Major Richard Robert Wright, Sr. Family Papers
and
National Freedom Day Collection
SCOPE NOTE

The papers of the Major R.R. Wright, Sr. Family comprise 1.5 linear ft. They consist of photographs, clippings, and reports of Major Wright's business ventures, including the Citizens and Southern Bank and Trust Company and the Haitian Coffee and Products Trading Company. Of particular interest is the documentation surrounding the 1939 Goodwill Flight to Haiti, as well as a recording titled "Tell Them We Are Rising," a biography of Major R.R. Wright, Sr.

Also included are photographs and various items documenting the achievements and contributions of several prominent members of his family, including his sons, Bishop R.R. Wright, Jr. and E.C. Wright. There are books in the collection written by and about the Wright family. Eighty-Seven Years behind the Black Curtain (1965) by R.R. Wright, Jr. is a compelling account of his life as a banker, Wilberforce University president, and official of the A.M.E. church.

The Records of the National Freedom Day Association comprise 10 linear ft. One of the largest components of the collection consists of proclamations received from more than 40 states and the city of Philadelphia over a period of 35 years. Printed programs from annual celebrations, spanning the period 1942 to 1993, represent another significant component. The photographs are the highlight of the collection. Spanning the years 1942 to 1986, they illustrate the various National Freedom Day activities, and serve to underline the significance of the day by the important personages who are depicted. For example, in 1945, some Tuskegee Airmen are pictured receiving an award; in 1949, Eleanor Roosevelt is pictured with E.C. Wright; Coretta Scott King is seen speaking at the 1957 event. There are also photos of Martin Luther King, Jr., Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., Jersey Joe Walcott, Joe Louis, Elder Lightfoot Michaux, Benjamin Mays, Father Divine, Julian Bond and many others.

The collection was donated in 1977 by E.C. Wright.

MAJOR RICHARD R. WRIGHT, SR.

Richard Robert Wright, Sr. [1855?-1947], educator, businessman and activist, was born a slave on a plantation near Dalton, Georgia. After the end of the Civil War, his mother, Harriet Wright, sent him to the Storrs School, a school for Blacks in Atlanta operated by the American Missionary Association. In 1876 he earned his B.A. from Atlanta University, and was the valedictorian of the university's first graduating class. He became a university trustee in 1887 and remained on the board until 1929.

After graduation he was selected principal of a local school and began his life-long work as a community organizer. He published a newspaper; founded and became the first president of the black Georgia State Teachers' Association; and became the first president of the Georgia State Industrial College for Colored Youth in Savannah (now Savannah State College) in 1891. Also active in politics, Wright was named delegate to the National Republican Convention for presidential elections eight times between 1880 and 1916. When McKinley was elected president in 1896, Wright was offered the position of minister to Liberia. He accepted the post of special paymaster and the rank of major in the U.S. Army during the Spanish-American War.

In 1921 he left Georgia State Industrial College and moved to Philadelphia, where he opened the Citizens and Southern Bank. He also founded and became president of the National Negro Bankers' Association. Citizens and Southern was one of the few banks that remained solvent during the Great Depression. Seeking to expand his business horizons, Wright in 1935 organized the Haitian Coffee and Products Trading Company. He helped obtain an appropriation of $250,000 for the Semi-Centennial Emancipation Exhibition in 1913, and lobbied persistently for the issuance of a Booker T. Washington postage stamp. This occurred in 1940, and was the first postage stamp to depict an African American.

Major R.R. Wright, Sr. died July 2, 1947, in Philadelphia.

NATIONAL FREEDOM DAY

National Freedom Day as conceived by Major Richard R. Wright, Sr. is an observance and celebration of the day, February 1, 1865, on which Abraham Lincoln signed the joint resolution adopted by the Senate and the House of Representatives that proposed the 13th Amendment to the Constitution. The 13th Amendment, ratified in December 1865, abolished slavery in all the states and territories of the U.S. (While the 1863 Emancipation Proclamation issued by President Lincoln had freed slaves in much of the U.S., it had not addressed slavery in the non-seceding states).

On February 1, 1941, Major Wright invited national and local leaders to meet in Philadelphia to propose a plan to set aside February 1st of each year to commemorate the signing of that seminal document. One year after his death in 1947, President Harry Truman signed the bill proclaiming February 1st as National Freedom Day. In subsequent years, 40 governors and all mayors of Philadelphia have issued proclamations designating February 1st as National Freedom Day in their respective jurisdictions. The purpose of the annual observance is to rededicate the nation to the ideal of freedom. In the words of Major R.R. Wright, Sr:

"The National Freedom Day Celebration will strive to promote goodwill and harmonious cooperation among all citizens of our land. Our eagerness for National Freedom should warrant equal opportunity to all citizens. The protagonists for human freedom and program as represented herein regard their duty to promote the cause of national citizenship, fair play, peace, and happiness as dynamic and not static. Our purpose is to constantly and forcibly bring to the attention of the nation this objective. We have organized to celebrate annually National Freedom Day, February 1, on the anniversary of the adoption of the 13th Amendment to our Constitution, guaranteeing the enjoyment of equal freedom to all men."
