the country of Malawi, when Dr. Bingu wa Mutharika has previously visited the university and several of his colleagues taught here. He referred to Mutharika’s visit on a campus forum, “That fellow should be kept for years,” Ndo said.

Mutharika’s focus is global, especially on the many difficulties faced by Malawi and other resource-poor countries. He also highlighted ways to solve the country’s challenges, such as the need for sustainable forestry management. He said the country has large deposits of gold, diamonds and other precious metals and natural resources, and that many of these resources could be exploited to increase the country’s wealth. He also highlighted the need for increased research and development in the country’s universities to facilitate resource exploitation.

President Mutharika, in his speech, cited the example of the country’s tourism sector, which has significant potential for development. He said that the country’s tourism industry has been growing steadily in recent years, and that it has the potential to become a major source of foreign exchange for the country. He also emphasized the need for the country to develop its human capital through education and training to support the country’s economic growth.

In his address, Dr. Mutharika highlighted the importance of education and research in the country’s development. He said that the country needs to invest in its human capital through education and training to support the country’s economic growth. He also emphasized the need for the country to develop its human capital through education and training to support the country’s economic growth.

A number of students and faculty members from the School of Business Administration were present in the audience to hear Dr. Mutharika’s address. They were impressed with his insights and knowledge of the country’s challenges and opportunities.

In conclusion, President Mutharika’s speech was well-received by the audience. They were impressed with his insights and knowledge of the country’s challenges and opportunities. They were also encouraged to support the country’s efforts to develop its human capital through education and training to support the country’s economic growth.

Alumni's Art Exhibit Open for Fall

BY MORGAN THOMAS
Editorial Assistant

The Howard University Gallery of Art opened a new exhibit displaying the works of artist and mentor Yvon
Lou Stovall. The exhibit, called "The Art of Silkscreen," features original works and reproductions of his original works.

Located in the Lulu vere Childers Hall, the exhibit will be available for viewing until Dec. 14.

Stovall's works were previously showcased in the Gallery of Art in 1991, but the nature of the exhibit was entitled "The Art of Silkscreen." The print featured in the 2001 show focused on Stovall's reproducible works of art, including his original works.

"Although Stovall is well-known for his silkscreen works, he also has his original works that are worth a look," said Beans Baker, director of the art gallery. "Stovall's works are in print-making. Mer graduating, he started working at Howard. He said the business did basic printing and something with regards to the art perspective and business perspective. Due to his success and wide recognition, he was given the Howard Award in 2001, according to Baker.

"We want faculty to bring art to the gallery, build flows in here and also keep the interest while the art exhibition is going on," said Beans Baker. "We are encouraged to stretch as well, Beans said the gallery and for the gallery to focus on the appreciation of art of this type of the campus community."}

What is the executive branch?
The executive branch of HUSA has the basic responsibility of carrying out day-to-day actions. One, we're responsible to be student advocates on behalf of student issues, but also there's a student body's voice in the student body's decision-making. Programming that the General Assembly says we should do, they kind of direct the executive branch to execute. Mainly, we're all about student advocacy.

How do you work with the other branches of HUSA?
Basically, General Assembly acts just as Congress deals with President Bush. We need General Assembly to get our budget passed just as Bush has to get to Congress to get appropriations passed.

What are your duties to the student body?
Though people see executive the most, the powers of the three branches are definitely equal. General Assembly has powers that we don't and Policy Board has powers that we don't.

Where can students find you to voice their concerns?
The best way is for them to volunteer. Our next staff meeting is Oct. 15 in the Blackburn forum at 6:30 p.m. All our directors give reports on what they've been working on for the past two weeks. Volunteers can kind of gauge where they want to help out. All of our staff meetings are totally open, and I started my freshman year as a volunteer for Policy Board.

How can students get involved with HUSA executive branch?
As far as Policy Board is concerned, HUSA president and vice president both sit on Policy Board as ex-officio members. That means we have a voice, we can talk, but we can't vote. Just so we can be involved with Policy Board and so we can know what issues are going on. The president and vice president actually have no power on policy board.

Though people see executive the most, the powers of the three branches are definitely equal. General Assembly has powers that we don't and Policy Board has powers that we don't.

What are the different offices under the executive branch?
Our staff is about 60 strong including volunteers. Many people are from our cabinet, our chief of staff, our executive secretary, our chairman, and there are positions we have to hire. Beyond those there's the director of student organizations, the director of student advocacy, the director of policy and external affairs, the director of public relations and then this year we have a director of special projects who does the programming. They plan First Fridays, HUSA In Your House and Beast Ball. The student advisory department is something that we want to really make sure works a lot. We're really trying to do it and talk to gauge some of the students' concerns.

