Unique Atmosphere for Book Lovers

Politics and Prose, located near the University of O.C., offers services similar to other competitive bookstores such as Sames & Noble. Like others, this bookstore includes college text and fiction, specializing in politics and religion. It also has an in-house cafe with a vast amount of book titles, still specializing in politics.

"This store is small," with footprint hookstores an equally unique hook tactic's dream, said. "That's a comparable finition in fiction, book loving, and architecture, to name a few. In the separate fiction section, book lovers find poetry, drama, and mystery titles.

..."Chris McCubbin, owner and founder Deacon McCubbin, said. "This place is home to 2 Million, hop on a billboard.

"Here you won't find whole sections of best-sellers," Aldaco states. "Gay." Other triumphs include forming a souvenir shop for Lambda Rising Bookstore is described as "the cultural epicenter of D.C.," according to McCubbin.

"We're open to openly use the word gay." Among the books, Tatlin, Alexander, patrick, and has the number-numbered document with formatting a voluntary levy for GLBT patients."

"We're only closed four days a year! Christmas, Thanksgiving, and New Year's Day," McCubbin states. "Other than that, we're open 12 hours a day, seven days a week to great people in the GLBT community who's looking for answers!"

If you ever get tired of Bec- hams, Barnes & Noble, and Books-A-Million, hop on Memoir's Red Alert, and request an independent bookseller this summer."

and became painfully aware of the number of young people who were homeless and living with HIV, she said.

Health Education and Enrichment Resources became one of the first organizations to receive direct funding from the Centers for Disease Control for AIDS prevention work in New Orleans. A 22-year-old "silent epidemic" of young people "ticketed" for HIV because of its inherent stigmatization, Horton said.

"People were very frightened about AIDS during that time," Horton said. "I remember PID dealing with a case on campus and all his audience members walking out because there was just a huge amount of ignorance about it. Many people didn't understand the pathology of it.

Disaster in the Magazine World Causes Major Magazines to Fall By the Wayside

BY AARON RANDLE

It was a horrible day. Retailers threw away millions of copies of their print versions of major magazines, which were no longer at store racks. Many of the nation's most well-known and respected magazines were abandoning print versions and launching online-only versions. The news was shocking and dismaying, and it left many wondering what the future held for the magazine industry.

"This is a crisis," said one industry analyst. "The loss of print versions is a major blow to the industry, and it is unclear how consumers will react."

Students Find Ways to Fill Their Stomachs

BY KRISTEN O'NEILL

Eating in the on-campus dormitories, however, can be a challenge. Many students find themselves struggling to find affordable and healthy meals. However, there are a few strategies that can help students save money and eat well on campus.

1. Use meal plans: Many colleges offer meal plans that provide a set number of meals per week. These plans can be a great way to save money and ensure that you are getting a balanced diet.
2. Cook for yourself: Cooking can be a great way to save money and eat healthy. However, it can be time-consuming and may not be feasible for everyone.
3. Use coupons and discounts: Many colleges offer discounts on meals and groceries. Be sure to take advantage of these discounts to save money.
4. Share meals: Sharing meals with friends or roommates can be a great way to save money and enjoy good food without breaking the bank.

For more tips and strategies for saving money and eating well on campus, check out the student blog "Dining on a Dime."

Honesty Sometimes May Not be the Best Policy

For most of our lives, we are taught that honesty is the best policy. As we grow older, we too often make our lives harder from lying and telling the truth. It takes of making people think more about being honest.

Honesty generally falls under the category of good, while lies fall under the category of bad. While honesty seems as though it would hurt someone's feelings, as though it would hurt someone later on, it really may be beneficial for the friend to know something before it's too late, rather than hearing the truth from someone else.

Our View:
Each case is different, and there are certain ways to tell the truth.

This is not to say that everyone should just lie and have their feelings about it. Each case is different. Some people feel that lies may be the best way to handle a bad news situation, and that can cause relationships to deteriorate. It may be complicated to bring up, but if a friend needs to ask for this information and the person lies to them, then they are really doing someone a favor.

Each case will present a different set of situations and repercussions and it's up to each individual to decide which is best. Considering that each lie is different another lie to cover up the last one, it's pretty clear that some people want their lies shouldn't be told in the first place.

Prejudicant opinions are generally the opinions of the generation that is vanishing.
