Many scientists have conducted research on birth order and intelligence. A study by Dr. Jack Frankel, head of a visiting professor program at Howard University, surveyed 3,000 members of a large organization and found that older siblings are not only "smarter, but are better able to come to those conclusions." He more so attributes his IQ to his siblings, "There's no scientific evidence available as to why people do or don't have siblings." He also said that older children have the pressure of keeping up with their parents, and often end up placing the role of tutor or second parent to their younger brothers and sisters.

Those few IQ points usually lead to an overall lead to an overall advantage, a birth order and intelligence relationship that may have genetic stick, "There is absolutely no scientific evidence available as to why people do or don't have siblings." He also said that older children have the pressure of keeping up with their parents, and often end up placing the role of tutor or second parent to their younger brothers and sisters.

He said that older children have the pressure of keeping up with their parents, and often end up placing the role of tutor or second parent to their younger siblings. However, Frankel did not find greater success in the business world.

Hargrove also agrees with the study. "My IQ is higher than my sister. Bat the older sibling of the two is also better at making why they hold aloft the model. There's no scientific evidence available as to why people do or don't have siblings." He also said that older children have the pressure of keeping up with their parents, and often end up placing the role of tutor or second parent to their younger siblings. Howard and Yale Join Forces to Honor Edward A. Bouchet

BY AKIKI STRICKLAND
Corresponding Writer

Howard University and Yale University will join forces to honor Edward Alexander Bouchet, the first African American to graduate from Yale University in 1870. The universities will host a virtual celebration of Bouchet's achievements on October 15th.

Bouchet was born on May 15, 1848, in New Haven, Connecticut, the son of a former slave. After attending the New Haven Free School, he went on to attend New Haven Law School from 1864 to 1865. In 1865, he transferred to the Law School at Princeton University, where he graduated in 1868 with a law degree. Bouchet then returned to New Haven, where he practiced law until 1870, when he was admitted to the bar in New York City.

In 1870, Bouchet became the first African American to receive a PhD from the University of Pennsylvania. He went on to become a professor at Howard University, where he taught law and political science. Bouchet was also a member of the American Bar Association and the American Law School Association.

Howard University and Yale University have a long history of collaboration, dating back to the late 19th century. In recent years, the two institutions have worked together on a variety of projects, including the Howard University-Yale Collaborative on Social Science Research.

The celebration of Bouchet's achievements is part of a larger effort to honor and celebrate African American contributions to higher education. Howard University and Yale University have a long history of working together to promote the advancement of African American scholars and students.

New York Cab Drivers’ Two-Day Strike Sees No Results

BY KANITA MASON
Contributing Writer

The two-day strike held by the New York Taxi Workers Alliance (NYTWA), which is leading a historic drivers’ strike against alleged unfair labor practices of the city’s taxi industry, ended with no resolution.

The strike, though not a significant event, was successful because the city still got plenty of people to its streets.

To account for those who do continue to ride in cabs, some police officers used plain clothes and took the wheel behind some taxis.

The alliance represents about 35,000 New York cab drivers, and its president, Bhairava Rana, spoke about the strike at a press conference.

"There are two issues," he said. "One is the issue of unfair labor practices, and the other is the issue of wages and working conditions."

The drivers also faced the credit card machines that are accompanied to Accommodate the GPS could cause them from not to receive payments if the machines malfunction, and they bring the cost of credit card fees.

GPS is the only fully functional Global Navigation Satellite System (GNSS) with a constellation of more than 24 satellites. The system is designed to provide continuous, accurate, and dependable positioning services.

The strike is likely to continue until the next Labor Day holiday, when negotiations are expected to resume.

New York City councilwoman Stuart Phoegerson announced plans to launch a small-scale taxi service for the city's airports.

"We're looking into ways to improve our current taxi system," she said. "We don't have a lot of options, but we have to work on it."

Many drivers said that they will strike again if necessary.

Howard used the defense for the Bison's offense, leading the way down the field with running and passing. Defensive back Martin Corniffe's 29-yard run on a fake punt fooled the Rattlers and set up Howard in the end zone, where Johnson capitalized on a draw play to reach sophomore Jeriah Williams. Thus, FAMU's defense went into second gear and shut down the Bison offense.

The Bison running game was inefficient in the middle of the Rattlers, who managed to contain the running game and disrupt the passing game. Cornerback Theodore Graham IV recovered a fumble on the ensuing kickoff and returned it to the FAMU 40-yard line, setting up another scoring opportunity.

Despite the Rattlers' defense being solid, they were unable to prevent the Bison from scoring on their opening drive. Howard burst through a gaping hole to gain 43 yards down the sideline, setting the tone for the game with a 93-yard touchdown run. FAMU's defense was unable to respond, allowing the Bison to convert on fourth down and extend their lead to 20-10 and ignite the Rattlers to victory.

Howard went on a 52-yard scoring drive in the fourth quarter, where Johnson found Villiams in the corner of the end zone for a three-yard touchdown. Johnson was mobbed by the defense, but Howard kept his composure and connected with Viliams for the game-winning touchdown.

FAMU's defense remained stout throughout the game, holding the Bison to just 17 points. Defensive back Albert Chester finished the game with 180 yards on 21 carries, while his teammate Martin Corniffe contributed 13 tackles. The Rattlers' defense dominated, limiting the Bison to just 222 rushing yards. Despite the Rattlers' defensive efforts, their offense was unable to capitalize on their opportunities, resulting in a 30-17 loss to the Bison.

The Rattlers will try to get their first win of the season in the next two weeks and will face a challenging test against Eastern Michigan on their home field Saturday at 3 p.m.
BUSH PLANS TROOP RETURN, NO OUTLINE FOR ENDING WAR

In his Sept. 13 speech, President Bush announced plans to begin bringing troops back from Iraq with the goal of non-enlisting 21,500 troops by the end of the year. The first benchmark is to see 5,700 return to the United States with the goal of seeing already been deployed a surge of 21,500 troops in addition to the troops that have already been deployed.

If we do the math, we see the problem, or at least part of it. If America wants to maintain a surge of 21,500 troops in addition to the troops that have already been deployed, we have to stop any withdrawals of troops from Iraq completely. This means essentially that President Bush’s plan to bring troops back from Iraq will fail, and completely fail. We must stop any withdrawals of troops from Iraq.

However, in January 2007, Bush announced plans to begin bringing troops back to the United States. This plan has been met with a surge of 21,500 troops in addition to the troops that have already been deployed.

Our View:

President Bush needs to be more accountable for his decisions in the war.

In the past, President Bush has been accused of making decisions based on political gain rather than the well-being of American soldiers. However, President Bush has been criticized for making decisions that extend beyond his presidency.

Bush concluded his speech by saying, “We’re not going to let our troops down. We’re not going to let our troops down. We’re not going to let our troops down.”
