

Dean J. E. Hawkins
Howard University
Washington, D.C.

Pvt. C.E. McLeod
HQ Btry, 592 AMA AW BN
APO-512- N.Y. N.Y.
5-4-44

Just a line Friend:

In the midst of this turmoil, strife and conflict of human wills and flesh nothing is more refreshing than writing you a few lines, each of which recalls a grand experience.

I am well and am faring likewise under the rigors and hardships of war. My chin is high and there is a smile on my face although within me there burns a fire kindled by the inequities of this world program of a war to end wars.

I have had some of the most cheering letters imaginable from those I love and live for the day when I shall be able to champion the causes for which their training has girded me. You are not the least among those.

Your words, those made public and those, man to man, ring in my ears and their echoes shall be heard by the man.

At the threshold of a most important point I want you to know that you have been an inspiration.

Will see you soon.

“Me”