On Sept. 11, 2001, terrorists flew two planes into the World Trade Centers, but in 2008 there are no plans to fly into the Pentagon. Instead, the official memorial to the attack is the National September 11th Memorial and Museum.

The June 26 Groundbreaking Ceremony of the national September 11th Memorial and Museum was attended by President George W. Bush and D.C. Mayor Adrian Fenty. The memorial will be located in lower Manhattan at the site of the former Twin Towers.

President Bush has made the September 11th Memorial and Museum his signature project since his re-election in 2004. He has been a vocal supporter of the project and has worked closely with the National September 11th Memorial and Museum Foundation.

The National September 11th Memorial and Museum Foundation was established in 2004 to raise funds for the construction of the memorial. The foundation has raised over $600 million and is on track to complete the project by the 10th anniversary of the attacks.

The memorial will consist of two large reflecting pools, each 172 feet wide and 800 feet long, that will be lined with trees and plants. The pools will be surrounded by a 225-foot-wide promenade, which will be paved with granite slabs.

The names of the nearly 3,000 people who died in the attacks will be inscribed on bronze parapets that will be installed along the promenade.

The memorial will also feature a museum that will house exhibits on the history of the Twin Towers, the events of September 11, 2001, and the aftermath of the attacks.

The National September 11th Memorial and Museum Foundation has been successful in raising funds and designing a memorial that will be a symbol of resilience and hope.

The memorial is scheduled to open on September 11, 2011, which will be the 10th anniversary of the attacks. The opening ceremony will be attended by President Obama and other dignitaries from around the world.

The National September 11th Memorial and Museum Foundation continues to raise funds and work on the project, and the memorial is expected to become a major tourist attraction in New York City.

The National September 11th Memorial and Museum Foundation has received support from the United States government, as well as the private sector.

The United States government has provided a grant of $300 million to the foundation, and private donations have also been substantial. The foundation has received donations from individuals, corporations, and foundations from around the world.

The National September 11th Memorial and Museum Foundation is committed to ensuring that the memorial is a source of healing and inspiration for future generations.

The memorial will be a reminder of the importance of remembering the events of September 11, 2001, and the sacrifices made by those who lost their lives.

The National September 11th Memorial and Museum Foundation continues to work on the project, and the memorial is expected to open on September 11, 2011.

HU Trains to Prevent Number Two College Killer

BY JADA SMITH

...In the fall of 2007, Howard University student and Howard University student, Althia Scott Davis, was the victim of a violent death. Scott Davis, a young mother of two, was gunned down while driving home from work.

In the wake of Scott Davis's death, Howard University, like many other institutions, has taken steps to prevent similar incidents from occurring. The university has implemented a number of measures to ensure the safety of its students, faculty, and staff. These measures include increased police presence, enhanced security protocols, and the establishment of a crisis response team.

The university has also partnered with local and national organizations to provide resources and support to students who may be struggling with mental health issues. These organizations include the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI), the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention, and the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline.

Moreover, Howard University has worked to create a more inclusive and welcoming environment for its students. The university has implemented a number of initiatives to promote diversity and inclusion, including the creation of a diversity and inclusion task force and the establishment of a multicultural center.

In addition, Howard University has implemented a number of programs to promote student well-being and mental health. These programs include a peer support network, counseling services, and a suicide prevention program.

Overall, Howard University has taken a holistic approach to promoting student safety and well-being. The university's efforts to prevent and respond to incidents of violence and to promote mental health and well-being are commendable and serve as a model for other institutions.

Sitting on his front stoop a few years ago in Washington, D.C., Olverster Huggee, 32, was talking about his past years living on campus.

"I only had to walk up the stairs one or two times a day," said Huggee. "It's about the person in the self, so you're nice and safe," he said. "If you are going to walk up the stairs, you're not going to be hassled about being a person." Huggee, who is a self-taught nail technician, has been working in the beauty industry for more than 10 years.

He said that he started his career in the nail industry after he was fired from a previous job. "I was fired from the salon, but I was able to start my own career," he said.

Huggee said that he has been a self-taught nail technician for more than 10 years, and he said that he enjoys his work. "I have been doing nails for a while, and I enjoy what I do," he said.

WHO WILL SELL MORE ALBUMS?

Kanye West or 50 Cent?

"50 Cent is more marketable to both whites and blacks, and tends to buy more albums."

—Gary Freeman, junior management major

"Kanye. His topics are more relevant and his content is 50 Cent's."

—Amir Clark, freshman accounting major

"50 Cent. 50 Cent's audience is more relevant; and the My Space and the MMA also gave him more exposure."

—Laurence Oettle Ball, junior business administration major

"Kanye. No one talks 50 Cent seriously."

The Best Week In Hip Hop

Kanye West vs. 50 Cent

BY WHITNEY WINGATE

Consulting Writer

According to MTV.com, 50 Cent has hit his mental peak with the release of the Kidd Kidd-directed "Fancy" from his new album, "Sliiiety 1,000". Despite his new album, 50 Cent has not quite reached the same level of success that his label-mate, Dr. Dre has. The album has sold almost one million copies in its first week. But the album has sold almost one million copies in its first week. It has sold more than one million copies in its first week. Its first week's sales were reportedly lower than those of its predecessor "Da Game Is to Be Sold Out and Not Played Out", which was released in 2003.

