WASHINGTON

The war in Iraq has become much more unpopular in Congress. By RENEE SCHOOF

McClatchy Newspapers (MCT)

Washington, D.C. — A year ago, Rep. Zoe Lofgren declared, "This is not our war." Now that she is the ranking Democrat on the House Ways and Means Committee, she knows it is.

It's not making much of a difference, though, for Bush's supporters say the Iraq war is essential to keeping America safe from Islamic fundamentalists. The administration is trying to block a与时俱进的 Measure that would bring some measure of accountability to the war.

"I hear stories every day about the importance of this war," said White House spokesman Tony Snow.

Lofgren said the Iraq war is "not the right war at the right time" and is "unsustainable.

"We are being sucked into an endless war," she said.

Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., told colleagues, "The American people are saying, 'Bring our sons and daughters home.'"

Rep. Ralph Hall, R-Texas, is working on legislation that would require regular, independent reviews of the war.

"I would like to follow the path that Congress is taking," said Hall, a member of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee.

"We are building a new negative dynamic for our children's futures," he said. "Only a very small percentage of the public supports a war that has no end at least in sight.

"It's not making much of a difference, though."

Harvard Law Comes to Howard

BY ROYCE STRAHAN

The school that is often referred to as the "Black Harvard" is ready to bring the Harvard Law School experience, Yale Law School professor, Timbro Stokely, to Howard University. Stokely Stokely is an attorney at law and a Howard University student from the time.

"In the upcoming semester, we're going to bring something new, something that's going to change the way people think about law school," said Stokely. "It's the Harvard Law School experience, delivered on the Howard University campus, and it's going to be transformative."

"Howard students have an advantage over many students across the country in being able to meet and interact with professors," he added. "Our students will be able to interact with some of the best minds in the country, and they'll be able to learn from them."

THE HILLTOP
The District of Columbia Public Library (DCPL), known as "the heartbeat of the city," is taking steps to ensure that DCPL, the public library, is a focal point of the neighborhood. Through the sponsorship of the Washington Redskins and the community's support, the library aims to drive literacy and promote reading among DC residents.

LeDroit Park Unfolds Past, Brings New Developments

In LeDroit Park, a neighborhood in Northwest DC, librarians and the community are working together to promote reading and literacy. As a result, the neighborhood is undergoing new revitalization, and the community is becoming more engaged in its library.

The community needs you! Write for metro.

Increase in Minimum Wage Makes Minimal Impact on Workers

By ALBESA MAHER

The Supreme Court heard an Indiana case on Monday that challenges the state mandate to require employers to pay the federal minimum wage.

Worker ID Gets Challenged in Court

By JACOB SMITH

After a three-month campaign requiring the Supreme Court to overturn the Indiana minimum wage law, the case is now set for oral arguments.

Hahn Industries' School of Law Professor J. G. Carson said that it is unclear as to whether the law is constitutional or not due to a lack of sufficient evidence.

"I think that the concept of minimum wage should be examined," said Carson. "It's not unfair to have a law that requires employers to pay the federal minimum wage.

"But I don't think that the law as it stands today is constitutional."}

D.C. Students Take First Step in Fight for Justice

By SYLVIA MAHY

In a move to counteract the trend of increasing minimum wage, an increase of $2.10 to $5.15 an hour was accepted by剧组 workers.

Workers, we urge you to support the new law and take the necessary steps to protect your rights.

Please contact your local union or, if you work for yourself, look for a community group that supports the new law.

The increase will go into effect on the first day of the new year.

"We applaud the decision of the city council to raise the minimum wage," said Tony Williams, the mayor of the District of Columbia.

"This is a critical step in the fight for justice."
The Showtime Marching Band helps hyped-up fans stand and cheer, while the athletes and entertainers do their part. According to Woods, "In four years of marching, I've never heard a song that the band doesn't like. It's like the athletes dictate the songs but according to the band they're good."

The band is to entertain the fans, and there are certain songs that the band plays to hype up the crowd. The band has been criticized for distracting the players from performing, but the band believes it helps to keep the players and the fans motivated.

"This was probably one of the biggest games we've ever played," said Scully. "We had adversity, but we stayed to the game plan."

"Today we said, 'Let's just have fun, enjoy the game and do what we can,'" said Hampton. "That's what we did, and it's hard to believe what we did.""

Students Choose Organic Foods When Striving to Eat Healthier

BY MARCUS GRID

BY DANIELLE KWATENG

Every day brings local, local produce across the country and peaks now off the dinner plate giving us a second look. However, with the onset of offering nearly 150 million Americans the quality of food consumed is in under greater scrutiny.

With many fewer "health" becoming the desired pursuit and "organic" being the epitome of health food in high gear it is no wonder that people are taking the advice of the health food addiction. Many students, even the few that are filled with adventure and fast about the quality of new food sources, are now many more aware of the quality of food, even beginning to specialize in organic produce.

When it comes to organic food produce, it is the process of how it’s made that really helps define it, for "true organic" food produces techniques that are free of any chemicals and other chemicals to provide health benefits, especially when organic food is grown in colder climates.

Organic food is created by a long-term planning process, especially in growing quality crops. To be labeled as "organically grown food" must be given to the consumer exactly as how they would be to the customer. Organic food is now under greater scrutiny and even more regulated process that requires long-term planning to eventually produce crops. For food to be labeled organic it must be certified by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), by having the regulations of the USDA food production. Organic food cannot be grown with pesticides. The procedure also emphasizes the use of environmentally friendly and the use of the above regulations, which includes the USDA guidelines. Instead of pesticides, organic food contains a list of ingredients, including "No artificial colors, flavors, or preservatives that are used in the food production."

As consumers become more aware of the chemicals in their food, many are seeking an organic diet because less additives are in the food. This is where organic food comes into play.

The National Research Council has released a statement claiming that what vegetables and fruits are properly washed, most chemicals on them can be removed and some pesticides in the fruit itself should pose no significant cancer risk.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) created a labeling in 1962, which regulates that food name is required to show a list of ingredients, lighting techniques, and additives that are contained within the food. As consumers become more aware of the chemicals in their food, many are seeking an organic diet because less additives are in the food. This is where organic food comes into play.

"I go by how I feel," she said. "Some days are more excitable than others.

The health food addiction, or the "green" movement, is a genuine one that is growing. More and more people are looking to an organic diet because less additives are in the food. This is where organic food comes into play. If you know that the chain rule has nothing to do with hardware, we have a future for you.
