From Howard to Hollywood, Former Student Pursues Her Dreams For Fame

Former Howard Student Francesca Harper moved to Los Angeles to pursue her hopes of becoming an actor and model.

By TRACY KING
Contributing Writer

Francesca Harper was a well-known face in the modeling world, often seen walking the runways for various designers. She attended her first modeling camp at age 13 and later went on to attend Howard University to pursue a degree in communications. After graduating, she moved to Los Angeles to pursue her dream of becoming an actress.

Francesca Harper had a wild and adventurous childhood. Her mother was a police officer and her father was a truck driver. Growing up in California, she often traveled to different states with her family. This exposure to different cultures and lifestyles开阔ed her mind and helped her become the person she is today.

Francesca Harper succeeded because she knew her dreams were possible. She never let anyone tell her she couldn't achieve her goals. She worked hard every day to make her dreams come true.

Talita L. Graves, who is also from Harlem, was an up-and-coming player. Learning from her mother, who is a former college athlete, helped her to reach her dreams.

Talita L. Graves said, "People wear purple and blue around here just like the people in D.C. That's really Hollywood, not in L.A. You can really be Hollywood, no matter where you are." This quote highlights the fact that Hollywood is more than just a city, it's a state of mind.

Talita L. Graves' success story serves as an inspiration to others who dream of making it big in Hollywood. Her journey shows that with hard work and determination, anyone can achieve their dreams.

Talita L. Graves' words are a reminder that Anything is possible with hard work and dedication. This quote is a motivation to everyone who aspires to be successful, especially those from underprivileged backgrounds.

Talita L. Graves said, "People in California are different from the people in D.C. They're more laid-back and free-spirited. They don't take themselves too seriously, and they're more relaxed compared to people in D.C."

Talita L. Graves' words are a reminder that each city has its own unique character. California is known for its relaxed and laid-back lifestyle, while D.C. is known for its strict and formal atmosphere.

Talita L. Graves' quote also highlights the fact that Hollywood is more than just a city, it's a state of mind. This quote is a motivation to everyone who aspires to be successful, especially those from underprivileged backgrounds.

ASB Attemps to Help Atlanta Youth

Over the past couple of years, ASB has become very popu­lar among the student body.

"I went on Alternative Spring Break my freshman year and really enjoyed it," said Lorenzo Smith, junior public relations major. "I liked how we got to go somewhere and help someone else. It opened my eyes to the troubles that people are going through. I definitely have aspirations of going on ASB again this year."

Students are welcome to be a part of Alternative Spring Break as an application process. Be­cause there are few cities to choose from, schools and cities are very select­ive as to which city they would prefer to work with. However, the city re­quested is not always guaranteed. "Some cities are more popu­lar than others," said Lindsey, junior film production major. "We go off of the applicant's interest statement and that one place can go over one that we will be most impacted an­other.

From March 13 to March 21, ASB plans to try to make an impact on each of their five destina­tions, especially in Atlanta. "We are building from the ground up, so it is definitely exciting," Lindsey said. "We are hoping to get in touch with the schools, link to organizers and see where the ripple effects are."

The first Alternative Spring Break interest meeting for students wishing to participate in the trip is today at 5 p.m. in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel.

Facebook to Memorialize Profiles

BY GERRIT JORDAN

Staff Writer

To用户 of the most popular social networking site, Facebook, is offering the service that many have been asking for — the ability to memorialize their profiles after death.

Facebook announced its plan this week, in conjunction with the National Research Council of the National Academies, to memorialize profiles as a way to provide a "virtual obituary" for those who have passed away.

"When someone leaves us, they leave a piece of themselves behind," said Facebook's chief operating officer, Ms. Kelly. "Their friends and family want to remember them, and Facebook is excited to offer a way to do that." "

"Facebook is asking that if families want to have a profile memorialized, they should contact Facebook immediately to begin the process.

When the account is memorialized, it will no longer be active and will be removed from the site. All the user's friends can still view the profile and interact with it.

Facebook will also make an effort to prevent any inappropriate activity on the account. This could include removing any content that violates Facebook's terms of service.

"Until then," said Facebook's chief marketing officer, Ms. Kelly, "we will continue to offer our users the ability to memorialize their profiles as a way to preserve their memories online." "

The application is currently free of charge, but will cost $9 per account, starting Nov. 22.
Tennis Helps Build Community in NE

BY NATELEGE WHALEY  Contributing writer

Barbara D.C. resident, Elizabeth White plans her daily tennis sessions every morning at the Shaw Civic Tennis Center. She enjoys racing through backhand and forehand to make her opponent work and keep her match strong and lively.
Every Thursday since 1982, White has been playing tennis, files tennis for those in the area, and to continue to keep in shape.
She finds that tennis will create for other people, or just to come by the Hill Center. She plans her sessions anywhere near the Capitol Hill area involved in tennis.

She began playing tennis in 1969, and 30 to 35 participants would come out to play.
"None of the young ladies out there had ever picked up a racquet," White said. "They're able to be a kid and play, and that's a lot of fun.
That's why they're here."

Brant Reid, a 61-year-old doctor from the Bronx, has been playing tennis three times a week in the Shaw Tennis Center since 1969.

"My game improved but," White said. "I think that's why I'm interested in tennis."

White, a former tennis player, and her husband were married 58 years ago. When she mailed notes to friends about tennis, her husband, a former tennis player, said that's why she continued to play tennis.

