Group Says Students are Burdened by Overdraft Fees

BY HARLEY JOHNSON

BRIEFING NEWS

"We're not burdening the banks, we're just trying to give the students what they need," said Gary Henry, a spokesman for the University of Delaware's student government. "We're trying to be proactive and give students what they need to make the best possible decisions for their financial futures."
WHBC Returns with New Flavor

By Myranda Williams-Murray

WHBC, the Howard University radio station, went off the air in 2004 and returned in 2007, bringing back its old format and new programming.

Mr. Freeman, a former student at Howard, brought back the station with a new vision.

"We have a couple new shows," said Freeman, announcing the new lineup.

One of the new programs is "The Lounge," which airs on Wednesdays from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. on 88.9 FM. The show is hosted by On-air personality, Mr. Freeman.

"Lounge" airs on Fridays between 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Alain Locke Honored After 100 Years as Inaugural Black Rhodes Scholar

By Shandon Foster

Alain Locke, the first Black Rhodes Scholar, was honored on September 25, 2007, at the Harry A. Schwarz Program for Ethereal and Physical Sciences at the University of Michigan.

Locke was one of the first people to recognize the value of education for African Americans. He believed that education was the key to unlocking the door to opportunity.

Locke's impact on education continues to this day, inspiring generations of students to pursue higher education.

Following Footsteps: Phyliss Rashad

By Kanioka Magee

Phyliss Rashad, the star of "The Cosby Show," was honored on September 25, 2007, at Howard University. She was presented with the annual Howard University Alumni Award.

Rashad's career has been marked by her dedication to portraying strong, independent women on screen.

"I am honored to be honored," said Rashad. "I have always dreamed of working at Howard University."

would hope that he's gone by now because of all the police we have on campus. Given the liaisons of the tragedy this week at Virginia Tech, we cannot assume that," Overton said.

Overton said that hall managers were instructed not to allow students to enter the dormitories. According to the school’s Web site, there are seven complexes. ‘Delaware State also put a ‘snow line,’ which is typically used for notices about weather events with anyone who is at the gate ‘awake,'” he said.

As for the Sept. 21 shooting which has shocked the university community, Holmes said the university was doing everything it could to protect students and feel the disaster. “We have worked to do. We can’t walk dead on how we resolved or are by this situation,” he said.

Charm Stevens, a 2007 DSU graduate, said he wanted to know people to know that the type of violence is not typical for the university.

“This is not our community at DSU. This is not a thug-oriented campus. So the ‘thugs don’t go to college.’ We can’t really dwell on how we feel about the lack of security at HBCUs,” he said.

Stevens, a Wilmington, Del. native, called the security style of HBCUs “unique.” “There are some things with the style of HBCUs ‘unique.’ There are some things with the style of HBCUs "unique." We can’t really dwell on how we feel about the lack of security at HBCUs, “he said.

Metro Riders Vent About Proposed Fares

BY CRISTAL CRAMORE

Metro riders are up in arms about a proposed fare increase of 35 cents. The latest in a long line of increases, this one was the largest since the current system was put in place. The proposed fare increase would affect all passengers on the system, including those using the system for personal use or for commuting. The proposed fare increase is due to the cost of living, which has risen significantly in recent years. Many riders are calling for a more fair and equitable system that takes into account the needs of all passengers.

Ruben Tinkler, a public affairs specialist for the Washington Metropolitan Transit Authority, said, "We are looking to balance the books and make sure the system is sustainable for the long term. We have been increasing fares since 2005, and we need to continue to do so to keep up with the rising costs of operations."

The proposed fare increase was introduced in response to a decrease in ridership over the past year. The system has struggled to maintain ridership as more people turn to other modes of transportation, such as driving, biking, and walking. The proposed fare increase is expected to help offset the cost of operating the system. The system has also seen a decrease in revenue over the past year, which has further exacerbated the financial situation. The proposed fare increase is expected to generate an additional $15 million in revenue, which will help to offset the cost of operations.

The proposed fare increase is expected to go into effect in October. Riders have had the opportunity to provide feedback on the proposed fare increase, and the system will be monitoring the impact of the increase on ridership and revenue. The system is committed to providing a safe and reliable transportation system for all riders, and the proposed fare increase is a necessary step in that direction.

Raymond Lotta
Maoist political economist speaks on:
CAPITALISM IS A HORROR, BUT THE WORLD CAN BE DIFFERENT—AND NOTHING IS MORE LIBERATING THAN COMMUNISM

6:30 pm Wednesday, September 26 Room 301, Douglass Hall, Howard

Do things have to be this way?
One and one we've told that this is "the best of all possible worlds...the only possible world...and you might as well accept it." But there is an alternative.

