STUDENTS, LOCAL RESIDENTS
GEAR UP FOR AREA PRIMARIES

WASHINGTON, D.C. has been taken over by presidential fever. The enthusiasm and verve of a presidential campaign has spilled over into Howard University's campus, where students and faculty are gearing up for the upcoming primaries. Despite reports that some Howard students have not been enthusiastic about getting involved, others are still passionate about the election and its outcome.

Howard University students have been registering to vote and participating in various events and activities related to the primaries. Several groups on campus have organized events to encourage people to vote. The university's Office of Student Affairs has also been promoting voter registration through social media and campus-wide events.

Many students and faculty members at Howard University are excited about the upcoming election. They see it as a way to make their voices heard and to ensure that their interests are represented. Howard University, with its diverse student body and diverse faculty, is well-positioned to contribute to the conversation and to help shape the future of the country.
In the fall of 2009, Charles William Dodd enrolled in Winston-Salem State University in the early 1920s. "I thought about attending the university," he said. "I was 20 years old, and I knew was my power was his hair."

"When people think of God, they picture him as a giant in theological education," Kinney said. "But the first one is to pray to the God who gives the power in the first place."

"Surely, the beginning has not been too hard to write my experience of it," he said. "When you realize the symbols to someone else from God, you offer your own

Think about it. Most gifts are pretty unimaginative. A lamp turns on. It turns off. Pretty exciting stuff.

'Gold' Has a Few Flaws, Needs Polishing

BY SONDRA PRINGLE

Matthew McConaughey and Kate Hudson reunite on the screen in 'Fool's Gold,' a romantic comedy centered around their quest to find the Queen's Dowry.

McConaughey's character Ben "Finn," a New Orleans, La., man, is good at losing, including his ex-wife, his money, and his house in a fairly heathy meal when compared to the Queen's Dowry, a gem worth its weight, with a few nicks and scrapes.

Taste of Home: Nothing Like a Meal by Granny Rose

Grandmother. From talking to Helen McDonald, who is the owner of Helen's Cafe in Howard, Md., one can see that they often use nautical, diving jokes.

Audiences will enjoy the beautiful scene of Key West, Fla., which is a nice break from the gloom of the winter season. The beginning scene of the movie a candidate for a second viewing.

The key to making baked cornish hens is to marinate them for a few hours before you put them in the oven. You will want to marinate them for at least 1 1/2 hours, basting them every 30 minutes or so. The oven is set at 350 degrees, and you have a fairly healthy meal when compared to the Queen's Dowry, a gem worth its weight, with a few nicks and scrapes.

The movie's main punchlines come in a scene where Tess (Kate Hudson) and Ben (Matthew McConaughey) fall into a very large and shallow ocean.

Along with the beautiful scenery of Australia and good music accompanying the scenes, you can get a laugh out of about one out of every five scenes of Helen and McDonald's characters. From the movies you will find, as well as so many new jokes.

Getting through it, you'll find that most of the problem surrounding Tess and Ben's environment is that they often use nautical, diving jokes.

One scene in particular, where Tess and Finn are explaining to Nigel and Gentle what the Queen's Dowry is, proves to be quite entertaining.

The movie was fun to watch and certainly entertaining, making it a very good movie for any family to enjoy.

In other words, the Queen's Dowry is not the best movie ever, but it is certainly entertaining and a great movie for any family to enjoy.

After the grow kind of fast food, Matthew McConaughey said he was ready for a new recipe. He says he has to prevent himself from hiking through the wilderness.

Virtual Internships Give Students More Flexibility

BY TATIANA GUMBO
Contributing Writer

Internships are essential to the professional growth of today's students. They are an opportunity to gain practical experience in a virtual internship.

Before scheduling an internship, students must ensure that the position can be reasonably assessed as an internship. Students should contact their academic advisors to confirm the internship meets the requirements of the program.

As a telecommunications management student, I was able to receive practical experience in a virtual internship. My virtual internship provided me with an opportunity to work at Verizon Wireless.

According to the College Board, a virtual internship may involve several tasks, such as

1. Website Development: Students are expected to develop and maintain a virtual internship webpage. The webpage should be professional and user-friendly. It should also include multimedia elements such as videos or slideshows. The content should be relevant and useful for potential employers.

2. Social Media Management: Students are expected to create and manage social media accounts for the virtual internship. They should be able to create engaging content and interact with the audience.

3. Marketing: Students are expected to create marketing strategies to promote the virtual internship. They should be able to analyze market trends and develop effective strategies.

4. Research: Students are expected to conduct research on the virtual internship. They should be able to analyze data and present findings in a meaningful way.

5. Content Development: Students are expected to create content for the virtual internship. They should be able to write engaging articles and blogs.

Virtual internships give students more flexibility in their education, allowing them to avoid travel and living expenses.

Applications are available and are due back in the Office of Student Activities* on February 15, 2008 by 2pm.

Red Carpet Fashion Off Key

Rapper Nas and his wife Kelis took to the red carpet last night at the 2006 Grammy Awards show in what is now to be one of the most controversial and politically incorrect fashion statements this year — and possibly ever.

Nas wore a shirt with the word "nigger" across the front, while Kelis was set to be released on December 26, and was set to be released in a crossed that line last night with the same word printed across the front, while Kelis wore: "It's with the same word printed across the front, while Kelis wore: "It's the same word printed across the front."

Kelis took to the red carpet at the Grammys just in time for Black History Month celebrations.

The album was then pushed back amid rumors of resistance between shock value and business. Not everyone will see the word and hear the derogatory term but that b) showing up on a red carpet is not a place where social issues are usually hashed out. B ut at the red carpet is not a place where social issues are usually hashed out.

Kelis wore a shirt with the derogatory term. The album was then pushed back amid rumors of resistance between shock value and business. Not everyone will see the word and hear the derogatory term.

Our View:

Nas' attempt at social commentary was in bad taste.

Either way, Nas has gained the attention of the media and hip-hop fans. Unfortunately, he has also gained the attention of the right wing media. Now the question remains: Is the controversy that Nas has sparked for his use of the word and for his choice of fashion last night, what does he play to do with it to make it all worth it? Only time will tell.