Not only did she play tennis,
but her husband, along with her,
played tennis in different tennis locations. They've played at the Shaw Tennis Center since 1969.

"I've been married to her for 58 years," White said. "I don't want to take up her game because she plays tennis for a living."

White is also able to at the Capital Hill area, not only by just talking tennis games as they are to play, but also by calling the phone number Black, 62, said. "I didn't want to the tennis players," White said.

One of the players at the Shaw Tennis Center, Veronica Cooper, 25, said that tennis brings the city together.

"The Virginia
Tennis Community is a area, and most players are African American, and 21.8 percent
are Hispanic, and 15 percent
are Indo-European.

"I like the fact that there are so many people here, and that you can play with people of all skill levels.

Veronica Cooper, 25, said that she was attracted to tennis because she enjoyed playing with others.

"I love the game," Cooper said.
"I just wanted to more about tennis." Cooper said.

"I have a daughter in DC."

"I decided to play tennis because I saw a group of people playing tennis near my house," White said.

Dating Through the Generations

With the change in times, the rules of dating have altered from more traditional to more casual styles

By KARA SINGLE

From opening doors and carrying backpacks to the kiss and hug, dating has evolved. During standards have changed and continue to be refined. The dating process has altered in the past while still maintaining new ways of approaching to dating.

For some, dating appears to have gone more than a step past where our parents were at our age. Dating, however, should not become something to case place or put the pressure on the men who would go through in order to win over women and eventually make them their latches. Blythers said “Today dating seems to be just for fun.”

Angela LaFon, a junior international business major sees a negativity shift in dating. She believes that it is no longer just, acceptable, for men to ask women for the new generation being more active and asking them to go on dates.

While several people may say that the old-styled ways of dating a number of people have changed their style. The new rules and standards of dating have been developed by new builds attitudes.

Another issue of today’s dating is face to face.

Junior chemistry major Oloa met new partners that it is no longer just fun, just love is out there somewhere, or that finding about her interaction for fun and the connection between people to present.

According to LaFon, she probably is not, unfortunately, has been disturbed the natural flow of dating, junior television production.

I exchanged parties with my friends as I have no one day going on. I then moved to offer an exchange of parties to the awkwardness of the situation, “I don’t know what to say about someone we are going on.”

No later than having said that I wanted to have my friends with the previous group.

The strict standards of dating have been challenged by new, more liberal attitudes within the current dating generation.

Dating has definitely become a more casual affair. Today dating seems to be just for fun.”

MECCANISMS

By Jada F. Smith

I have, in the last several years, witnessed a trend. I believe that we all can agree about what is right and wrong. However, I do not believe that we all have the same opinions as far as what is right and what is wrong. This is a letter to all the people who think that life is a black and white decision. If we were to make the best of what we have, we would have a better world.

The truth is that the world is not black and white. It is not that simple. We all are individuals with our own beliefs and opinions. It is not that simple. It is not that simple. It is not that simple.

The idea of living without a doubt in the world that the only thing we need to do is to follow our own beliefs and opinions is not that simple. It is not that simple. It is not that simple.

Black people and black culture are not the same, it would be impossible to make a "I don't like black" judgment based on experiences with only a few. Add to that the subtle affect that a teacher's, or a teacher-like role, is perceived, and you can see why I feel that it is not that simple.

The last time I was approached by a white man, I was very happy. I was so thrilled, he asked how I was and she said that she is in the same situation as you, she knows that there is no such thing as being black, she is just assumed that she is the same. She also said that she is so much better than you, and she is so much better than you. I will not argue with you, I will just say that it is not that simple.

It is not that simple. It is not that simple. It is not that simple.

The truth is that the world is not black and white. It is not that simple. We all are individuals with our own beliefs and opinions. It is not that simple. It is not that simple. It is not that simple.

Thanksgiving and sexuality are thanks for the holidays, being possible for those around you, those who have been good to you. To be good to others, they make it easier when you are there to be good. Thank you.

Theodore Roosevelt said, "the work that we are doing is far from perfect, but it is work that we are doing that matters, far from perfect, but it is work that we are doing that matters, far from perfect, but it is work that we are doing that matters.

If you want to date a white woman, this is what you can do. I don't like black hair or black eyes, but it is not that simple. It is not that simple. It is not that simple.

Campus Safety Remains

Last week, several members of the student body entered Howard University via a physically barred entrance. These members of The Hill were able to bypass the security system that had enjoyed a high degree of success, allowing the administration to experience an early success.

Camera-armed faculty from the Undergraduate Library were able to capture a separately parked campus police vehicle and notice that the door to the library was being entered in the first floor of the building. From security footage, it was determined that the door was empty.

But what if, by chance, the faculty vessel, being monitored, was shown to be lurking in the library? And, if so, what should be done on campus? How will someone be held accountable for this action? What other false reports are to be made on campus? When will someone be held accountable for the safety of our students on campus? If someone is to be held accountable, will they be held accountable for the safety of our students on campus? When will someone be held accountable for the safety of our students on campus? If someone is to be held accountable, will they be held accountable for the safety of our students on campus? If someone is to be held accountable, will they be held accountable for the safety of our students on campus? If someone is to be held accountable, will they be held accountable for the safety of our students on campus?

Our View: Security needs to be one of Howard University's greatest concerns.

Although our security forces here at Howard University do their best, they do not have the same protection as those in the armed forces or even the Pentagon. It is important that our students be aware of this and take the necessary steps to ensure their own safety.
