Biographical/Historical note

James Nabrit, Jr. was born on September 7, 1900 to Gertrude Augusta West and Reverend James Nabrit, Sr. in Atlanta, Georgia. Nabrit attended Morehouse College and graduated in 1923. He then attended Northwestern University to earn a doctorate of law degree in 1927. In 1930, Nabrit relocated to Houston, Texas and built a successful law career. In 1936, Nabrit accepted a faculty position at the Howard University School of Law. While at the law school, he established timely civil right law curriculum for the university. Even as he served in multiple capacities at the school, Nabrit continued to fight the laws of segregation and injustice in the country. Nabrit served on many of the court cases through the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, including the Bolling v. Sharpe case (1952). Among the other cases he argued were Lane v. Wilson, (1939), concerning the registration of black voters in Oklahoma, and Terry v. Adams (1953), which focused on the right of African Americans to participate in primary elections in Texas. He argued successfully for both cases. Nabrit served as dean of Howard University School of Law from 1958-1960, eventually becoming president of Howard University in 1960-1969. Nabrit briefly stepped down from his presidency at Howard University to serve as Deputy Ambassador to the United Nations from 1965-1967, the first African American to hold the position. Nabrit returned to the university in 1967 amid student protests. Tensions ran high on campus when five faculty members and 18 students were dismissed for disruptive demonstrations. Nabrit, who was criticized by many students and alumni for his actions, resigned as president in 1969. Nabrit passed away on December 27, 1997. His son, James Nabrit III died March 23, 2013.

Scope and Contents note

The James Nabrit Jr. papers document Nabrit's career as a lawyer and legal scholar, civil rights activist, president of Howard University and Howard University School of Law, and term as Deputy Ambassador to the United Nations. Among the papers are artifacts, certificates, correspondence (both personal and professional), photographs, presidential files, scrapbooks, travel files, and writings.