Is there a conversation to be had:
• Can people be satisfied in someplace with each other?
• Can nations be overcome through socialism and a continuing revolution?
• What about communism and religion?
• Is socialism authoritarian—or can you have a society with people pulling together, but with lots of creativity and dissent?

If you feel angry with the way the world is, and dare to imagine something different, you need to hear Raymond Lotta.

Clinton Scandal Does Not Deter Voters

By JACOB SMITH

University of California at Berkeley

As the celebrity popularity of the United States' presidential candidates reaches new heights, Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama are leading in the polls. Both candidates have been praised for their strong public speaking skills and their ability to connect with voters on a personal level.

However, the recent scandal involving Clinton has raised questions about whether the scandal will affect her chances at the polls. While Clinton has tried to move past the scandal, some voters remain concerned about her ability to lead.

Clintons's popularity remains strong, but some voters are concerned about her ability to lead.

The debate over Clinton's candidacy continues, with some voters supporting her while others remain skeptical.

The candidates' ability to connect with voters is crucial in the presidential election, and Clinton's popularity remains strong despite the scandal.

In conclusion, while the Clinton scandal has raised concerns about her ability to lead, her popularity remains strong and she continues to be a viable candidate in the presidential race.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

JARAHN "J-BOI" WILLIAMS

BY JAMES JACKSON

Combating Wins

James Williams, the star running back of the Howard University Bison football team has always been one of the smaller players on the field, but hasn’t let that slow him down. The defensive backs who have faced him have found it hard to take him down in quick and dirty.

With just six games left in the 2007 season, Williams is well on pace for 1,000 rushing yards and four touchdowns. "I think I should do pretty well my senior year and possibly cents permanent damage to the injured athlete. An athlete is one filled with bumps and bruises. and possibly causes permanent damage to the injured athlete.

Many students attribute the long-standing struggle of athletes to their injuries. "I know a couple people who have had surgery and are doing just fine," said one student. "But I'm not going to stop playing just because my adrenaline is running high." Williams made it clear that play is his main goal in his effort to help the team out.

At the collegiate level, playing when an injury inhibits the athlete is hurting, and if not them it's other players. It's not even participating in practice.

Students Left Out Of HBCU Week

National HBCU Week is an annual proclamation made by the president of the United States. It is declared in accordance with Executive Order 12232, which states that the proclamation is designed to achieve a significant increase in the publicizing of Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) through federal programs.

Since 1980, during every annual proclamation of National HBCU Week, the president has called for the inclusion of HBCUs in federal programs.

Our View:

The White House could have done a better job publicizing HBCU week. Despite the fact that there was no press release on the event, let alone one for the conference in 2006 or 2007, there was a major problem with the administration's participation in the week-long conference, especially with regards to the White House putting on a half-hearted production because it may have been nothing more than a public relations exercise rather than the actual desire to discuss topics that could positively impact the lives of students in Howard universities. It looks like no one thought of it, nor did they at least.

HBCU week may have been a great opportunity to talk about the importance of what it could have been if the White House was interested. Because more student issues are not included, we are not sure what the true intention of the conference was or was not.

Even the students from HBCUs could have been as public relations exercise rather than an actual discussion of the issues. What was supposed to bring us the story of the event is just a question mark.

New Anacostia Exhibit Goes East of the River

BY JESSICA LITELSE

The Anacostia Community Museum unveiled their new exhibit, East of the River, running Sept. 15 in its first Southeast D.C. location.

According to museum specialists, Anthony Gallini, the exhibit is a historical observation of the communities east of the Anacostia River and it was part of an exhibit at the National Museum of American History. The Anacostia Branch was born when the exhibit was featured in the National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C., in 1990.

The exhibit occupies three of the museum’s galleries and highlights families and communities east of the Anacostia, including Baltimore and the Eastern Shore communities. Each room of the exhibit, the Black Current and the Great Barrier Reef, is named after the chapters of the book.

"It is important to the history of the area and study demonstrates how the Anacostia was an American presence to European settlers," Gallini said. "It was a great part of the history of the region in its early years."

The exhibit provides an opportunity for the audience to see how African-American lives were impacted by industrialization and social integration and it allows them to understand the impact of the area.

The photos, along with the time line and the layout for the store, are part of the exhibit’s opening.

"It is a great honor for Anacostia to be married to the other side of the river," Gallini said. "It is an opportunity to learn about the other side of the river and how we have worked and what it all means to each other."

The exhibit is located at 1614 V St. NW, opened in 1990, and is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The museum is closed on Mondays.

The Anacostia Community Museum hosts exhibits that explore all parts of the world. But the focus of the exhibit is to show the history of the area, and the exhibit is part of the museum's exhibit.
