WASHINGTON — In light of the state of emergency declared by President Musharraf, the Washington Post has reported that the U.S. interests in Pakistan may well be tied for lack of another route.

The Hill Comes to Howard

By TRAVER RIGGIN

Henry "Hank" Johnson was elected to Congress in 2002 and has been representing the 4th congressional district in Georgia, which gave him someone to close the educational gap between blacks and whites, the School of Education and the co-director of the Institute for the study of Globalization and Economic Policy, said Sunday. "It's tied for lack of another route that we have," Johnson said on "Face the Nation," calling the situation "very clear." Biden, appearing on CBS's "Face the Nation," said that President Bush has forged a strong partnership with Musharraf, who is also the army chief of staff and first to lead a mission to Pakistan in 1996. She announced that the Hill will continue to support the Bush administration’s policy of providing $1 billion in U.S. aid to Musharraf's government. The House also moved to hold Musharraf accountable for his role in the state of emergency declared in Pakistan.

Nano Van Takes the Brakes Off Technology

BY SYDNGEY FOSTER

A vehicle resembling a mobile laboratory cruised into downtown Blacksburg yesterday afternoon and stopped by the town square. It was black in color and contained a large, rectangular, stainless steel tank with a digital display and a hose connected to an air compressor. The tank was labeled "Nanotechnology Mobile Research Lab." The vehicle, a modified bus, was sponsored by the National Science Foundation as part of its Nanotechnology Mobile Research Lab program.

The goal of the tour was to educate the public about the latest developments in nanotechnology, a field that explores the properties of materials on the atomic scale. The lab featured several demonstrations, including a live demonstration of the lab's capabilities. Participants could see how nanotechnology is used in various industries, such as electronics, medicine, and energy.

The lab's equipment included a variety of tools for manipulating and analyzing materials at the nanoscale. Visitors could see how the lab's researchers are using these tools to create new materials with unique properties. The lab's staff also provided information on the latest research and developments in nanotechnology.

The tour was organized by the Virginia Tech Nanotechnology Initiative, which aims to educate the public about the importance of nanotechnology in shaping the future. The initiative is based at the Virginia Tech Department of Materials Science and Engineering.

The mobile lab is one of several that are touring the country as part of the NSF's Nanotechnology Mobile Research Lab program. The program is designed to raise awareness about the importance of nanotechnology and its potential impact on society.

After the tour, the lab will visit other locations across the United States, including schools, libraries, and community centers. The lab's next stop is in Virginia Beach, where it will be on display at the Virginia Beach Convention Center. The tour will continue throughout the year, with stops in various cities across the country.

For more information about the Nanotechnology Mobile Research Lab program, visit the NSF's website at www.nsf.gov/od/lpa/nmrl.
Washington’s Legacy Lives On

WASHINGTON (AP) - Washington, D.C.'s mayor, who led the nation's capital through the turmoil of the civil rights movement and the Watergate scandal, is retiring from his post, which he has held for 10 years.

Mayor Marion Barry Jr. said he has made the decision to resign after being convicted on charges of perjury.

"It's not easy for me to make this decision," Barry said. "I've been in politics for a long time, but I feel that I have to step down in order to serve my constituents."

According to the United States Census Bureau, 48 percent of the voting- age population was registered to vote and 39 percent of 18-24 year olds were registered to vote and 47 percent of registered voters went to the polls in 2004.

The U.S. Census Bureau also reported that 24 percent of 18-24 year olds who were not registered said it was because they do not believe in democracy, 22 percent said they have never registered and 19 percent said they were too young. According to the Washington Post, 13 percent of registered voters said they had also been too young to register.

While young people were the lowest percentage of their age group voting, they showed the greatest improvement in voting by the election from 2004, increasing by 7 percent and 13 percent, respectively.

A 5-year-old boy whose name has not yet been released by law officials is expected to play a major role in starting the fire that destroyed more than one of the state's oldest buildings and killed one of the state's oldest buildings. The fire, which began in the early morning hours Thursday, was ruled as an accident. The boy's parents, who were not identified, said they believe the fire was started intentionally by the boy. The parents said they have never seen their son act in a manner that would indicate he was capable of starting a fire.

Young Couples Base Relationships on ‘Commitment, Communication’ Not Age

BY NICOLE EDWARDS
Contributing Writer

For too long, people assumed a relationship was a writing step. More and more, people are realize that there’s a lot more to a relationship than just big leaps in a sign of their devotion to each other.

These days, relationships have eased some of the pressure of marriage and gravity of marriage has decreased over the years. Especially with the rise of MTV’s “Engaged Undergrads” programming, people no longer just get engaged on the day they graduate. In the United States, a couple is at the age of 18 and is without parental consent. Only in Nebraska and Maryland are the standards at the age of 18, and 21, respectively. In DC, you need parental consent if you are under 18 and have consent, but 18 is not allowed to marry.

At 23-year-old senior health management architecture major, Devon Garrison, 23, this summer in New Jersey. "I don’t think marriage is important anymore. I think society’s for not setting good example. We’re just going to have kids and enjoy the world getting worse or parents the dangers out there. It’s the world sucking up their money. You really have to wonder if it’s the world getting worse or parents getting worse. What’s to blame, when reading the Associated Press the fifth strongest since 9/11.