"He touched on very important issues of "longer-lasting crayon-like ink sticks," according to a Xerox press release. "We're really happy that you're trying to convey your research, you're trying to educate."

Students will no longer have to leave campus to go and have color copies generated, nor will you be limited in the amount of color copies there will be able to complete. The cut in the same hold effect is that the ability to provide adequate color copies and ink products on campus.

THE HILLTOP
Entrepreneur Brings a ‘Taste of Philly’ to District

BY LINDSEY GANS

The Entrepreneur

Khadijah Bronson

While experience and a strong foundation paved the way for this entrepreneur, the university and the city have played a role in his success. Khadijah Bronson, the owner of Philadelphia Water Ice Factory, started her business after earning a degree in civil engineering from Temple University, who majored in business and noticed the lack of water ice stores when she moved to the District in October 2004. Crawford, like many other entrepreneurs, was looking for a way to make money while doing something she enjoyed.

The Business

Philadelphia Water Ice Factory is a walk-up store on whose stores were opened before it. Bronson said finding good investors, as well as a unique frozen dessert, was the key to the business. Both shops offer cold treats on the menu, heavy on the water ice, Rita’s. Water ice is also not the only treat equally from all aspects of the products. Bronson promoted the water ice to talk to friends for free while online.

The Future

Bronson is planning to use voice recognition software to further their own agenda. She continued, “We just like the fact that Rita’s pricing is right. We’re concerned about the price of food surrounding places. Bronson said finding good investors, as well as a unique frozen dessert, was the key to the business. FRANK ROBINSON BECOMES BASEBALL’S FIRST BLACK MANAGER

Cleveland Indians

Athletes Prefer Freedom

of Off-Campus Housing

BY ZEYRA DIBRIA

For Howard University students, it is a well-known fact that off-campus housing is limited. The crowded conditions of Howard can only house so many students, and those seeking accommodations will have to return to campus life even if they couldn’t live on campus otherwise. All undergraduate students, must participate in Residence Life’s housing lottery, Random Selection and Verification Plan (RSVP).

If the prospective student does not attend their class, or if they fall behind, the student will have to return to campus life. The student will have to return to campus life and attend their class.

Racism Coverage Increasingly Prevalent In Media

It's no secret that America is a country built on inequality, exclusion and class stratification. Some may disagree, however, if America were truly all about an equal opportunity for success, the election of a black or female president would not be seen as such a groundbreaking achievement. It's a shame, but if anyone in America could not already take advantage of these opportunities, as white men in the country, there would be no true negotiation, no true negoti­ation, hope, according to Sen. Hillary Clinton and Sen. Barack Obama in their presidential campaign.

When racism is ingrained into America's history it is frightening to see just how many people could find themselves surprised when racial acts occur, given the nation's history. Even more disturbing is the fact that with all of the information and news coverage, biased or not, concerning racial violence constantly featured in mainstream media, some have claimed they understand the severity, both racial, social and economic, of race. However, the most aggravating is the problem that could easily be solved by opening a history book or perhaps watching a documentary.

But it is a problem that requires more up­granting of the issues of race in today's society. And there is an issue that when one reads the New York Times articles on the three of the four dead students in Jena, La., one could not fail to notice the bizarre twist of events.

With issues of his working, lost but a moment here a Great Dead has indeed limited itself to issues on the three of the our dead students.

How it is that American arms forces are expected to serve and need against for­eign enemies when it is clear that the same within the racial forces have problems with people of color and public is a prior to de­grade the people they work with.

On Friday, Sept. 21, a group of police and/or military members found a noose in the black student's dormitory room.

Our View: People need to stop being deliberately inflammatory.

The media reported each of these situations and not of­fering, because no racial incidents were uncovered on the news and racist groups appear to be one-upping each other in visual displays of racism which antago­nizes those who have mobilized efforts to inform readers and view­ers of racist incidents either loca­lly or nationally.

On July 22, a black Coast Guard officer found a noose in Washington Township, N.J. found a massive swastika carved into a wall. This was while Jewish people were cel­ebrating the beginning of Yom Kippur. Giant swastikas were carved into the same field in 1989 and 1999 with no across coming racist in either incident, thus the June "W" rally, a picketing row with new advo­cates who claimed to have turned to the San Khan film after demonstration with two months of display in attempts to augment the issue of demonstra­tion making their way back to the house. While the June "W" coverage, American media was misled to stop over itself in ef­fort to inform readers and view­ers of racist incidents either loca­lly or nationally.
