Poems

Editorial Staff

Follow this and additional works at: http://dh.howard.edu/newdirections

Recommended Citation
Available at: http://dh.howard.edu/newdirections/vol6/iss3/9

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Howard @ Howard University. It has been accepted for inclusion in New Directions by an authorized administrator of Digital Howard @ Howard University. For more information, please contact lopez.matthews@howard.edu.
Not for Sale

They won't go away and I'm baffled as a clown,
'Cause my over-due-to-leave daughters are still around.
Folks say I'm blessed and should thank my lucky star.
Mothers cryin' in their beer—don't know where their kids are!

Well I try to be realistic and sing a song of joy,
But they're 22 and 23 and still haven't found the right boy.
I've prayed to all the saints—read Job 'til I'm blue, Tho' he suffered untold misery, he ain't been what I been thru.

They read my books and drink my favorite tea,
They cook in the same kitchen—food more 'natural' than me.
Now you know there's a limit, and my kitchen is my throne—
But since they've taken it over, I'm about to leave my home.

Can't get in the bathroom—they shower night and day
We won't install another one, it might encourage them to stay.
My friends can never get me on my phone—
But just last week they got their own!

Oh Lord above what else can I say,
'Cept—they're not for sale, but I'll give 'em away!

Annetta Elam Capdeville
Washington, D. C.
Realize Caravans
Realize caravans
running through the deserts
Imagine sand seas
Flowing across a continent
then see
Africans on Cottage Grove
Martin Luther King Avenues captured in junk SHAKING
Ever hear tell of Zimbabwe, Gold Axum, Khartoum?
contemplate
Dingala, Osei, Nat.
Then see
young knee grows AIM
less than broken down owls who can't see any farther than their nose while African caravans ride out to sand seas

Black as the Night
I am black as the night
That gives a quiet rest
To this day my sister bright
Has weared in her nest
I am black as the night
I am also blest
Like the stone in Mecca the sun's might Does not bum my chest
I am black as the night
I am most and the rest
I can be wrong I can be right
To mine vice and virtues I attest
I am black as the night
I am humble and honest
And my mystical insight
Seams for technological conquest
I am black as the night
Welcome my gentle guest
If you're Black, Brown, Yellow or White
Your company I request all.

Transcending
What are you?
I'm a bird in human form,
Large enough to be caged
And unfortunate enough to sing.
I wonder why they clipped my Beautifully colored, light and iridescent wings.
Where are you going?
Into a swan dive away from my haven,
My cage. I'm going to be just me and Listen to the wind, the sound of its Whispering music; all the time
Communicating revelations and wisdom of life.
What's your identity?
I was poetically named because of my Uniqueness
And just recently discovered myself Again for
I've progressed to be a little bird again.
Where are you now?
Escaping to a spiritual place inside of Myself,
Digging very deeply for the essence of Life
Which is within me.
Romelia Jones
Newark, N.J.

Weather Vain
I look beyond my environment
I view the world in a broader spectrum
The sun over my head is a mirage
A distant ray of light
Sweating dreams
My eyes gaze over the horizon
My mind transcends artificial Boundaries
Suddenly my hopes are cloudy
Rain was not in the forecast
I am soaking wet with reality.
Larry E. Cody
Washington, D.C.

Rich, Poor
Money has become a disease, that Is spreading around the world.
It is wanted by all grownups,
Little boys and girls.

Give some people money and they Will follow through thick and thin.
They think of it as a break,
Not knowing the trouble they're in.

If you're out to make money,
Money will instead make you.
It's the root of all evil today,
And it's out to get you.

Love, friendship, and peace
Are something money can't buy.
The wealthy often commit self-
Destruction, and that's the reason why.

So, if you're out to get rich and you don't Don't worry, you shouldn't have tried.

On the back of all our currency,
it says "In God We Trust"
This is who we need, not the money
That has bought us.

Always in our society, there will be
The need for the buck.
If all you want is money,
you are asking for bad luck.
Illey Brown
Howard University
The Nightwatchman

When the moon is a pearly clipper,
And the stars are the lights of the port,
The nightwatchman goes riding
On the dusty roads of the fort.
The path is old and untrodden,
Except by his horse’s hoofs,
The ravens have long since built
Their nests upon the moldy roofs,
One says when the moon is shining full,
The soldiers march once more,
And the nightwatchman plods along the wall,
To take his watch as before.
"'Tis nights like these," the watchman says,
As he keeps his watch on the port,
"That the ships sailed in along the shores
Of this now decrepit fort."
The watch is set, the wall secure,
The soldiers watch their guns.
The nightwatchman yet keeps his guard,
To sound when the enemy comes,
But as the clipper sinks, no bell is rung
The watchman takes his steed.
No enemy has yet approached
On the watchman’s monthly deed.

I Dream to Sing

I have two songs that I dream to sing
to perfection.
One to the world, and the people in it
Who are not satisfied.
Who know that there is much more and much better and are in search for it.
One to the world, and
the people in it
Who are satisfied seeing life as it seems Accepting what is as just that and expecting no more.

Spring

After the January thaw,
The ice and snow erases
Old thoughts of yesterday.
They pass away like ages.
All life rushes forth.

It’s Spring!

We cannot hear the clamor beneath the ground, the stirring round of the silent seed giving birth.

All this is in the hands of God.
Green growth burst free!
The daffodil, the budding of a tree, green grass all around.

Spring is within the ground.

Rachel Bratton
Washington, D. C.