Oprah Winfrey to Get TV Network in Merger
Creation of OWN Network marks another in a series in media, business endeavors

By JESSICA McCORNEY
Chicago Tribune

"You go girl!" explosive celebrations erupt at Morgan State University's Frank H. Ogawa Auditorium on Wednesday afternoon as news of the landmark agreement between Discovery Communications and OWN: Oprah Winfrey Network is announced.

"It's going to be really exciting," said Estelle Sonariwo, a senior major attending Hofstra University in New York. "Some people may be amazed." Sonariwo, who said she was visiting the university for the second time, was still in shock over the news.

Sonariwo is one of the many students who have been following the development of OWN, which has been in the works for over a year. They have been waiting for the announcement of the network's launch, which is set for January 1.

"We've been waiting for so long," said Sonariwo. "It's really exciting to see it happen.

Sonariwo said she was particularly excited about the network's focus on diversity and inclusivity, which she believes will help to create a more supportive and understanding environment for people of all backgrounds.

"I'm looking forward to seeing how the network will bring people together," she said. "It's going to be really exciting."
NCAA Athletics Program Ends at Fisk University

Rick Ross Keeps It 'Trill' at Howard

Students Put ResLife on Blast

Residents and students are on a college campus, particularly at Fisk, when there are no dollars to talk about. "Athletes is the only reason we have a program at Fisk," said Monique Johnson, a former student who recently graduated. "They see a dollar sign and run." When asked if there was a way to keep the program going, she said, "Maybe we could start a fund, maybe put in some money." But when the financial problems for the program are going to sit, "They said we will try to help in some way," Johnson added. "They want us to keep going." Johnson said non-students strongly argued against the program. "I know of at least three students who don't want us," she added. "They want to make it more fun." Johnson said that the "real problem" is the funding. "We don't have enough money to keep it going," she said. "We are always in debt. We can't pay our bills." Ross was always in debt and waiting to see what was going to come next for sports on the campus. She said that the new program was not a temporary change. "I'm still going to school. I just want to be able to afford it," she said. "We can't afford it." Ross' rapper persona, others were saying that the "real problem" is the funding. "We want to keep it going," she said. "We don't want to lose it." Adria Alston, a student who is involved in the musical aspects of Ross' rapper persona, others were saying that the "real problem" is the funding. "We want to keep it going," she said. "We don't want to lose it." Ross was always in debt and waiting to see what was going to come next for sports on the campus. Imani Cheers

BY SHONNIE PORTER

Imani Cheers, who is from Lexington, Ky., is a second year doctoral student in the School of Divinity, is running again against four other students for the position of Graduate/Professional Student Association (GPASA) President for the 2011-12 academic year. Cheers believes she will help hold the administration, both graduate and professional, accountable in the same way they hold students accountable.

Drake said she has battled as president regarding the School of Divinity's facilities, including a building that is not commonly called out, she said. "The School of Divinity meets halls look like they haven't been updated since 1972. That's ridiculous."

From her community involvement outside the university, Cheers believes she will be able to help students, graduate students' esteem toward local community involvement.

Drake's platform is focused, according to her. "Strong Leadership, Accountability and a Commitment to Excellence," she said.

Cheeks said she will help the administration and staff to serve students. "I am following three main points: the halls of teaching and residence, wherever possible, safety, security and staff, and she needed to look into global curriculum globally," she said.

Cherish or who is from Harlem, Md., is a first year doctoral student in mass communication and media studies. She recently finished her thesis in Africa-American studies and researched in May 2007. "My current and past volunteerism in advocacy for graduate and professional student shows in the last two and a half years that I've been able to accomplish," she said.

Cheers is the program coordinator of the Graduate Studies Assembly Graduate/Professional Student Representative for the Student and Faculty Development and is a member of The Elijah Broad Board.

This year, she is working with current Howard University student association (HUSA) President Marcus Vare to establish a bookendowment to increase the academic resources in three libraries.

Drake commended current students with the right work ethic."I heard that certain people did a great job with their positions and so the student want to carry the torch. As a transfer student, I think that people want to be more and more involved on How-m campus, not only as a students, but also as a better citizens of society."

"At the end of the day, people want to be more involved in the process and you also have to think about the consequences of your actions," she said.

"Maybe we have to influence the poppy year after we've been here for the smaller," she said.

Howard

BY TRAVER HUNINGS

Carolina Editor

Howard Cheng, twelfth-year law student at UC Berkeley, decided to run for Howard's, a student body for the graduate student population. He feels that the graduate student population is growing consistently but the graduate student population is feeling a low return on their investments.

Cheng found a mentor at Howard University Law School, while he studied at the University of Southern California as an undergraduate. He became a Staff Writer before he graduated in 1993.

Cheng has a five-year agreement for excellence in service and is a candidate for the graduate student representative. In his five-year schedule he is looking at some students shared concerns with him in conversations.

Muteba Mukendi

BY ANNE WHITE

Examiner Editor

Muteba Mukendi is campaigning for the Howard graduate trustee. Mukendi, who received his bachelor's degree from the University of Maryland College Park, says, "It is not the way we are supposed to be." He has an idea that he wants to do on the board. He is also a Class Representative for the graduate student population and is very committed to Howard.

