Redskins Fans Will Have a Longer Trek to FedEx Field

The Metro system is preparing to start a new service on Metrorail for football games, beginning with FedEx Field, but cannot offer regular service during the game. The service, known as "SMART DEPLOYMENT" will be a temporary measure to address transportation needs during the game.

Jenine, the spokesperson for the CPD, said, "The CPD is trying to be as proactive as possible to ensure the safety of the fans."

The service will provide a limited number of shuttle buses to and from Metro stations near the stadium. However, fans are advised to arrive early and plan to use public transportation as much as possible.

According to Jenine, the service will be in effect during the next three FedEx Field games, starting with the Washington Redskins vs. Cleveland Browns game on September 25.

"We want to ensure that fans have a safe and enjoyable experience at the game," Jenine said. "We hope that this service will help reduce traffic congestion and improve safety around the stadium."
Preparing for College Exams, Don't Stress Out

Graduation exams are the exception, except for the test or the written examination. By Jesseca Lewis

The GRE and the MCAT, two exams that students appear to benefit from the most, are administered slowly and with the computer. By Joseph Farmer

The GRE and the MCAT are standardized tests used to test your potential to succeed in graduate school.

The verbal section of the GRE tests your ability to understand and analyze written material.

The quantitative section tests basic math skills and your ability to understand and apply quantitative skills to other problems.

The analytical writing section tests your ability to articulate complex ideas clearly and to examine claims and supporting evidence. It consists of two written essays.

Most graduate schools consider the verbal and quantitative sections of the GRE to be particularly important in making decisions about applicants. They yield scores between 200-800.

ARMY ROTC
Cycling Popular Among African-Americans

BY MELISSA MONTGOMERY
Adjunct Staff Writer

As gas prices continued to climb, the District's African-American residents, like many Americans, are searching for alternative ways of transiting to help fight the high cost of American life.

"I think everyone is looking for high off the long list of ways to get around. Whether it's using a bike or driving intermittently," said Victoria Robinson, a longtime Washington resident and Howard University professor who recently bought a saw ride. "If the gas price is ever high, we're going to have to ride around and for exercise, unless I transport something heavy, I usually bike," said Crawford. Everyone knows that as the District community grows, so does its need for alternatives and exercise routes. The District's black residents are also finding inspiration to ride, such as Victoria Robinson, President of the DC Bike Club.

A large group of cyclists in the area has taken on the project of fighting gas prices. Robinson said in 1992 as a kick-off to the annual AIDS ride and Robinson's organization, the DCBA was founded one year ago as a bike ride in conjunction with AIDS Ride. "I think people are getting more involved and are more interested," said Mevers who has been home since childhood, but as an adult has been an active cyclist for many years. The District's black residents are also finding inspiration to ride, such as Victoria Robinson, President of the DC Bike Club.

Car Theft and Vandalism
Warrant Increased Security

Having a car in college is a popular status symbol among students. However, the number of break-ins and thefts on Howard’s campus has increased significantly over the past year. This has led to a rise in car thefts and vandalism incidents.

A quick walk around campus reveals that the parking lot is usually full with cars. In order for a student to park a car on campus, they need a permit, which can be obtained from the Parking Office. The permit costs $240 per year, but the recent suspension of Sen. Barack Obama for the wrong reasons has led to a decrease in demand for permits.

Our View: Students pay money to park in a safe and convenient location, so there should be increased security to ensure safety.

The security gate, which requires students to show proper ID and enter the parking lot, has been effective in reducing the number of unauthorized vehicles entering the campus. This is a step in the right direction, but more needs to be done to ensure the safety of students and their vehicles.

The security in the Plaza Towers is highly vulnerable to crime and vandalism. It is crucial that the university invests in proper security measures to protect the campus.

The increased security will not only improve the safety of students, but also increase the value of the cars parked on campus. This will be beneficial for those who are considering purchasing a new car.

Our View: The increased security will benefit the students and the university in the long run.

Perspective
It's Time to Live Up to Our Democratic Principles

As President George W. Bush's second term comes to an end, it is crucial that we live up to our democratic principles. Democracy is the foundation of our country and it is essential that we uphold it.

In order for democracy to work, the people must have a say in the decisions that affect their lives. This is why it is important to vote in elections and participate in the political process.

The recent suspension of Sen. Obama has caused many to question the role of the media in shaping public opinion. It is important that the media remains independent and does not influence the outcome of elections.

In conclusion, we must continue to live up to our democratic principles and work towards a better future for all Americans. The Hilltop encourages its readers to share their opinions with us and to participate in the political process.

For the DC Shorts Film Festival, a committee of film directors and festival volunteers reviewed the 50 film submissions received over a seven-month period from December to May. The festival board selected the final 16 films for the 10 week festival. The festival will feature shorts and full-length films ranging in style and genre, from traditional to family-oriented flicks to personal projects. We also have a film that is part of the "I Got That for Michael Phelps' da Brat project. The festival will open with a screening of the film that set the record for DC Shorts, "Burn" - Usain Bolt and Phelps.

DC Shorts Film Festival Showcases Locals

Adult

The festival is well known for its distinct style and atmosphere. It's a film festival that truly is unique in its way. The festival is run by the Washington Filmworks team, and they ensure that the films are of high quality and well received by the audience.

The majority of the films are about the DC area, and they are made by local filmmakers. The festival is sponsored by the DC government, and they provide funding to help support the festival. The films are screened in a variety of locations throughout the city, and they attract a diverse audience.

The festival also features a variety of short films, ranging in style and genre. They include films about music, art, and history, as well as films that are simply entertaining and fun to watch. The festival is a great opportunity to see the work of local filmmakers and to support the local film community.
