Vice Provost Chambers
Of Student Affairs Resigns

BY CHRISTAL BURTON Business and Technology Editor

Dr. Franklin O. Chambers, vice president of Student Affairs, has resigned from his position after the years of service.

"I wish Dr. Chambers well in his new endeavors at Coppin State University," said President O. Benford, Howard University Student Association president. "He made a tremendous mark here at Howard University and will undoubtedly find another opportunity to work with students and faculty at another institution." Benford said that he is very proud of the success that Chambers has had at Howard University and the development of the Howard community, interim director of Student Affairs, interim vice president at Coppin State University, and will provide another opportunity to work with young people and faculty at another university.

Chambers worked under the focus on the university's mission and the development of Howard University and its students. He has been an excellent leader.

Owen said that the focus of the university should be on keeping it a strong, vibrant university.

Chambers' resignation comes after the years of serving in his current position and a mentor to a number of students.

Bank of America Leads
Online Banking Institutions

BY CHRISTAL BURTON Business and Technology Editor

Bank of America, which was ranked as the top bank in 2007 by J.D. Power and Associates, will continue to be the top bank in the United States. The Bank of America reported a profit of $5.1 billion in the third quarter of 2008.

The Bank of America holds the most liquid deposit accounts in the country and has the largest customer base. The Bank of America has the most customers and the largest customer base. It also has the most customers and the largest customer base. It also has the most customers and the largest customer base.

Despite these bank mergers, Bank of America, which recently bought Bank of America-Merrill Lynch for $50 billion, will continue to be the largest online banking institution.

Interest rates were cut in six different countries Wednesday. In the United States, the central bank brought the rate down a half-point to 1.5 percent. According to the Federal Reserve, this action was taken because of the weak economy and the possibility of inflation.

Presidential candidates John McCain (R-Ariz.) and Sen. Barack Obama (D-Ill.) shook fists at each other at Tuesday's debate over who is to blame for the economic crisis.

Both candidates agreed that the newly implemented bailout plan should work properly.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average struggled over the last week, with one of its lowest closings Tuesday. The Dow dropped 500 points to 9447.

American International Group executives testified before the House Oversight Committee on Capitol Hill on Tuesday. Documents recovered by committee members showed that former executives including the most recent CEO Martin Sullivan, did not have their budgets and spending checked.

Car Accidents

By Beverly Morris

"My car accident was one of the easiest legal cases I've handled," say Merri Evans, a senior partner at a law firm who has represented many clients in car accidents. "People tend to be afraid of the legal process, but it's actually quite simple."

Car accidents happen every day

Even if you're careful on the road, a car accident can happen. Here are some steps to take if you're involved in a car accident:

1. Check for injuries. Make sure everyone involved is okay before doing anything else.
2. Call the police. Even if there doesn't appear to be any damage, it's important to have a police report.
3. Exchange information. Make sure to get the other driver's name, phone number, insurance information, and the name and phone number of any witnesses.
4. Take pictures. If you have a camera or smartphone, take pictures of the damage to both cars.
5. Report the accident to your insurance company. Even if you're not at fault, reporting the accident will help with your insurance claim.

Car accidents can happen to anyone

"I was involved in a car accident last year," says Maria Johnson. "I wasn't at fault, but it was still a stressful experience. But I'm glad I had a lawyer to help me through it."

Northern Nigeria Implements Program to Contain the Spread of HIV/AIDS

The Bachelors State, located in northern Nigeria, is attempting to prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS virus by putting HIV-positive citizens for marriage with a voluntary and institutional program. This may work like the most practical means of violating the spread of the disease, which initially addressed the need associated with the lack of prevention. Typically, each married couple will have a different aim of the disease, which may continue and further complicate the disease. Since the HIV/AIDS pandemic continued to worsen after Nigeria and other African countries, the program promised to be a new one for prevention. Research has also revealed that experimental programs can not be more than the usual ones.

Our View:

The United States should ordinances against Africa restrict the spread of HIV/AIDS.

HIV/AIDS is a virus that affects thousands of Americans. We are not careful, the predication is that Africa will also grace the United States. As a key in psychology and medical research, American scientists work hard and aim to control the consequences of the epidemic.