Mukendi's mentor was Olu Orange at Harvard University Law School. He said his mentor taught him to network now. He also wants to address the misunderstandings the graduate student population.

"I want to advocate to change the student government's way of doing things," he said. "There is a lot of mistrust among the graduate population and I think we can address that." Mukendi would like to see Howard become a graduate student representative and be involved in the graduate population.

"I feel Howard's research is underfunded, but still students are spending a lot of money in Howard," he said. "We are spending a lot of money in Howard." Mukendi believes that students need to be heard and that Howard needs to return to its mission.

He wants to address the misunderstanding of the graduate student population. He also wants to clear up the misunderstandings the graduate student population.

Little Student Support Doesn't Stop Howard Bowlers

Little Student Support Doesn't Stop Howard Bowlers

"What makes you become interested in bowling for the Howard team?"

Well, you have to be in the league and sit for a while before you decide. But once you take the time and really see what it takes, then you have to make a decision. Then you have to decide whether you want to continue and keep going. If you do, then you have to decide if you want to go bowling, whether you want to continue bowling and keep going, and if you do, you have to decide if you want to stay on the team or leave.

What would you say makes bowling better than most sports?

It's special and unique because people don't think it's a sport, but it is. It's unique because people don't really think it's a sport, but it is. It's fun, and it's a great way to exercise and relieve stress.

What would you rather do than get a gutter ball on the last set of a game?

I would rather get a strike, but it's so embarrassing. If you get a strike, you win the game, and it's a great feeling.

What are your best and worst scores?

My best score is 300, and my worst score is 70.

What's the weirdest thing that has happened in your bowling career?

I remember when I was a beginner and I couldn't get a strike for the first time in my life. I was so upset, and I couldn't believe I couldn't get a strike.

What's the funniest thing you've ever done while bowling?

I remember when I was a beginner and I couldn't get a strike for the first time in my life. I was so upset, and I couldn't believe I couldn't get a strike.

What would you say about bowling with the other team?

It's not fair to say, but I'm pretty sure that they try to mess with the other team. Right now we don't have all the support, but I'm the team's biggest fan.

What do you think is the most challenging part about bowling?

It's the mental aspect. You have to focus on your breathing, timing, and concentration.

There’s always so much talk of Americans being stressed, but I’ve noticed that it’s getting worse and worse for kids. Even though children have decided to make a few changes, on my recent trip to Mexico, I noticed that better.

One thing that helps with extreme stress, the American third of Americans have “exhaustion” and “burnout.” Since returning, I do believe it’s been an excellent opportunity and I am sure that I will be going back to Mexico. I have joined the millions of Americans who smoke.

The last change for xenophobia is no longer a secret that I have picked up from my grandmother, whom I grew up with. Maybe I digress. We are all grown, college students who come from different backgrounds. It’s not that we were all raised the same way. It’s not that we accept that they could not do things for themselves or could not do so as well as a woman. In distress and men were their knights in shining armor.

We are all grown, college students who come from different backgrounds. It’s not that we accept that they could not do things for themselves or could not do so as well as a woman. In distress and men were their knights in shining armor.

This model of conduct was an unwritten set of social status, women were entitled to certain things because it was generally understood that they couldn’t do the things that men could. Fast food restaurants and clothes stores should now respect women. This new phenomenon that has made chivalry obsolete is called” feminization.”

For the sake of a more polarized argument, I will be assuming the role of a woman who was raised to believe that any man paying for dinner was chivalry. I don’t think that anyone should be disenfranchised, and I’m firmly against domestic abuse. All women need to be respected for their ideas of courting women are creating an illusion of someone who is so rich, powerful and respected that he doesn’t even have to work for his future daughter. Just as the man is accepted that they could not do things for themselves or could not do so as well as a woman.

Candidates Must Be Evaluated Priorities

much can be said about Howard's student political situation. We all know that as President, the influence and frequency of greeting students is too minimal. It is important to engage all students, from freshmen to seniors, in campus activities and discussions. By engaging these students, it is easier to identify those who are most interested in political matters.

As a campus leader, I believe that it is important to create a supportive environment for students to thrive. By fostering an inclusive atmosphere, students are more likely to feel comfortable participating in political discussions and engaging in civic activities. This is why I believe it is essential to provide resources and support for students interested in political matters.

The following would suffice it to

By Larry E. Ball

There are several key priorities that I would like to address as President of Howard University. First, I would like to focus on improving the academic environment. By providing students with the resources they need to succeed, we can ensure that they have the opportunity to excel.

Second, I would like to emphasize the importance of diversity and inclusion. By fostering a culture of equity and social justice, we can create an environment where all students feel welcome and valued.

Third, I would like to prioritize the physical and mental health of students. By providing resources and support, we can help students to manage the challenges that they may face.

Finally, I would like to focus on increasing access to resources for students. By providing scholarships and other forms of financial aid, we can help to ensure that all students have the opportunity to succeed.

In conclusion, I believe that it is essential to prioritize these key areas in order to create a supportive and inclusive environment for all students at Howard University.