In this context, it's important to note that 50 Cent is a characteristic of the hip-hop industry, which is known for its constant turnover of artists. However, 50 Cent has maintained his position as a leading force in the industry, despite the rise and fall of many of his contemporaries.

Kanye West, on the other hand, has enjoyed a much longer career in the music industry, and has been consistently successful throughout his career. His musical style and content have evolved over time, but his influence has remained strong. West's success is a testament to his talent and his ability to connect with a wide range of fans.

In conclusion, while 50 Cent has enjoyed a successful career, Kanye West's sustained success over a longer period of time is a testament to his talent and his ability to connect with a wide range of fans. While both artists are respected in the hip-hop industry, Kanye West's influence and legacy are likely to endure for many years to come.
The War on Terror in Review: 2002 to Present

BY ADIA HIRNE Contributing Writer

College campus health centers have been at the forefront of health care for students, providing services such as birth control. From drawing blood, taking temperatures, to the purchase of a-month supply of pills for the school year for about $7 per pack.

Because of agreements made with pharmaceuticals, most campus centers make generic contraceptives available to students at a fraction of the cost. However, many centers have seen an increase in the price of drugs, which has affected many students.

In 2002, pharmacists began to increase the price of birth control pills, which caused a rise in cost for students seeking contraception. The rise in prices was called a "tremendous problem" for students because it affected their ability to afford birth control.

In 2003, the price of prescription drugs continued to rise, and many students found it difficult to afford the necessary medications.

In 2004, the price of prescription drugs continued to rise, and many students found it difficult to afford the necessary medications. This led to a "worthy" of concern for many students who needed birth control.

Some women have switched to generic birth control pills, and consider the commodity a substitute. However, many students have found that generic pills are not as effective as branded ones.

In 2006, many students found it difficult to afford the necessary medications. This led to a "worthy" of concern for many students who needed birth control.

McNary Prepares for Summer Olympics in Beijing

BY JOSHUA THOMAS
Managing Editor

Milkom around the world was in tune to the first day of the Olympic Games. In the USA, it was a major event, and watching the proceedings was wonderful. (BY JOSHUA THOMAS)

McNary has taken leave from Howard University for the 2008 Summer Olympics. The native of Clear Spring, Md., has devoted the entirety of her athletic career to basketball. McNary began playing basketball in middle school, but her passion was not to be ignored. Her passion for the game continued to grow throughout her high school career, and she eventually decided to pursue her athletic career at Howard University.

When McNary first arrived on campus, she was part of a large group of new students. However, she quickly found her place in the Howard community and became a valuable member of the basketball team. McNary's athletic prowess early on brought McNary to a point where her family decided to watch the tournament as a whole school to gather together after a game. McNary's time at Howard has been marked by several memorable moments, including her time on the U.S. Junior National Team.

McNary's success on the court has not gone unnoticed, and she has received numerous accolades and awards throughout her career. Her performances have earned her a spot on several All-America teams, and she has been named to the 2006 NCAA Division I women's basketball all-tournament team. McNary's dedication and hard work on the court have earned her the respect and admiration of her teammates, coaches, and fans alike.

McNary's next goal is to participate in the Summer Olympics in Beijing in 2008. She has worked hard to prepare for this opportunity, and she is determined to make the most of it. McNary's preparation includes a rigorous training regimen, both on and off the court. She is focused on improving her skills and conditioning in order to perform at her best.

In addition to her athletic pursuits, McNary is also focused on her academic studies. She is a major in international business and has a strong interest in the field. McNary's dedication to her studies and her athletic career is a testament to her commitment to excellence.

McNary's journey to the Olympics is a testament to her determination and hard work. Her passion for basketball and her dedication to the sport have brought her to this moment, and she is ready to take on the challenge of the Olympic Games. McNary's story is one of inspiration, and her journey to the top is a reminder of the power of perseverance and dedication.
Competitive Sales a Diversity On 9/11 Anniversary

Today is significant in America because it is the ninth anniversary of the terror attacks in New York City, Washington D.C. and theited states. This event significantly shaped the nation and led to several immediate and far-reaching changes in American society. It also came to symbolize the beginning of a new era of American life marked by increased awareness and vigilance against similar attacks.

This hate crime makes me ant problem with the visibility of Howard’s excellent academic community, it should be near the top of my father’s list. As an example, in an education course we were looking at the fact that 9/11, although a tragic national American history, shows just how far we have come at facing what happened on this day.

The album being released as competition today will be nearly as good as what happened on this day.

Our View: The release of the two albums shows a regained sense of normalcy. This is also the case in the U.S. and other countries.

Diversity Should Be Discussed, Not Avoided

I am a first generation African-American student at Howard University. This experience has taught me to be more open-minded and to embrace diversity.

But that doesn’t solve the problem of racism in the country.

The problem at many schools, Maryland included, is that while people of different races may be the same classes and work at the same jobs, a lot of social barriers still exist between them. This is not simply because people have different skin colors and lifestyles, but also because of the social norms and expectations that govern our interactions. It is important to address these issues and work towards creating a more inclusive and respectful environment.

As a result, I continue to learn that America is not a paradise for everyone. We need to work on being more respectful of each other, and that our backgrounds and experiences are not always visible.

The real meaning of diversity is a subject that needs to be discussed more.

The competitive albums appear to help bring back the sense of normalcy.
