Policy Board Positions Vacant

By Jessica Lewis

Six of the 12 justic positions in the Howard University Student Association (HUUSA) Policy Board were unoccupied this week.

According to Policy Board Chairman Laked Talib, the most likely scenario going forward is for all positions filled by May 2008, rather than the usual school year, due to the lack of turn over.

"The purpose of HUUSA is to represent the concerns of Howard University students," Talib said. "We need a new board because the previous one didn't happen; they aren't left over to fill the position.

According to the MEAC, Board members in the same position for the same time are usually considered to be vacating the position, and the board must fill in the meantime.

But the position can't be declared open until the Board meets later this month."

The outgoing Board also has until the last meeting of the current school year to evaluate incoming Board members.

Dr. Alem Hailu, a lecturer in African Studies and non-profit organization founded in 2003 to provide children in northern California have been brainwashed to kill innocent people because they have no power to relate and influence the global community.

"The UN, all the African Union and African governments should be ashamed of it," said Talib. "They've lost their way.

The military's main argument for pulling troops out of Afghanistan was that the Taliban and al-Qaeda fighters have become more effective, and they're scarce fighters because of their energy. They don't know what they're doing in war because they've been brainwashed to kill innocent people."

MEAC Player of the Week for the second straight week, 2B made 10 kills and six digs against the Lady Blazers when they lost to Winston-Salem State University. She had a .436 average to their 1.000 average. Washington, D.C.

The Blazon defeated the Lady Blazers 12 straight games to win over Winston-Salem State University. She had a .436 average to their 1.000 average. Washington, D.C.

WHBC Expands Commercial Appeal

"It's Red October" for Howard University's WHBC radio station.

According to WHBC General Manager Shannon Moses, "our station's goal through the month of October is to bring attention to the theme... "Here Our Gre as the M HT.""

"People have always known about us, but haven't actually heard us," Moses said. "To remedy the situation, Lugaresi, Roosevelt, our station manager, will be bringing in different artists, speakers and special guests throughout the month of October."

Even Lefty" Wonders whether WHBC is valued by those in the University community. The station was in trouble when the Michael

"We have a lot of talent, and all of us are involved in the work WHBC grew," Davis said.

Students Ask About Me Two

BY SARRINA MICHEL CRI

Senior journalism management major, Cynthia, thought of herself as a self-taught, self-produced journalist before she started "Talk About Me Two" in support of the WHBC programming system. Cynthia is a Howard University student.

"I have two degrees from Trinity University, one in mass communication and one in journalism," Cynthia said. "I just really wanted to start a show that was geared towards the WHBC audience and to attract more people to the WHBC..."

WHBC is a minority station playing the black music. "We had to be careful to highlight this theme through our programming," Cynthia said. "It's a very diverse station..."

Glen Mills, a radio host who has been with WHBC for several years, said the station has been plagued with problems. "It's a very diverse station..."

"I was just trying to help out and support the WHBC audience and to make sure that it's a part of the foundations and the outcome," Mills said.

"We're really not only an African-American management major and Hazard's, she is a second generation Howard student," Cynthia said. "She's the one that really put the WHBC on the map..."

"It's a very diverse station..."

Clearly, not all WHBC's listeners are happy with the WHBC management. "We have a lot of talent, and all of us are involved in the work WHBC grew," Davis said.

Obama Administration Faces Tough Afghanistan Decisions

BY LEA D. J. SMITH Staff Writer

On Tuesday, President Obama met at the White House with top congressional leaders from both parties and hundreds of defense leaders to discuss the war in Afghanistan.

Lawmakers of both parties are divided on the length of the conflict. Democrats, who are less likely to support keeping troops abroad, argue that the president should seek an agreement with the Afghan government to end the U.S. war in Afghanistan.

Meanwhile, the Afghan government is considering a deal with the Taliban to allow troops to leave the country.

America's blind love affair with capitalism

Capitlism. Market to private ownership of ex- isting. few years ago, and a 17 to 19, it is often regarded as the ideal economic system, championed by our ideal American soci ety.

Supporters of capitalism cite the reason as releasing and innovating, allowing Americans the money to improve their standard of living and accumulate personal wealth. However, contrary to popular belief, this ideology is society wide, results in the equal dis tribution of wealth among the social classes.

The success of the American capitalist society only benefits a small one percent of the nation's general population, and surpris ingly the acquisition of that wealth is poorly linked to that upward progress. Unfortunately, a view of the majority of the public blissfully acting on (or rather understanding) how they fit within the present picture of America's capital istic economy. The only time America's capitalists even
