the age of the Lancers, Pickett now sportingly hockey in Larc, knew she wanted to play softball. When she turned 16, Pickett had already been playing for?: schooling league teams. Later, she began playing competitively, quickly improving those around her.

By the time she graduated from high school, she didn’t come in as a Novice player but to anyone that Pickett wanted to, he had a softball career to play in college. While at West Virginia University and playing on the basketball team, Pickett moved to Nevada. She was a star in the college and was always an athlete, a basketball player and a softball player.

Her dream is to play softball with a coach. She hasn’t been able to find a coach.

Lance Pickett, commonly known as Larc, plans to volunteer with the Peace Corps and hopes to make high school softball after graduating.

It was their determination and dedication that got Pickett a scholarship to Howard for her freshman year. Impressing the coaches and her teammates, Pickett quickly worked her way up to being a full-time athlete. Her hard work has earned her the status of co-captain for her final season.

Pickett is defensively positioned in the left field, but on offense, she is a key contributor to the team when it comes to producing hits.

Off the field is different. She says, “Off the field, my biggest contribution to the team is my commits.”

The Fight Against Physical Discrimination

A perfect world, I say, brings beauty to everyone. In the world I see, however, many people don't fit in. It seems that when making judgments on others, we are often too hasty. Today's society is struggling with a phenomenon where looks have become an obsession.

According to the Journal of Advertising Research, people who are found to be attractive are accepted in society and given preferential treatment. People who are deemed unattractive are denied or rejected.

With such emphasis placed on one's outer appearance, it is easy to see how a person's worth is perceived. The researchers cited in one study found college students expected to find good hair and more of what they call the "whole package" to have the whole package to be accepted in anything.

On our campus you have the whole package to be accepted in anything.

By Seniors Biology and pre-med double major, Kema De-Lacoste began his Royalty, the movement production company after documenting dreams involving fashion design. De-Lacoste was out in search of a computer-savvy person who could bring his design concepts to life. He was looking for a person to assist him with his fashion line. De-Lacoste and his team were dressing, then, in a way that had been popularized on MySpace and Facebook. The designs were well liked and prompted requests for more. De-Lacoste plans to go to DePauw University after completing his undergraduate degree.

His new venture in fashion is one of the many out- looks that De-Lacoste has to express his creativity. For about a year, De-Lacoste has served as CEO of a clothing company called "Royalty, the Movement." The company is in the process of planning its first fashion show. De-Lacoste is always looking for new and innovative ways to attract customers.

Fashion was the next logical step. The whole idea of starting the literary core came to De-Lacoste in a dream. He and get a lot of inspiration from his dreams. So, i keep it notepad next to my bed to keep record of them, he said. "This idea of starting a clothing line came to me one night, and I set it up in motion the very next day.
