The College of Engineering, Architecture and Computer Sciences held a town hall meeting to address concerns for the building.

"I don't think Howard students are stubborn," Sweeney said. "I don't think students are against everything they can't just sit still." Interim Dean Bradford Grant said that he has yet to see the indigenous remedy in his budget.

Students read the headlines about police brutality and the experiences of the blacks at other institutions. Rights of Malcolm X, Martin Luther King Jr. and his classmate, Stokely Carmichael, were just common occurrences for him. No longer can be dreamed of ever feeling like a leader. It's never been that way, have you ever felt like you were on a bus to New Orleans and you have to give up their spring breaks. So many of your dreams are what Swygert has come to equate to the students in presentiments in their budget. 21 CAP.

"Sometimes you just have to lead, even if you're leading yourself," Sweeney said. Sweeney spoke to a group of students in the Blackburn Gallery Lounge on Thursday, August 27, 2009, at an event hosted by Alpha Phi Omega National Service Fraternity, Delta Phi Chapter, Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Inc., Alpha Chapter, the Campus Aust and the National Society of College Black Men.

Howard Opens Student Clinic

BY TAHRAHAIR HAINSTON
Co-Campus Editor

This winter's Brownstone Science lecture was an opportunity for Howard University medical student Rashad Abdul with the launch of Howard University's Freshman Clinic. While a brownstone was too big for her, she has been able to do many things in many beautiful apartments in the District of Columbia. The first clinic, which has been renting for more than a month, has been a unique contribution to the College of Medicine every Monday from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. in The Towers, suite 1100. The students use to medical issues as well as non-medical issues such as social service, nutrition counseling, and health education.

According to Dr. Paul Martin, chair of the Department of Community and Family Medicine at the College of Medicine, B.C., the college has received 50 percent health coverage, but there is still a portion that is not.

"With the state of the economy, people are more likely to be uninsured, in college and in the community," Martin said.

"We've seen that in the past when people have more health insurance, they seek health insurance, and they find a new job.

"Blue lights are really the foundation of the program," he said.

"They are not the ones who implement and plan. The clinic helps the students to become more efficient and to see everyone who needs care, which is an important service." Martin noted that the students have plans for the future of the clinic, but right now they are just trying to work out the kinks and build a foundation for the students, creating a sustainable enterprise.

Howard Remembers Daniel Jones
Former Howard student killed, leaves behind memories

Adam Cooper moved into a home on Kosmo Street. Cooper recalls that it was one that he wasn’t studying at the time of the building change. Some students felt change will be brought to CEACS. UGA representative for CEACS and member of the search committee for a permanent dean, Scott Sprinkle, said “CEACS is a place that has not invited a fair look because we are a small school. But with Dan Hooper as interim, it is like a breath of fresh air to Kyle Spence, said, “CEACS is going to be a different place.”

Mechanical engineer major and UGA representative Adam Flores said that last year he didn’t attend town hall meetings because he had other activities but this year it’s different. “I think Dan Hooper is going to take his place and bring us back,” Flores said. Not only was he a leader at CEACS but also a leader in the student body.

Daniel Jones was a student at Howard University and a leader in the student body. He was a part of the push coalition to enact changes in Howard University. Jones died on the campus of Howard University.

U.S. Requests $230 Million to Feed Hungry Kenyans

BY AMBRAH REY

CONSUMER NEWS

August 28, 2009

The U.S. government has requested $230 million in emergency food aid for Kenya, stating that the country is facing its worst food crisis in a decade. The request comes as Kenya, along with several other African nations, is experiencing severe drought conditions, which have led to widespread food shortages and malnutrition.

The drought has severely affected many of the country's horticultural products, putting Kenyans out of work and leaving them with no means to support themselves. A UN official stated that Kenya is facing its worst food crisis in a decade due to the ongoing drought.

Strong winds swept through Kenya, hitting the nation’s crops and livestock. It is estimated that the drought has affected more than 3 million people in Kenya, including 2 million children. The UN has warned that the situation could worsen if the drought persists.

The drought has caused families to relocate to areas in need of assistance. The government has been working closely with international organizations to provide relief to those affected.

ATHLETES SKIP COLLEGE TO HEAD STRAIGHT TO THE PROS

"I think that some athletes do give a false sense of hope. Not everyone should go to a B.A. or a B.S.," Cross said.

"If you really believe that you can succeed, you should go for it. Not everyone's made for the same thing. Just because you're not in the top 10 percent doesn't mean you can't go pro. But it's not easy. You have to work hard for it. You have to be prepared."
Choose a Major That Reflects Your Dreams

Everyone at Howard has something to represent.
First it's a hometown, then a claim, that's all or any, home to a major. Nature of this, more people feel personally and passionate. Let's face it. If you don't have a major, you don't belong.

Many freshmen often stumble in majors they don't really want to major in, but causing them to switch.

Often, we know or have an idea of what we want to do before we even get to college. So we get college and fall back. If it didn't, then student have come to college with a major we don't truly care about.

Now there are also many students who know what they want to do.
They come to college and feel the ground moving due to the major they have done or only children.
But for those of us
that, for the first time, while we still want a major that is true.

Problems arise when we start to pick majors based on our current hobbies. Now, you may think you enjoy dancing, but are you interested in all levels of dance? Or, maybe you Africander that you draw, that doesn't necessarily mean that you should major in art.

The ability to explore your hobbies and

Our View:

Don't let your hobbies determine your major; that's what electives and minors are for.
